Trapped In Icy Pit

BULLETIN

DOLGEVILLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Rescuers early today abandoned for the night attempts to reach the cave explorer. Police say they are certain he is dead.

DOLGEVILLE, N.Y. (AP)—A 23-year-old cave explorer was trapped Saturday night under a shower of cold water in a 75-foot-deep pit, 1,000 feet inside a cave near this village east of Utica.

Herkimer County Sheriff Richard Folts said rescue workers, hindered by confined conditions, did not know if James Mitchell of Lynn, Mass., was still alive.

AFTER NOON

Mitchell and two companions, Hedy Miller, 21, a nurse from Boston, and Charles Bennett, also 21, of Groton on the Hudson and a graduate student at Harvard University, entered Schroeder's Cave on an exploring mission shortly after noon.

The cave, room-size near its entrance, narrows to a 12- to 16-inch-wide crawl space and the three had wormed their way back to the underground river.

Four from B.C. Hunt Texas Snakes

Rattling Good Time

By TOM JOHNSON

SWEETWATER, Tex. (AP)—Against the background of chugging oil wells and restless cattle, four Canadians learned Saturday how they catch live rattlesnakes on the rolling ranchlands of West Texas.

It didn't take the four British Columbians very long to catch on to the Texas method.

They captured a dozen Western diamond-back rattlers — one five feet long and as big around as a man's arm — in their first 15 minutes of hunting.

AMONG 300

The Kelowna residents, who drove 3,000 miles to participate in the Sweetwater rattlesnake roundup, were among some 300 hunters taking part.

By nightfall Saturday, the seventh annual running of the three-day event will have netted 3,000 to 4,000 rattlesnakes.

The reptiles are "milked" of their bright yellow venom, worth as much as $20 per gram for medical research, and hundreds are butchered for their skins and meat.

LIKE TOUGH HEN

"Rattlesnake meat 50 cents a plate," read signs at the Nolan County coliseum here where the snakes are brought after capture. The meat is cooked like fried chicken and tastes like a tough old hen.

The Canadians — Mr. and Mrs. Bill M. Baker, Jim Burbridge and Joan Critchley — were ready to begin hunting at dawn but a snowstorm delayed activities until about noon, when the sun melted away the snow.

Their guides, Don Akin and Ed Akin Jr., took the visitors to several dens on the family ranch near Sweetwater.

FIND DEN

The Akins demonstrated the West Texas method which goes like this:

First, a rocky ledge is located and a possible den found. Such a den usually will have a relatively small opening, perhaps two feet wide and several inches high.

A large mirror is used to reflect sunlight into the pitch-black cavern. If any of the hibernating snakes can be seen, the next phase begins.

A garden sprayer filled with ordinary gasoline is connected to long copper tubing which is poked deep into the den. Gasoline is thus sprayed into the den.

Budget Vote Topples Turkish Government

ANKARA (AP)—The 14-month-old government of Premier Ismet Inonu resigned Saturday night over failure of the Turkish parliament to pass its 1965 national budget.

Inonu, 81, handed in his resignation to President Cemal Gursel shortly after the National Assembly defeated a record budget by a vote of 225 to 195.

And Fires Home

Father Kills Five Kin, Self

PUYALLUP, Wash. (AP)—A father killed five members of his family, set fire to his home, then shot himself early Saturday, Pierce County coroner Larry Amundsen said.

Amundsen termed it manslaughter-suicide and said Melton Fisk, 43, was found dead near the burned home. A 12-gauge shotgun lay beneath him.

Amundsen said an autopsy performed on the body of Harley Fisk, 17, revealed three stab wounds. A charred pocket knife was discovered near the father's body.

SLEPT UPSTAIRS

The other victims were Fisk's wife, Mary, 38, their three children, Linda, 13, Carol, 5, Harley, 4, and Fisk's mother, Laura W. Fisk, 65. They had slept in upstairs bedrooms in the two-storey frame house near this berry-growing centre.

Fisk, who worked at a Tacoma chemical plant, reportedly had called in Friday evening and said he would not be at work because his daughter was sick.

County Detective Bill Regan said the family automobile, hooked onto a house trailer, was parked in the driveway.

The Fisks' telephone was stuffed under the vehicle's front seat. The car was locked.

Neighbors said Fisk and his family were going to begin a five-day vacation today.

A neighbor girl, Linnea Anderson, told police she was awakened about 4 a.m. by an explosion. Her mother, also roused by the blast, telephoned the community fire department.

'WEREN'T SCREAMS'

Linnea watched the Fisk home go up in flames from her bedroom 100 feet away.

"There weren't any screams at all," she said. "It was very quiet."

Volunteer firemen said the home, a converted cattle barn, was too far gone to save.

The five scorched bodies were found in the rubble. The coroner said autopsies on other bodies were nearly impossible.

Spectre of Korea

RED BORDER BUILDUP

From UPI, AP

TOKYO—China has threatened a Korea-style intervention in the Vietnamese war. It also appealed to Russia to close ranks in the struggle against "our common enemy—U.S. imperialism."

A Chinese government statement broadcast from Peking Saturday said the U.S. bombing raids on North Viet Nam gave the North Vietnamese the right to strike "counterblows" at South Viet Nam with Chinese support.

The Peking statement, broadcast in English, hinted that the Chinese might be willing to support North Viet Nam by advancing troops "wave upon wave" as they did in the Korean war in 1950.

Peking did not promise any imminent military action in its vague warning. But it was the strongest Chinese threat of possible intervention to date.

The statement, aimed at the United States, said: "You will become utterly helpless when the people resisting aggression, instead of being afraid of you, dare to fight, defy difficulties and advance wave upon wave.

"You have been taught a lesson on this score in the Korean war," the Peking declaration added. "Do you want to have the lesson repeated in Indochina?"

In another broadcast China pledged its people will stand by the Soviet people in combatting "U.S. imperialism" and called for world Communist unity to give "resolute support of the armed anti-U.S. struggles of the Vietnamese."

Tass reported that the Kremlin sent a similar "unity" message to Peking, but that it did not mention the United States as the foe.

The Soviet message, signed by Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev, President Anastas Mikoyan and Premier Alexei Kosygin, spoke only of "aggressive imperialist quarters."

UNITY TOASTED

In Communist North Korea, Premier Kosygin boasted that Communist forces are strong enough to stop "the aggression in Viet Nam" and predicted "victory will be ours." He toasted unity in the Communist world.

The Chinese pledge to remain at the side of the "great Soviet people" was signed by Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, President Liu Shaochi, Premier Chou En-lai and Marshal Chu Teh.

FINAL VICTORY

It was sent to Moscow in connection with the 15th anniversary of the Chinese-Soviet treaty of friendship, alliance and mutual assistance.

The Soviet Union, China and all other Communist countries must unite to fight against "U.S.-led imperialism until final victory is won," the Chinese message said.

"This is the unshirkable international duty of each and every Socialist country."

DISPUTE IGNORED

The text of the 550-word message was broadcast in Chinese by Radio Peking.

Although it comes at a time when the Kremlin and Peking are at odds over how to spread Communism throughout the world, there was no mention of this ideological dispute in the broadcast.

Viet Nam Protest Jails Five

NEW YORK (AP) — Five persons were arrested Saturday at a series of protest demonstrations over Viet Nam at the United Nations.

Three girls and a young man belonging to a group called Youth Against War and Fascism, were taken into custody when they tried to break through police lines that confined their demonstration to the UN plaza.

About 20 minutes later, another youth scuffled with police and was arrested when he failed to obey orders to keep moving.

The demonstrators had been parading back and forth along the plaza inside lines of wooden barricades set up by police.

Earlier, a long line of demonstrators sponsored by the Women's Strike for Peace marched for two hours without incident after holding an hour-long peace vigil in the plaza.

The marchers delivered letters to the United States, Soviet, British and French missions to the U.N.

The letters were signed by Mrs. Dagmar Wilson, founder of the Women's Strike for Peace.

They said in part:

"The grave situation in Viet Nam threatens the peace of the entire world . . . We condemn and fear the recent events of this week, which substitute military force for constructive diplomatic policy."

Other demonstrations were carried on outside New York. Rival groups of about 40 members each picketed at the University of Cincinnati, in Ohio.

One called itself Students Against the War in Viet Nam, while the others is Students for a Strong Stand.

LONDON (AP) — The Sunday Times reports that Red Chinese troops have been observed crossing into North Viet Nam and that big concentrations of Chinese forces are massing near the North Viet Nam-China border.

The reports were contained in a front-page story compiled from information filed by two of the paper's correspondents—Richard Hughes in Hong Kong and an unnamed special correspondent in Saigon.

"The spectre of another Korea-style struggle with Communist China suddenly appeared over Southeast Asia Saturday as reports began to come in that units of the Chinese People's Liberation army had begun moving into the satellite state of North Viet Nam," the article said.

The story reported only two battalions of troops had been sighted actually moving into North Viet Nam. But the article said:

"Reports from Hong Kong of U.S. air reconnaissance over South China pay particular attention to Nanning on the line to Hanoi, capital of North Viet Nam. Military rolling stock, including freight trucks and carriages, is said to be concentrated at Nanning in considerable numbers."

The article said since the Tonkin Gulf incident six months ago, Nanning had become the headquarters for a force of some 200,000 troops.

The two battalions entering North Viet Nam were said to have been seen on the highway running parallel with the Nanning-Hanoi railrond.

The Deputy

Anti-Pope Play Halted in Rome

ROME (AP) — Police marched into a theatre Saturday night and stopped the final dress rehearsal of Rolf Hochhuth's play, The Deputy.

The play, which has not yet been staged in Italy, was to have had its premiere before members of a private theatre club today.

The theatre hired by the club is in the basement of a disused 12th-century church in central Rome across the river from Vatican City.

When the police marched in and an officer gave the order for the theatre to be cleared, the actors chanted "liberty, liberty" and clapped their hands rhythmically.

Some of the audience joined in.

Pope Paul has several times attacked accusations against Pope Pius XII in the play.

It says Pope Pius failed to speak out against Nazi persecution of the Jews.

'Supplied Planes'

Uganda Blames U.S. in Bombing

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP)—Prime Minister Milton Obote charged Saturday Congolese planes supplied by the United States bombed two villages in Uganda.

He said Uganda's ambassador in Washington was ordered to protest to the state department.

SOLDIER INJURED

An official statement said the villages of Paidha and Goli were bombed and one Ugandan soldier injured.

The statement claimed the planes were American-supplied and piloted by "American citizens, Cuban refugees or other mercenaries."

NO CONTROL

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said:

"Our embassy has pointed out to the Ugandan Foreign Ministry that the United States has no combat aircraft in the Congo and that the U.S.-manufactured airplanes provided to the Congolese government are not under our operational control.

"Accordingly we advised the Uganda government to express its concern directly to the Congolese government in Leopoldville."

Israelis Shoot Infiltrators

JERUSALEM, Israel (UPI) — An Israeli patrol shot dead two Arab infiltrators Friday night south of the Gaza Strip, an army spokesman said Saturday.

He said the patrol seized a sub-machine gun and ammunition.

No further details were immediately available.

Fog Slows Hunt For Plane

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP)—Poor visibility is hampering a search for a plane missing over Washington state with four persons aboard, including a Canadian couple.

Only one search plane was out Saturday, looking for the missing aircraft, which was on a flight from Olympia, Wash., to Las Vegas. Aboard were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henry of Vancouver and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Barry of Olympia.

Clearer skies in the area of Yakima today are expected to bring out more search planes.

Det. Anderson will have served 21 years with the force this March.

Mexico City-Vancouver

Arrests, Police Raids Cut Heroin Supply

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Saturday they believe they have smashed the main underground supply line bringing brown heroin here from Mexico City.

In an action that followed the arrest of a Vancouver man in the United States Friday, police made two lightning raids, seized a 39-foot power cruiser in suburban North Vancouver and arrested two men.

They said the cruiser contained equipment for "capping up" narcotics.

PRICE TO JUMP

Narcotics squad officers said they expect that as a result of the raid the price of heroin on the Vancouver illicit market will jump to $20 a cap from $15 — generally enough for one or two fixes.

Police said heroin worth $100,000 on the underworld market was seized here and in California following the arrest of Roy Joseph Travis, 26, of Vancouver at the airport of Yuba City, Calif., Friday.

Travis has been charged with possession of 18 ounces of heroin.

OWNED CRUISER

Police here said that Travis is listed as the owner of the old, well-kept cruiser they seized shortly after his arrest. They said the cruiser is valued at $10,000.

Nicholas Alexander Karpowish, 28, was arrested in a Vancouver home nad later charged with possession of narcotics. Douglas Kelly, 28, arrested in another home, was charged with possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking.

Travis was arrested by Sutter County sheriff's officers when he returned to his light plane at Yuba City. Heroin was found under the dashboard of the plane, the officers said.

TIP FROM U.S.

Laverne Thorpe of the sheriff's office said in a telephone interview Saturday the drugs are believed to have been purchased for $7,400 in Mexico.

Travis has been lodged in federal cells at Sacramento, Calif. It is reported that police action here followed a tip from federal narcotic agents in Sacramento.

Information

Named secondary duty information officer at Canadian Services College, Royal Roads, is Lieut. Mark Crofton, RCN, staff adjutant at the college for the past 18 months.

Your Good Health

Proper Dosage of Aspirin Depends on Child's Weight

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there danger in giving children too many baby aspirins when they have a cold? What would be an average daily dose for children under five?—MRS. D. G.

Yes, too much can be given, but I don't want to set down any fixed amount as being safe. The dosage of aspirin (and of most drugs) depends at least in part on the weight of the child, as well as on whether it is being given for only one day, or for several days in a row. It also depends upon what (if any) other medication is being given. The only safe answer I can give is for you to have your own doctor establish the proper dose, and then stay within it.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes the eyes to feel tired and become bloodshot, especially after doing close work or watching TV, even though there is nothing wrong with them? Can lack of sleep cause it?—J. A. S.

Are you sure you have nothing wrong with your eyes? A defect in vision and need for glasses can do exactly what you describe—prolonged use of the eyes for close work brings fatigue.

Other possibilities are smoky or dusty atmosphere, insufficient illumination, excessively bright light, wind. Yes, lack of sleep can cause eye fatigue and be a factor in bloodshot eyes.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have constant gas attacks, some so severe that I must stay in bed. They draw me up double. What could cause this? Would you advise seeing a physician?—A. W.

Most certainly consult a doctor. You have severe abdominal pain. Whether this is caused by gas is doubtful. There is a long list of possible causes of such pain. "Gas attacks" is a term used too often for disorders that are not caused by gas—but can and should be corrected.

Dear Dr. Molner: My sister was very sick when she first got pregnant and to top it off her husband painted the apartment when she was three months along. The smell was so strong it lasted almost a week. Will this odor affect her baby in any way?—MRS. W.

I see no reason why it will harm the baby. Strong odors can be upsetting to anyone who is ill, or to pregnant women, and I can't say that her husband picked the most tactful time to do that painting.

NOTE TO MRS. L. H.: Wetting the bed is one thing; not being able to wait during a five-mile ride to the shopping centre is another. Rather than considering this a "bed-wetting problem," I suggest that you arrange to have the child examined by a specialist. There may be a kidney or a bladder condition that should be corrected, instead of merely trying to "train" the child.

Walter Calwell Dies

He Was Hero to Children

A man who was the hero of Victoria's children during the early 1900s when he drove the city's horse-drawn police patrol wagon and fire wagon died Saturday at 80 years of age.

Walter Calwell, 1970 Fort Street, served 36 years with the city police force which he joined May 10, 1909. He retired as an inspector at 60 years of age in 1945 after spending 39 years as a city employee. He served the first three years with the fire department under Chief Thomas Watson.

DASHING GREYS

He will be remembered by many adult Victorians as the driver of the police department's dashing team of patrol-wagon greys.

Later he drove the department's first automobile—a Cadillac patrol wagon.

As a detective in the then wide-open Victoria, the policeman was shot in the arm in a 1932 chase of two drugstore bandits.

The thugs were later caught on the Malahat and sent to prison.

THREE CHILDREN

The native Victorian is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Doreen Gilbert and Mrs. Eleanor Entwhistle, both of Victoria; one son, Walter William Calwell, Victoria; four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services will be held at noon Tuesday at McCall Brothers funeral home. Rev. R. J. D. Morris will officiate and burial will be in Royal Oak Burial Park.

Icy Pit Holds Spelunker

almost 1,000 feet from the entrance.

Then, Bennett and Miss Miller told Folts, they had set up a tripod and Mitchell had attached a nylon line around his chest and lowered himself into the pit, apparently formed by the action of the underground waterfall.

SOAKED IN DESCENT

The water from the underground stream pours into the pit and Mitchell was soaked as he descended. After reaching the bottom he pulled himself back up to within 15 feet of the top but was unable to continue his climb.

"My hands are getting numb," Miss Miller said Mitchell told them.

Miss Miller and Bennett were unable to raise him because of his weight, about 185 pounds, and the extreme narrowness of the cave.

When Mitchell failed to respond, Bennett worked his way to the front of the cave and went to a farmhouse to call for aid.

SLIPPED BACK

The rescue workers met Miss Miller on the way out of the narrow crawl space. She said Mitchell had apparently slipped back to the bottom of the pit.

Miss Miller and Bennett were taken to hospital suffering from exposure.

Schroeder's Cave, which has never been thoroughly explored, was discovered about 25 years ago.

Snakes Alive!

and the snakes start their terrifying buzzing and begin crawling out the opening.

The snakes' natural sluggishness from hibernation is increased by the stupefying fumes of the gasoline and they are easily pinioned with hooks and lifted into a box or barrel.

"The gasoline irritates them and will kill them if they don't get out of the den," said Don Akin, who has captured hundreds of the poisonous reptiles.

He explained that if the weather is too cold the snakes will die in the den from the fumes rather than venture into the open.

Mrs. Baker lifted several of the writhing diamond-backs into a receptacle and commented, "this is a bit easier than the way we do it in Canada."

The Bakers, Burbridge and Miss Critchley said they had captured about 1,000 Pacific rattlers in the last four years in Canada.

"But we wait until warm weather entices them out onto rocks," said Burbridge. "Then we take a forked stick and a rope snare and take them in.

"But it's more dangerous that way because they are already out of the den and more alert."

The thousands of snakes are dumped into a 16-foot-square pit at the coliseum.

Occasionally a rattler is taken from the pit to the butchering area where its head is cut off with a hatchet. It is then hung by the tail, skinned, and washed. The pink glistening carcass next goes to a long, wooden chopping block where a cook cuts it into four-inch sections. These sections are fried several minutes in hot grease and served to the public.

Precise Red Raids Impress Americans

By FRED HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP)—One of the most significant and ominous aspects of Communist guerrilla attacks on U.S. forces in South Viet Nam last week was the military professionalism of these operations, officials here say.

Officers returning from the scene and others studying reports obviously were impressed with the co-ordination and execution of the attacks at Pleiku and Qui Nhon, and with the evidence of careful planning and preparation.

HARD-CORE REGULARS

They suggested that the attacks probably were mounted by hard-core regulars. It is estimated that the Viet Cong have about 29,000 to 35,000 men in this category. More than half of them are trained North Vietnamese soldiers who have infiltrated into South Viet Nam.

Some Americans may still think of the Red guerrillas as barefoot peasants launching random terrorisms with makeshift weapons. U.S. military experts look at them in a different light.

MORTAR ATTACK

In the wake of the surprise assault in the Pleiku area a week ago, officers came back to the Pentagon with accounts of virtually simultaneous mortar barrages on a barracks compound and airfield about four miles apart.

They said Viet Cong soldiers cut through barbed wire at about the same time the mortars began firing, opening up with automatic weapons and placing demolition charges against parked airplanes and helicopters in a carefully-timed, multi-pronged attack.

FORWARD OBSERVER

The mortar marksmanship showed there had been capable reconnaissance. Furthermore, U.S officers said there were signs that the Communists might have had a forward observer, equipped with a radio, to tell the mortar men how to adjust their fire.

Military officers said the Viet Cong probably built up their strike force over a period of several nights, moving a few men at a time, hiding the mortars and ammunition.

"The men probably intermingled with people in the area and on pre-arranged signal assembled, set up their mortars and started firing," said one American.

STRIKE AGAIN

Four days later, the Communists hit again after dark and blew up a U.S. barracks at Qui Nhon.

The Viet Cong moved into position around the target and, while riflemen fired volleys into the barracks, other Viet Cong ran at the building with explosives from all sides.

Shortly before, Communist soldiers had hit a power station with explosives and knocked out the area's light source.

OUTPOST HIT

Meanwhile, other bands were attacking a South Vietnamese army outpost on the edge of town and a police station.

And while rescuers were digging into the wreckage of the barracks, the Communists attacked from the sea in a fleet estimated at 50 junks. The junks were fought off by American rocket-firing helicopters.

Soviet Aid Technical

HONG KONG (Reuters) — The Soviet Union has agreed to give North Viet Nam technical assistance for industrial and agricultural projects, the North Vietnamese news agency said Saturday.

It made no mention of any military aid.

Soviets Fear War Inevitable If U.S. Continues Air Raids

MOSCOW (AP) — Continued American air raids on North Viet Nam could draw the Soviet Union into at least a limited war with the United States, says a neutral diplomat who has had access to Soviet thinking at high level.

The diplomat said Friday he had found Soviet leaders both angry and worried that the Viet Nam situation might explode into something bigger than a limited war.

WON'T BACK AWAY

The Russians told the diplomat they do not want a Vietnamese showdown with the Americans. But they indicated they have no intention of backing away from commitments to help protect North Viet Nam because of this danger.

The diplomat, who declined to be identified, had unusual opportunities to talk with top Soviet leaders after the American air raids Sunday and Monday and with a high official after Thursday's raids.

The diplomat quoted the official as saying the first two raids left some hope here that the situation would calm down as it did after the Tonkin Gulf incidents last summer.

STRONG ACTION

But Thursday's raids and talk in Washington of continued raiding created a feeling in Kremlin circles that the Soviet Union is being forced to take strong action, the diplomat reported.

He quoted a Soviet leader as saying:

"What does the United States think it is doing? They know we are going to help North Viet Nam. Do they want war?"

China wants the Soviet Union and the U.S. to fight, but Moscow does not want war, the leader was further quoted.

Americans, Tribesmen Stand Alone to Fight

SAIGON (AP)—All but five mountain tribesmen and four American advisers in a 140-man South Vietnamese company deserted on call of Communist guerrillas in a fight for a hill last Wednesday. Three Americans were killed, reliable U.S. military sources said today.

They said the fourth U.S. adviser, identified as James H. McLean of Los Angeles, is believed to have been captured.

The U.S. informants said the Communists approached the hill at Duc Phong, 85 miles northeast of Saigon, with loudspeakers.

"We only want to kill the Americans," the Communists called out. "All the rest can go free if they leave their weapons behind."

Before dawn the Viet Cong launched a final assault on the well-fortified camp atop the hill.

"Crush America"

Communist Protests Spread Far Afield

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Communist-led mob shouting "crush America" marched on the U.S. Embassy in Jakarta, Indonesia, Saturday as protests against U.S. air strikes in North Viet Nam spread to other parts of the world, including Paris, Budapest and San Francisco.

Nearly 1,000 Communist-led students in Budapest staged a violent anti-U.S. demonstration at the U.S. Legation. Slogan-shouting Hungarian, African and Asian students smashed front windows and some broke into the legation building basement.

Legation officials guarded the locked entrance to the building while the crowd outside yelled "down with American aggressors" and hurled stones at the legation.

No one was injured, but damage caused inside the building was considerable, a spokesman said.

The intruders were prevented by heavy steel doors from reaching the front wing of the building where the legation offices are housed.

This protected part of the building also contains the third-floor apartment of Jozeph Cardinal Mindszenty, who has been living in the sanctuary of the U.S. Legation since the collapse of the 1956 anti-Soviet revolution.

About 500 members of the Communist party youth wing marched in front of the embassy in Jakarta for about a half hour. They dispersed after five of them presented a petition to a staff member.

NO VIOLENCE

Riot police armed with rifles and wearing steel helmets surrounded the embassy building. There was no violence and no damage was done.

Paris police got rough with about 800 youths who heeded a Communist call to demonstrate in front of the U.S. Embassy. They drove the demonstrators away from the embassy building, then grappled with some of them in a running fight along the Seine.

Witnesses said at least 10 policemen suffered cuts and bruises when struck by stones, beer bottles and other missiles.

TAR BOMBS

About 100 Communist youths tar-bombed the walls of the First National Bank of Boston in Buenos Aires, Argentina. There was no major violence.

Communists also demonstrated against the U.S. in Cordoba, Argentina; in Oslo, Vienna, Prague and Tokyo.

How It Happened in Korea

LONDON (Reuters) — In October, 1950, as victorious United Nations armies swept northward through Korea, massive Chinese units crossed the Yalu River and the Korean conflict, which seemed almost over, began in earnest.

The entry of Chinese "volunteers" changed the course of the war and, in the end, the course of history in Southeast Asia.

The exact number of Chinese who fought in Korea is not known, although South Korean officials placed the figure at 2,000,000.

The U.S. defence department estimated 900,000 Chinese "volunteers" were killed or wounded during the war.

Until China's entry, the Korean conflict seemed over four months after the North Koreans crossed the 38th parallel and struck south.

After suffering an initial setback, UN forces, largely U.S. and South Korean, launched a strong counterattack and by October had routed the North Korean Army.

As the allies poised near the Yalu River, the border between North Korea and China, American troops made plans to be home by Christmas. The UN "police action" had been effective and decisive.

Then, in late October as the bleak Korean winter began to fall, came the first encounter with Chinese units.

The Chinese at first contented themselves with limited action, but on Nov. 26 and 27 at least 14 of their divisions began an all-out attack on the UN line.

The UN troops, falling back before the onslaught, were swept out of North Korea. By January, 1951, the Communists had captured the South Korean capital of Seoul.

A counter-offensive threw the Chinese back to the 38th parallel, border of North and South Korea, where the battle raged back and forth for the next two years.

A ceasefire in July, 1953, ended the conflict. The Chinese "volunteers" were gradually withdrawn from North Korea, with the final group returning home in 1958.

A Public Debt

ONTARIO lawyers have been taking an interest in the possibility of providing for compensation by the state for victims of criminal acts, perhaps along the lines of New Zealand's recently adopted Criminal Injuries Compensation Act. The Ottawa Journal sees as one advantage of such legislation the removal of a deterrent to helping police or anyone else being assaulted and in need of aid.

"As things stand in Canada now life insurance would be paid the family of a citizen killed assisting the police. But if he were only injured would his accident insurance policy pay his expenses? There is some doubt," the Journal says, quoting the case of a claim denied under different circumstances because the insured man had deliberately courted the risk. (Doubtful or not, not everyone by any means has accident insurance, it must be noted.)

"The man who dashes into an affray to assist the law is also courting risk," the Journal continues, "and the community owes him more than leaving him to charity if he suffers disabling injury and medical expenses . . . Legislation to ensure compensation would not stop some passing by on the other side but it would remove an excuse too easily produced after the event."

While most citizens probably will entirely agree with this suggestion, it might be worth while to wonder about the extension of the principle. The community also owes more than gratitude and commendation to volunteers who risk the forces of nature in rescue efforts and suffer as a consequence. This might easily have been the case, for gripping example, among the 30 or so courageous citizens of Hope and Princeton who helped official workers search for victims of the great landslide.

One member of the provincial legislature has suggested that provision for compensation in such instances should be made under the Workmen's Compensation Act. Whether this is the appropriate vehicle is debatable. But certainly the province if not the country could afford to have both forms of protection —from loss due to criminal acts and due to accident— for persons who do their duty or more than their duty and are harmed as a result.

Challenge

ON FEBRUARY 4 Dr. Joseph Boakye Danquah of Ghana, one of Africa's great men, died.

A lawyer of international fame, a scholar and philosopher whose world-wide achievements brought honor to the name of his homeland, a leading figure in Ghana's fight for independence and a champion of liberty and the rights of man, Dr. Danquah's life ended not amid the sorrowful tributes of his nation, but in prison where he had been thrown by the Ghanaian government because, as leader of the Opposition, he had dared speak out against his country's dictator-president, Dr. Nkrumah.

The Manchester Guardian describes Dr. Danquah's death as a "tragic event" and comments in this fashion:

"It would not be surprising if Dr. Danquah's death soured relations between Africa and the well-disposed Western countries . . . Dr. Danquah's own life was a fine example of sacrifice and courage. The supremacy of a dictator ought to occasion more sympathy for his subjects, not less.

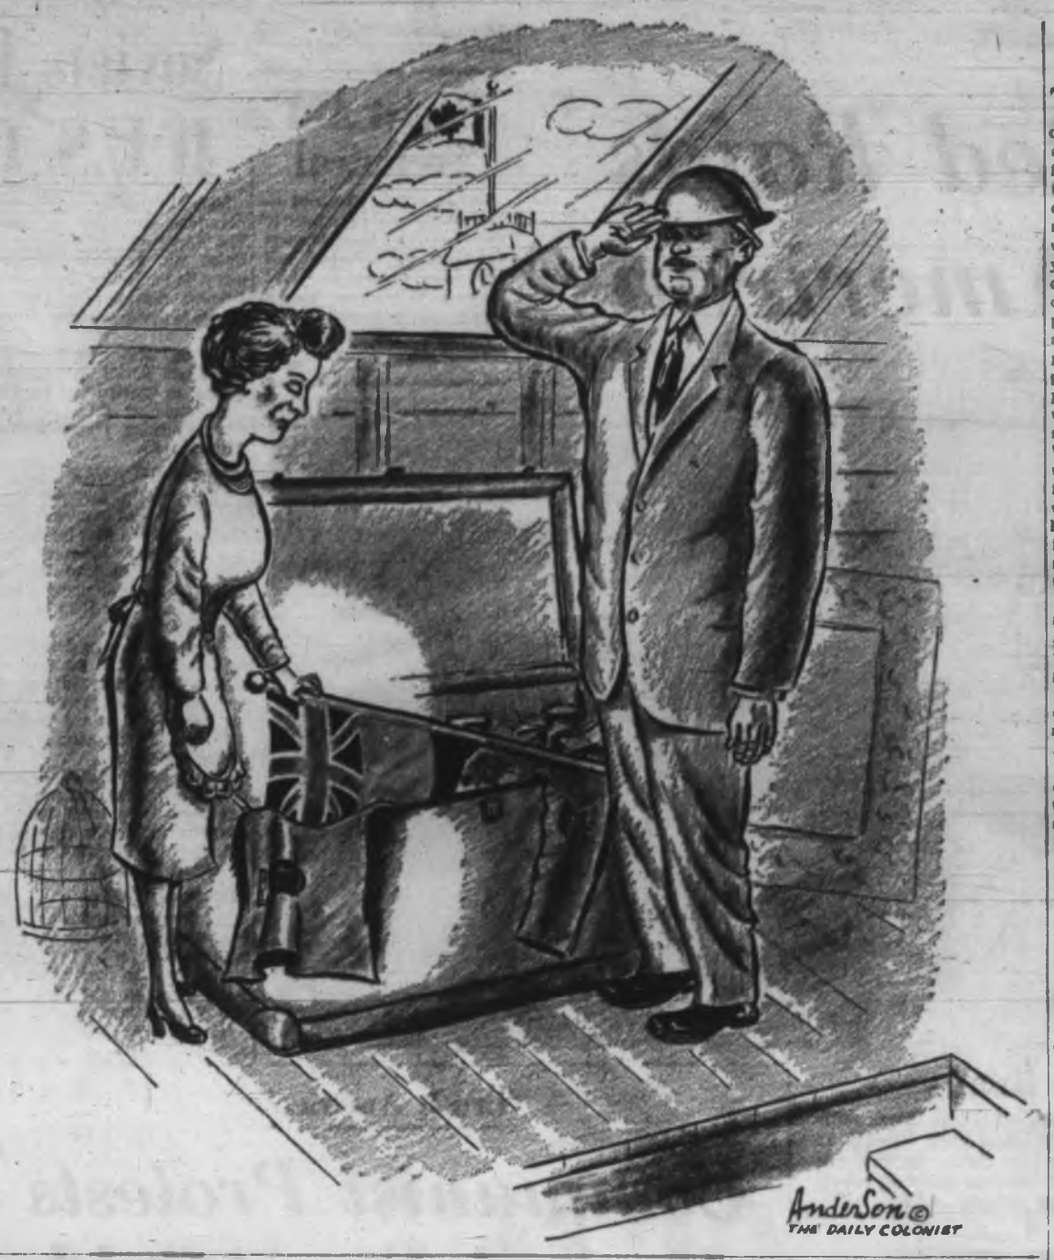

"Some brave person present at the next Commonwealth Conference may wish to question whether a man who allows his opponent to die untried in prison, is fit to be a member."

It is to be hoped that the sentiment expressed by the Guardian will be echoed throughout the Commonwealth and heard particularly loud and clear among all those African nations who claim to value their membership within it.

Reducing Delinquency

A REMARKABLE decrease of 36 per cent in juvenile delinquency in Vancouver, as between January of 1964 and the first month of 1965, is attributed in part by Police Chief Ralph Booth to a new approach to the problem by his department. Officers have been explaining the work of the police to students in Grades 11 and 12, and are hoping that this program will be extended.

It would be difficult to believe that such extraordinary results could be achieved entirely by the process of appealing directly and personally to the friendliness and intelligence of youngsters in their middle and late 'teens. But if even a fraction of the decrease in juvenile misbehavior is the product of this system, other communities could well afford to emulate it. School boards and police commissions should watch Vancouver's progress in this respect with keen interest.

Unpopular Opinions

Death for Capital Murder

By W. A. FERGUSON

UNPOPULAR opinions in the past, though only held by an insignificant minority have so often turned out to be correct and been generally accepted, that it may be of interest to examine one or two of today's more unusual opinions.

One such, is the view that the death penalty for capital murder should be retained: it is quite opposed to most prevailing sentiment. We are assured that all "enlightened" modern opinion abhors capital punishment as a relic of barbarism. Most of the leaders of the churches and those of liberal thought—not often in alliance—agree in condemning it. Apart from the present method of execution which is for many reasons objectionable, and granted that every possible care is exercised before condemning any man to death—what is the real objection to capital punishment?

The Canadian government is reported to intend submitting the question to the Houses of Parliament. It seems altogether likely that a free vote will result, as it did lately in the British House of Commons, in the approval for abolition by a large majority. Yet, many sensible and considerate people in Canada — as well as in Great Britain—do not agree that it is wise or right.

Here are some of the reasons most commonly urged for abolition:

1. The whole process from the criminal court to the scaffold is a relic of barbarism and hateful to almost everyone of those whose duty it is to carry it out. This is reason against the method — by hanging — not against the death penalty itself. The method should be altered. The Greeks had a more civilised procedure: many would say that even the Russian method is better than ours.

2. Some quote the Bible commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," forgetting that the same Scripture says also, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed."

3. Others argue simply that such savage punishment cannot be tolerated in a Christian country. Does anyone seriously contend that this is still a Christian nation? Except within the limited sphere of the churches' influence almost every Christian principle whether of belief or morals is openly neglected or defied from belief in a personal God to respect for what were supposed to be his laws. The most that can be said is that our post-Christian society still approves a very few of the older virtues or perhaps only one — kindness — undiscriminating kindness to everyone in all circumstances (unless it interferes too seriously with our own convenience), and strangely enough, to the murderer even more than to his victim.

4. A more serious reason is the risk of condemning an innocent person -- under modern legal procedure, a rare and unlikely accident. A sense of proportion suggests that if the retention of the death penalty as a deterrent is required to protect society, it is mistaken clemency to forgo it for so small a risk.

"But," it is replied, "our modern reverence for life is so great that no such possibility can be tolerated."

Unfortunately this is simply untrue. If it were true, the terrible slaughter on the highways would have long ago forced us to take much more drastic measures to prevent it. The interests of business and excitement far outweigh any such supposed care for individual lives.

5. On the disputed question whether the death penalty is a deterrent to murder, many judges in Great Britain believe that it is, and they are supported in this view by a large majority of police and the prison officials in both England and Scotland. Sir John Hobsca, formerly attorney-general in the British government, in a carefully-worded article in the London Sunday Times (13-12-64) states that it is also his opinion (in the case of capital murders). While agreeing that statistics in such a case cannot be conclusive, he believes that they can give important guidance.

Statistics, though not decisive, can talk fairly loud and clear. The question which few of the abolitionists seem to have faced is what is the alternative? It may be doubted if the present average duration of "life" sentences—variously estimated as nine or 12 years—is a real deterrent to the hardened or determined slayer. Nor has the system of parole always prevented discharged criminals from repeating their crimes.

Finally, it is argued that even the worst of men is capable of being reformed and must be given the chance of it. Is this still so when he has been given not one, but repeated chances, and remains unchanged? Is it just that society should continue to suffer for his sake when he firmly refuses to take any responsibility to society?

None of these reasons seem weighty enough to justify so great a change in the law.

What then, is the real reason for the widespread objection to the death penalty? We believe that it is to be found in the weakened moral fibre of our affluent society; its distaste for any disciplinary authority or for adherence to any fixed ethical standards. Nothing should be enforced upon anyone: no final judgments are possible. We may fairly ask whether any strong or stable society, however progressive, has ever existed, or can long continue to exist in these conditions. There is a stronger case for retaining the death penalty than popular sentiment at the moment is prepared to allow.

CANADA paid its last tribute 25 years ago to Lord Tweedsmuir, "who was honored and mourned in death as he was loved and respected during his term of office as governor-general."

"The solemn grandeur of a state funeral, highest honor the Dominion may pay its illustrious dead, with a simple Presbyterian funeral service in St. Andrew's Church, where he served as an elder, concluded the nation's tribute to its popular viceroy" in Ottawa.

Lord Tweedsmuir's death was the result of head injuries sustained in a fall a week earlier.

Victoria received the good news that Yarrows and Victoria Machinery Depot were to share between them the construction of six vessels "of the whale-catcher type of anti-submarine craft" ordered by the War Supply Board for the Royal Navy and Royal Canadian Navy.

The day of cider in the country stores of Vancouver Island appeared to be coming to a quick end, 50 years ago.

Dominion Indian Constable Thomas O'Connell prosecuted a Sidney baker on a charge of supplying an Indian with an intoxicating liquor, to wit, cider, and the defendant was convicted after the provincial analyst showed that a sample of the cider contained 8.13 per cent alcohol. There was no suggestion that the baker knew of the alcoholic content.

"The defendant was fined the minimum . . . the justice of the peace acquiescing to the plea . . . that the provincial and federal departments had no desire to persecute any one man when it was the whole practice, as hitherto carried out in nearly all country stores, not only in Saanich, but throughout the Island, that the authorities desired to stop."

In consequence representations were to be made to the attorney-general's department that dispensing cider be limited to licensed premises and that sale to children be prohibited.

After a five-day trip from Clayoquot via Alberni and Nanaimo, a Mr. J. C. Penney arrived in Victoria bearing news of the total loss of a lumberladen vessel on a reef about five miles from the Clayoquot coast, 75 years ago.

The ship had not been identified, but all the crew was presumed drowned.

Mr. Penney had no easy time on his travels until he reached the train at Nanaimo. He rode "with Armstrong, the Alberni mail carrier," and "they found the snow on the summit, between Cameron Lake and Alberni, three feet deep, and had the greatest difficulty making the trip. The horses floundered and stumbled through the deep snow, and were thoroughly done up and their feet badly cut when Nanaimo was reached . . ."

An election on the issue of free port versus tariff and union with B.C. was over, and to the Colonist's satisfaction for the vote was in favor of the mainland, 100 years ago, but the action of "a certain coffee dealer" at the polling booth disgusted this paper.

The merchant, stationed there by the free port men to hinder their opponents, challenged almost every name on the list, "in several cases causing the bribery oath to be put to well-known and respectable men.

"To put the bribery oath to any man sensitive of his honor is a direct insult, doubly enhanced by the fact beyond dispute or denial that the free port party themselves were guilty of bribery to an extent quite unprecedented in the election annals of the colony."

Dateline: Europe

Sign of a Turning Point

By OTTO VON HABSBURG

EACH time the U.S.S.R. reaches an important turning point, the Kremlin calls for a party congress to confer the supreme legal sanction upon its decisions.

We have here a hallowed rite of the Communist pseudo-religion. Russia has undergone extraordinary changes; nevertheless each time the people have to be hoodwinked into believing that the new approach was foreseen by the infallible ancestors. By using adequately the writings of Marx and Lenin, one can prove anything and disprove it the next day. The task is simply to find the appropriate quotations. The congress itself has not much to say. It is only called to proclaim and justify the decisions which have already been taken. Nevertheless it is an interesting sign which one should not overlook.

For a few weeks, information available in Eastern Europe indicates preparations for such a summit meeting. It would be the 23rd congress in the party's history. According to rumors the most likely date is the second half of 1965.

The news is not surprising since three major developments might justify the decision.

In the first place there is the change of leadership in the Kremlin. Khrushchev's downfall has seriously shaken the political structure of the U.S.S.R. Furthermore the present solution seems only provisional. It is perfectly conceivable that there will be soon a reconstruction of the Soviet government, which would give power to figures of the young generation, like Shelepin and Podgorny.

In the second place are the problems of foreign policy. Despite temporary agreements between Moscow and Peking—such as those on Viet Nam and probably The Congo—the Sino-Soviet conflict continues. Hence it is necessary to find a formula which explains the increasing polycentrism of the Communist world.

Finally we have the deep changes in Soviet economy. The Marxist structure collapses. Expanding production gives weight to the will of the consumers. There are today Soviet factories with unsalable stocks on hand—something quite unprecedented since the Russian revolution. Hence the pressure on the leaders of the Soviet economy to put products on the market which fulfill the desire of the masses and not the dreams of the planners. This development encourages the new school of economic thought of Professor Evsei Liberman, who demands that production should conform to orders received, that investments be made by using the reserves of the enterprise rather than public funds, and finally a realistic accounting system. These are elementary ideas for those who live in a marxist economy, but quite revolutionary under a Soviet regime. Since the Liberman system was adopted on Jan. 1, 1965, by several sectors of the Russian economy, it will be necessary to give the new—in reality capitalist — principles the Leninist sanction.

The fact that a party congress is expected shows clearly the magnitude of the changes in the U.S.S.R. These will increasingly influence Russia's foreign policy. It is hence imperative that they be followed with the closest attention.

Emphasis on Peace

THE letter headed "Peace Parade" in a recent issue of your paper deserves further consideration. It is a well-known fact that we tend to bring about that upon which our minds dwell; so why not let them dwell more upon peace than upon war? In our parades of recent years it has always been a saddening sight to see so many of our wonderful young men displaying weapons or arms, and to see the horror of bayonets gleaming. How are our young people going to get the vision of peace on earth, and the urge to work for this peace if they constantly see war thus glorified? Would it not be better if they were shown more of the sacrifices and suffering caused by war, than the glamor of it? The hope of the world lies in the coming generation and surely we must show them a better way than this generation has found.

There was much talk at Christmas time of avoiding war toys and is it not even worse to see these things glorified in every procession we have on our streets? No wonder our children clamor for these toys of destruction when they see them in all the glory of a parade.

I heartily endorse the letter of E. B. G. and I also suggest that we follow the example set us by President Johnson in his inaugural parade, and let us this year have a "Peace Parade" in our celebrations in May.

Wonderland

How wonderfully lucky the people of British Columbia are to be taken for a trip into wonderland each year by Mr. W. A. C. Bennett in his dual capacity of premier and finance minister.

The delightful way "cap and bells" dances away with the figures disclosed, when it comes to debts, because that definition is not allowed in the closed preserves of finance.

The charming consideration shown by way of remuneration to both himself—Mr. W. A. C. Bennett—and his fold, and anywhere else in the affluent branch of his dutiful echelon, is really very touching (especially to the taxpayers).

The old age pensioners and restricted income people can now crawl into town, look around, and tighten their belts with joy at the idea that they have once again helped the cause of—"to those that have shall be given."

"Dynamic society!" With shoulders to the wheel all can now help provide the 10 little sticks of dynamite to be placed in all chartered banks because all have got to—they must—help build that one great edifice so dear to the heart of the man who so aptly set free the myth of debt, and placed it in a bank for preservation, to be known to posterity as Bennett's Bank—the man who made history in the art of illusion.

Chief Wriggler

Re: "Ottawa Offbeat" (your correspondent Richard Jackson, Feb. 7), this was hugely enjoyed by us. But doesn't Mr. Jackson realize that Old Chief Wriggler-Outer Pearson has now accounted for everything. In his recent speech in Toronto? That sweet-scented atmosphere hanging about Ottawa is not the fault of his Quebec-Liberal boys-will-be-boys colleagues, whose only sin was being found out: no, no, it was the fault of those nasty, suspicious-minded Opposition nopey-parkers who dared to find them out. O wonderful world of politics. Was it not Diogenes who had to take a lamp to help him find an honest man? If so, I remain,

DIOGENES.

Black Monday

The action of the government, in forcing a new flag upon Canadians, brings out very clearly the truth that traditions which are not valued, which are not guarded, which are not expounded afresh to every generation, as in its turn it steps in the arena of the centuries—will grow weak and pass.

We need more pride in our past and less self-satisfaction with our present.

Canada's soul is rooted in the flow of history, which came out of Western Christian Europe. Our Canadian Red Ensign does symbolize these roots, the mainstream of history, with their common Christian heritage which combined to produce the Canadian nation. To those who, out of their own wisdom, chose the new flag, neither God or people were considered, only party politics. What is the government doing with all the discarded Canadian Red Ensigns? I should like to know. Just throwing them away as garbage?

Wage Increases

Mr. Robert Barrie, president of the Victoria Labor Council, commenting on the 30 per cent increase in the salaries of our legislators said, "we will have to bear this in mind in future negotiations for rate increases."

I don't think the labor unions need any instruction when it comes to securing an increase, completely out of line, from the helpless public. Under threat of strike the carpenters union last year demanded and received a 24 per cent increase in their rates, half this year and half next year.

Our Readers' Views

To be considered for publication in whole or in part, letters must be on subjects of general interest and if signed with pen-names, must be accompanied by writer's name and address. Preference will be given to those that are brief.

Under the terms of an agreement forced by the electricians union under threat of strike, last year electricians received an immediate increase and an agreement which will give them in three years, 40.5 per cent which means that in April of 1967 they will receive $5.31 per hour including fringe benefits. This comes to $9,300 per year.

Talk about fair increases, no-one seems to notice labor increases but wait until you get the bill for new schools, public buildings and, heaven help you, repairs to your home. Too bad for poor old Joe Dokes if he doesn't belong to a pressure group that can raise their own salaries whenever they wish and as high as they wish with ruthless disregard for the fact that their increases are out of all proportion to their fellow workers.

Showing Regret

Monday, the 15th, our historic Red Ensign will be lowered for the last time and a new flag will take its place. Many of us have agreed with you that the Red Ensign should be retained, but by due democratic process a new flag has been chosen and authorized, and we have to accept it. This does not however prevent us from showing our respect and regret for the old flag in an appropriate way. A group of us will wear black ties Monday, and we hope that you and others who share our feelings will join us. Men who do not normally wear ties to work could wear black pants. Ladies could wear black dresses or black skirts and white blouses.

Living in 1965

Your correspondent B.J.B. appears to forget that plumbers and other artisans do negotiate their scale of wages whereas the medical and other professions decree increases in fees without any negotiation with their employers—the patients and clients.

I agree with Mr. Justice Hall when he stated recently that any group which is given a monopoly by the government should not be permitted to increase fees without negotiation with the government, which gave them their monopoly.

I am not opposed to free enterprise when it is truly free and enterprise and not the vintage of the B.C. Telephone and the sugar monopolies. I am also not opposed to big and little business making reasonable profits as these companies provide employment for our people.

If BJB is so opposed to any form of the welfare state I feel that he should press the government to free us from socialized education. Surely we should realize that we are living in 1965 and that we will never return to the "good old days" of the last century and the first two decades of this century.

Higher Taxes

Re your morning paper of Feb. 6, under budget highlights, "No Increase In Taxation." I do not see how anyone can make a statement such as this, for in our district property assessments have doubled and in a large number of cases have tripled.

If this is not an increase in taxation, what is it?

Rock and Roll And Radishes

From The Oregonian

A RECENT presentation of a young girl's scientific exploration of the effects of sound upon living objects seems to indicate that the phonograph may be the reason for the increased height of teenagers today.

This scientific experiment, shown on television, indicated that growth can be radically influenced by exposure to certain sound. Radishes grown in ordinary quiet conditions did not become as large as radishes exposed to continuous sound vibrations of certain character. The latter turned out more than a third larger than the ordinary ones.

Back in the preceding century, Thomas Edison invented the phonograph. Here in the mid-twentieth century, phonograph records are being spread around by the million. Furthermore, their sound is further spread by television and transistor radios.

All of the rising generation is exposed to it. The average rocking and rolling teenager of today runs sometimes more than a foot taller than his grand-parents. How tall will the post-Beatle generation grow in the next 20 years?

Bennett Looks Good for Another 4,582 Days

House Salutes Old Lion Tomorrow

By IAN STREET

It will be a rare day in the legislature tomorrow.

There will be speeches of congratulation from all sides, reminiscences about the good old days, and a modest disclaimer from the man whom all the fuss is about.

He is Premier Bennett who Monday will have been in office longer than any other premier in the history of this province.

It will be a non-partisan affair on the floor of the House, though it is really a tribute to the political skills of the man who has been premier of B.C. for 4,582 days.

That's not anything like a record for length of service by a provincial premier in Canada. Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta took office in 1943 and is still there almost 22 years later.

For a beginner, however, our premier has made his mark in British Columbia.

But he looks hale and hearty and good for another 12 years, six months and 14 days.

The premier says this is the sort of record he doesn't like to break.

But he's not really serious when he says that, because in politics above, all survival is what counts.

CAPITAL REPORT

That is why leaders of the two opposition parties in the legislature and others on the government side will pay tribute to the man and to the office.

It is a salute to the old lion who still has the speed and the strength, the sharpness of tooth and claw, to lead the hunt.

Mrs. Lois Haggen, the New Democrat from Grand Forks-Greenwood, rose to thank the premier in the House Friday for the valentine he sent to her, and gave a sample of what is to come Monday.

She wished him continued good health and an "extended" public life.

That's from the opposition, as you can imagine what is in store from the premier's own loyal lieutenants.

Of all the tributes the premier will receive in the next few weeks, none will match those from his peers. He is a politician in love with politics.

He tells anyone who will listen there is no better job in the world. A doctor only practices medicine, a lawyer the law. But a politician must know and deal with all facets of modern life.

Listening to him expound on his favorite topic it's difficult not to catch some of his zest and enthusiasm.

The rest of the celebrations have a somewhat calculated air.

Next Wednesday he'll be made a freeman of the city of Vancouver and there'll be a dinner to follow. On Saturday the Socred party organization will fete the premier and early next month there'll be other affairs on Vancouver's North Shore and in Victoria.

The old record for serving B.C. premier was held by Sir Richard McBride who took office June 1, 1903, and left Dec. 15, 1915.

Premier Bennett took office Aug. 1, 1952. He has served 4,582 days and shows no sign of stepping down.

Four Charged In Drugs Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four persons were arrested in a raid on a Vancouver house early Wednesday. Charged with possession of heroin were Larry Cain, 19, Gerald R. Palmer, 19, Robert Edouard, 27, and Thomas I. Watt, 27. They were remanded for one week.

No talker, however good, can create a good conversation if he doesn't listen to what the other person says.—Lord David Cecil.

Hats Off to a Well-Run Business

Timber Provides Water

By A. M. MURPHY

Every taxpayer should be given an opportunity to attend a meeting of the board of the Greater Victoria Water District. Or failing that he should be provided with a film of a meeting so that he could run it off on days when he feels financially low—when he receives his tax bill, for example, and finds that it is substantially increased.

Attending a meeting — as a taxpayer, not a reporter — gives one a feeling of affluence, of owning a stake in a big, growing business—a business being well run for the benefit of the consumer and one which will, in the future, cut charges to the consumer rather than gouge him.

And of course it's mostly due to that blessed timber.

Both Sooke Lake and Goldstream watersheds are well furred with timber and these stands have been and will be source of revenue for years.

It is estimated that about 10,000,000 board feet will be cut on the Sooke Lake shed in 1965 and this should bring in about $255,800.

This money will go into the fund (now well above $2,000,000) to pay for the $4,000,000 tunnel which will cut about 21 miles off the route over which water is brought to Victoria and treble the supply.

Were it not for this timber, cost of the tunnel would have to be paid for out of water sales revenues and that would mean, brother, that your rates and mine would be far above their present level.

CITY HALL COMMENT

Furthermore, with its practice of selective logging, it appears that this happy condition could remain in effect indefinitely.

Until 1956 the Goldstream watershed was selectively logged after which the timbermen moved their operation to Sooke Lake.

Next year it's back to Goldstream where more mature and over-mature timber will be harvested.

There's about 37½ years of cutting left in virgin timber on the two watersheds after which the new crop will be ready, it is hoped.

It's a great thing they've got going.

Immigration Tough Portfolio

Nicholson to the Rescue

The shift of Jack Nicholson to immigration minister is considered the most important of the new cabinet changes and a move by Prime Minister Pearson to rescue the controversial department from Opposition criticism.

A succession of ministers in both Conservative and Liberal administrations have found the handling of this portfolio a political hot potato difficult to hold onto for long.

The job has two main problems: Improving the administration and quality of staff, and fending off Opposition MPs during the Commons question period.

Rene Tremblay, who was moved from Immigration to the Post Office Department, has a good academic reputation but was considered to lack the necessary administrative experience.

Although able to speak English, he relied on his own French language when answering questions and, by waiting for the simultaneous translation, often appeared uncertain when answering English-speaking members.

In Nicholson, 63, Pearson has an administrator of proven experience who is counted on to run a tidy operation and bring about needed changes. He may find the House of Commons his greatest task.

Many of his predecessors have found that when deciding on emotion-charged immigration cases with headline potential almost any decision, whether right or wrong, can land them in trouble.

Since arriving in federal politics in 1962, Nicholson has been a solid performer in the Commons, delivering lucid speeches outlining policy and giving direct answers when possible to questions posed by Opposition MPs.

In the few difficulties he has had, his directness or lack of fencing abilities have been the cause.

He has yet to develop the quickness that permitted J. W. Pickersgill, when he held the portfolio in the St. Laurent government, to squelch an opposition MP with wit or fancy foot-work.

JACK NICHOLSON

PROFILE By Michael Gillan

Nicholson has created much goodwill among all MPs for his handling of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, his pet responsibilty since he was given the job when appointed Postmaster-General.

Nicholson entered politics at the behest of the late C. D. Howe, a personal friend with whom he worked during the Second World War in the Department of Munitions and Supply.

Nicholson had been complaining about the calibre of Canadian politics and Howe, then retired, dared him to stop complaining and do something about it.

He ran in Vancouver Centre successfully in 1962 and was re-elected in 1963.

A former president of the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia, Nicholson was given an opportunity to put his expert knowledge to work immediately when Pearson appointed him forestry minister in 1963.

Then he was switched to the Post Office department to quell the controversy that had arisen there under the generalship of Azellus Denis, now in the Senate.

A lawyer, Nicholson rose in business to become general manager of the Crown-owned Polymer Corporation, and later chief executive officer of Brazilian Light and Power Company.

But Shortage Unlikely

Island Spuds Near Bottom of Barrel

The supply of Vancouver Island-grown potatoes is expected to run out within six weeks, it was learned Saturday.

But officials doubt if the dwindling supply will create a potato shortage for Island consumers.

U.S. SCARCITY

Don Wilson of Ladysmith, president of the Island Vegetable Co-operative Association and representative of the B.C. Coast Vegetable Marketing Board, said a potato scarcity in the U.S. is taxing local supplies.

"We don't grow enough to supply our own needs," Mr. Wilson explained, "and consequently we depend on other producers."

USUALLY IMPORTANT

To bolster local supplies, potatoes are usually imported from Alberta, Washington, Idaho and Oregon.

But the U.S. shortage has seriously slashed the Washington and Oregon supply, and Idaho spuds are fairly expensive.

Alberta potatoes are being stored in Vancouver and Victoria, and Mr. Wilson expects them to be used when the local supply diminishes.

FEW CENTS MORE

The Prairie potatoes may be sold for a few cents more, however, to cover storage costs.

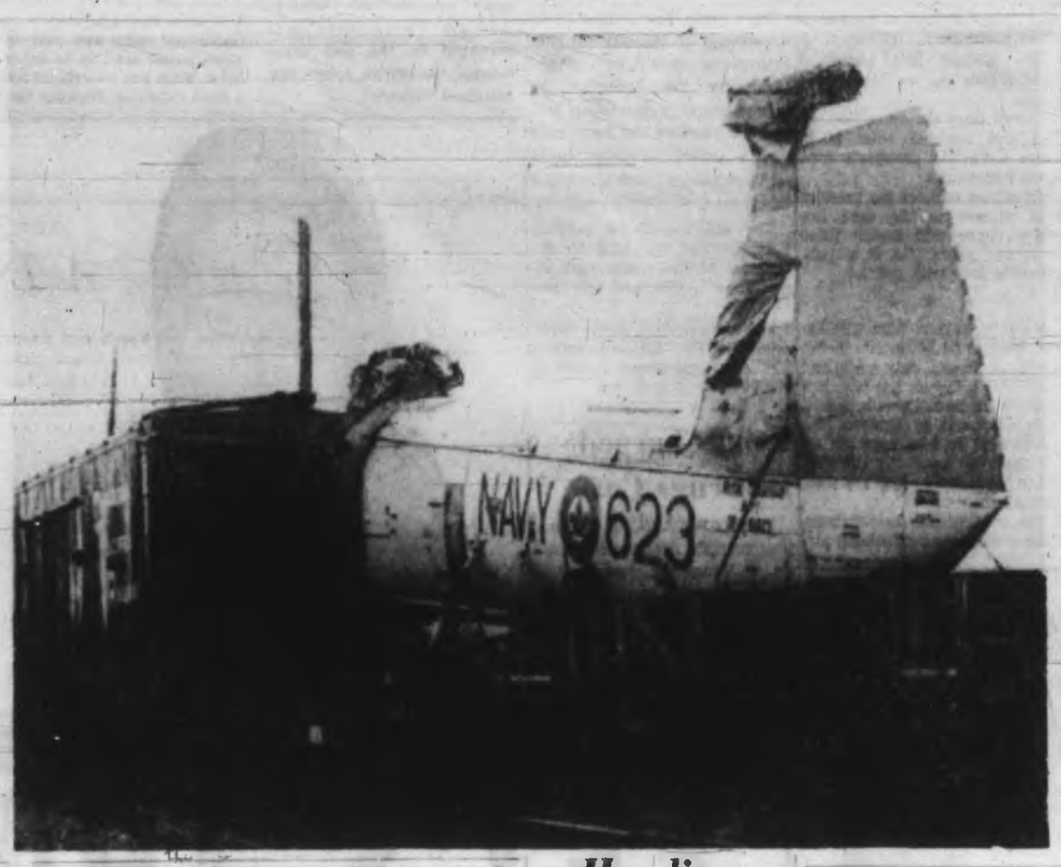

California potatoes will be ready by about mid-April, which will also help fill the gap until the local crop is ready for marketing again in June.

Locally, Vancouver Island potatoes are selling at about 10 pounds for $1.09.

WEEKEND SALE

However, a weekend sale dropped the price to 10 pounds for 69 cents.

Grand Forks potatoes are also selling at 10 pounds for $1.09, while Idaho spuds sell at 10 pounds for $1.35.

Curtis Raps Board For Blocking Sewer

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis has rapped the metropolitan health board for opposing the municipality's application to extend the Northridge sewage treatment plant.

Reeve Curtis accused the board of having a "negative" attitude and suggested the group should concern itself with all aspects of community health.

Last week the board voted to "oppose further pollution of inland waterways," and particularly opposed the Saanich application.

OTHER HAZARDS

The board should be more concerned with the contamination of roadside ditches and similar pollution hazards, the reeve said.

He defended Saanich's approach to sewage problems, pointing out that the municipality has spent more than $4,000,000 to sewer about 8,000 homes over the past 13 years.

And he also said the Saanich application to extend the Northridge plant is not a new idea.

"Saanich made it very clear in 1959 that Northridge would be so extended," he said. "There was no opposition at that time."

Without halting further development of the area, Reeve Curtis pointed out the only two choices left are to properly treat sewage or discharge raw effluent through septic tank systems, which would probably end up in Colquitz Creek anyway.

"Vague statements opposing pollution have a hollow sound when the board offers no concrete or practical solution," he added.

MONEY WITHDRAWN

New Zealand has begun the withdrawal from circulation of half-crown coins preparatory to the changeover to decimal currency in 1967.

Five Councils Accept Talks Proposal

Five municipalities have indicated they will send a representative to an exploratory meeting in Oak Bay to discuss formation of an inter-metropolitan committee.

Four, including Vancouver and Victoria, are studying the proposal for a meeting put forward by Reeve Allan Cox of Oak Bay.

"So far everyone who has written us has been in favor of the idea," said Reeve Cox.

"The idea is worthwhile," said Reeve Forst of West Vancouver. He said it would be taken up with council at its next meeting.

The district of North Vancouver said: "Council favors the idea, and will be glad to have a representative at the meeting. Reeve M. M. Fraser will attend."

Richmond has authorized Reeve W. H. Anderson to attend.

Sidney village commission will send a representative.

SOME OPPOSITION

Central Saanich agreed to send a representative, but only after controversy and opposition from some council members.

Reeve Cox said the Central Saanich position is that of a municipality that will be an urban area, as the greater Victoria area expands, although "properly speaking it is not an urban area yet."

Victoria city council has received the letter from Reeve Cox, and referred it to a committee for study. Also to be heard from are Burnaby, New Westminster and Vancouver.

Date of the meeting will be set when replies are all in.

Collision Injures Riders

Two young motorcycle riders received knee injuries Saturday afternoon in a collision with a brakeless car.

Gordon Botten, 15, passenger on the motorcycle, was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital shortly before 4 p.m. with a broken kneecap.

Motorcycle driver William Cave, 16, of 900 Violet, was treated for knee cuts.

Colwood RCMP said a car being backed down a steep driveway at 117 Helmcken rolled into the street when its brakes failed.

The driver was identified as James Braithwaite, 48, Helmcken.

A Rare Tribute Due Bennett—By Strachan

When the legislature resumes at 2:30 p.m. Monday, Opposition Leader Robert Strachan will pay tribute to Premier Bennett's having surpassed Sir Richard McBride's 12½-year record as B.C.'s longest-serving premier.

Monday's speakers will be Education and Labor Minister Leslie Peterson and Alex Macdonald (NPD—Vancouver East).

B.C. Approves Saanich Job

$1,500,000 Motel To Start Building

A $1,500,000 motor hotel proposal for Saanich has been given the green light by the provincial Pollution Control Board.

Foster Isherwood, one of the four brothers behind the proposal, disclosed Saturday the board has approved the group's sewage-disposal system.

"We have the go-ahead now and will be starting construction by June," he said.

EARLY NEXT YEAR

It is expected to be completed by early next year.

The hotel will be built on 65 acres fronting on Patricia Bay Highway between Royal Oak and Beaver Lake.

Sewage will be treated in a $20,000 plant and then stored in ponds during winter months prior to being used for irrigation in summer.

The tudor-style hotel is expected to be a two-storey structure with 80 rooms and a swimming pool.

CONVENTION CENTRE

It will serve as a convention centre with a banquet room and outdoor recreational facilities including horseback riding.

Long-range plans call for building a motel and further development of other recreational activities.

The group's sewage application was opposed by the metropolitan health board.

Yeats' World Shuts Gallery

Centennial wing of Victoria art gallery will be closed four days starting Monday to install the exhibition The World of W. B. Yeats.

The exhibition, sponsored jointly by the gallery and the University of Victoria, will be the largest yet displayed by the gallery. It will open to the public at 11 a.m. Friday.

All Dressed Up—Nowhere to Park!

By A. H. MURPHY

If you are going to one of the four dressy McPherson Playhouse openings this month you might be smart to take a taxi.

There are about 840 seats in the theatre and they'll all be filled. If everyone brings his own car, that will mean something over 400 automobiles to park.

Just where they will all go nobody seems to know.

There is room for not more than a few score on the adjacent streets, and, on Friday evening, the first and most glittering opening night, it is likely that most of them will be occupied by the time first-nighters arrive.

City aldermen see no answer to the problem. It is, they say, just one aspect of a chronic parking problem which will remain until the parkade building in Centennial Square is completed.

That will not be for four months or so at the most optimistic estimate.

One alderman suggests that the city might try and obtain the use of the Hudson's Bay company parking area for the opening evening.

That idea was ruled out when it was made clear that Friday night is probably the biggest shopping night of the week and the department store needs the space for its own customers.

Possibly some arrangement might be made for two of the other three nights of the opening week, Monday, March 1 and Saturday, March 6.

City traffic officials point out that there are, exclusive of Hudson's Bay, three privately owned parking lots within a few blocks of the theatre. They will accommodate a total of about 260 cars but there is the question of how many of these spaces will be occupied at theatre time.

A complicating factor in the parking problem is the fact that there are three beverage rooms, three military service clubs and a liquor store in the theatre area. Their patrons all require parking space.

In Any Climate

Unrefrigerated Milk Stays Fresh Months

LONDON (LST)—The biggest revolution in milk processing since pasteurization has been perfected by three teams of British scientists.

By the process, on which the developers began research in 1956, milk can be kept unrefrigerated for six months in any climate—refrigerated, it will keep forever.

It costs no more than normally-processed milk. It tastes the same, and a very large quantity has, in fact, been sold quietly on milkrounds in London; nobody noticed.

SURVIVES TEST

In a secret test program to pave the way for exports of it, scientists in 12 countries have kept samples for six months and longer. All have reported that the milk survived perfectly, and that everything claimed for it appears to be substantiated.

The process, known as ultra-high temperature sterilization, has been perfected by scientists of the Express Dairy Co., the ministry of agriculture, and the national institute of dairy research at Reading University.

COOLING TRICKY

The milk is heated to a temperature slightly above 100 degrees centigrade and held at this for less than two seconds. The difficulty is in getting both these factors exactly right, depecially in cooling the milk instantly after the sterilization.

The new product is to be sold in bulk in five-gallon polythene containers, or for domestic use pint or quart cartons.

The chairman of Express Dairy, W. E. D. Bell, said: "Vast unimaginable possibilities have been opened up. Britain can now send milk anywhere. At last, we can feed milk to the two thirds of the world that is starving."

MORE FOR FARMERS

In this country, the discovery will revolutionize the dairy industry. It offers a way of giving the dairy farmers more for their milk without raising the price to the public. The savings will come in distribution costs, for the process ends the need for urgent cow-to-door handling.

Already, a contract has been signed for bulk shipments to Central America. Orders are about to come from major international shipping lines. Both the British and American navies are thinking of placing orders.

NO PATENTS

Bell said, "We are not going to try to patent any part of the process. We think that Britain is so far ahead of the rest of the world in this field that we should just go ahead before they can catch up."

Grand Reward

LONDON (CP) — An elderly woman bought a powder compact in a store here. In another store, she spotted a similar compact and brought her own out for comparison. The store detective, seeing her replacing her own compact, arrested her for shoplifting. After checking with the first store, the embarrassed manager offered the woman anything on display. She chose a grand piano.

Things Went From Bed To Worse

LONDON (AP) — George S. Allen liked to sleep at night with his knees drawn up.

His wife, Olive, protested that she couldn't sleep with George's knees in her back.

One thing led to another and, eventually, to the divorce court. There Mrs. Allen, 33, was granted a decree on the ground that the bedtime behavior of George, 35, was cruel.

Justice James Stirling noted that Olive and George are both hefty and said their double bed, only four feet, six inches wide, probably was a tight fit.

The judge said that according to the testimony the struggle for night time space in the Allen boudoir reached a climax in August 1962, when George nudged Olive so hard she fell out of bed.

The judge said that matters might never have reached the divorce court if the Allens had only turned to the obvious solution:

Twin beds!

Bond Girl

Shapely 20-year-old Alex Stevenson (38-26-36) has been screen tested for a leading role in a forthcoming James Bond movie. Alex, who fits nicely into the mold of a typical Bond heroine, was playing in pantomime when spotted. Her role: Prince Charming.—Fednews.

Convicts Get Face-Lifts

LONDON—An ugly British criminal can now walk out of jail and literally be a new man—thanks to plastic surgery.

Britain's National Health Service has been offering free face-liftings to convicts while they serve time in prison.

The oddity came to light when it was disclosed that in the past five years more than 200 odd prisoners have undergone plastic surgery to alter ears or noses and remove scars or tattoos.

The free operations are performed if it is felt the prisoner is suffering psychological harm as a result of his ugliness or deformities.

At one jail 24 prisoners had face-liftings to help their rehabilitation. Small operations are done in the prison hospitals, but prisoners are moved to civilian hospital for major plastic surgery.

Liquor on Sale Wednesday

Sun-Lovers Find Heat Is Relative

WELLINGTON (CP) — This is the summer holiday season in New Zealand when much of the population basks in the sun at the seaside. Not to be outdone, men at Scott base, New Zealand headquarters in the Antarctic, have been working outside stripped to the waist. They report this was possible because of the hot weather—3.6 degrees above freezing.

Laotians Ban Time Magazine

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — Time magazine has been officially banned from Laos by the government. The official Lao press charged that the Time article on the battle here between two military factions in the government last week was "erroneous."

The Stamp Packet

By FAITH ANGUS

The first Canadian issue of 1965 consisting of two floral emblem stamps honoring Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, were released on Feb. 3. These will be followed on Mar. 3 by Canada's International Co-operation Year (UN sponsorship) commemorative — a 5 cent green, showing two clasped hands surrounded by the UN wreath.

Australia and other member states plan to release stamps during the year, following the basic design prepared by the United Nations secretariat.

A special stamp will be issued by Ireland on June 13 to mark the centenary of the birth of William B. Yeats, Irish poet and dramatist.

Ryukyu Islands recently honored the 10th anniversary of the R.I. Boy Scouts with a 3c stamp showing Boy Scouts, the insignia and Shurei Gate. It was designed by Shin Lsagawa and produced in multicolor on white paper without watermark, by photogravure, in quantity of 800,000. Another 3c stamp depicting a karate training form was also released early in February.

The general post office, Dubai, Arabian Gulf, now has a special philatelic section to handle orders for stamps.

A competition for designs suitable for the Canadian Confederation centennial stamps to be issued in 1967 is being sponsored by The London Philatelic Society of Ontario.

Copies of the prospectus are being mailed to all Canadian secondary schools, colleges and universities, and the competition will be open to all but professional artists.

Judges will be Dr. Clara Bice, RCA, curator of the London Art Museum, Fred Jarrett, one of Canada's leading philatelists, and John K. Elliott, editor of The London Free Press. Cash prizes of $25, $15 and $10 will be offered for the three winning designs which will be submitted with others of special merit, to the post office department.

The prospectus and entry forms may be obtained from Centennial Stamp Design Competition, London Philatelic Society, P.O. Box 216, London, Ontario.

As the society is a non-profit organization with limited finances, it is necessary to charge a fee of 25 cents for each entry. Closing date for receipt of entries is June 11.

New Issue

New Malaysian 10 sen stamp is one of two (other is 20 sen) recently issued to commemorate that country's national monument. Both stamps show multicolored monument, 10 sen on pale blue background, 20 sen, orange-yellow background.

Sons' Camp Passes Tests

AGASSIZ (CP) — Health officials report the general sanitary conditions at the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor camp here remain fairly good. The Freedomites came here in 1963 to be close to friends and relatives serving prison terms.

North Breezes

They've built an armored van in Birmingham with an electronic brain. The driver can run away and the truck will defend itself against bandits.

Now if we could just buy cars that would take over the thinking department, we might cut the accident rate—and the insurance rate. In January they safety tested 1,283 cars in Victoria and 719 were rejected. If the cars could talk for themselves they'd have ordered repair jobs when they were due.

And if cars could talk they'd tell you that IMPERIAL provides spacious blacktop parking for dinner guests and you can drop your party at the door. Never a wet foot. Never an unhappy diner. Always a fine meal.

That's the beauty of the Renault 4.
(Test drive it)

We broke the big rule with the Renault 4.
We put all the money into its engineering.
Not body design. Or fancy trappings.
We did this because a lot of people want stamina in a car, rather than status.
This they get with the Renault 4.
Its suspension is so good the car doesn't even need a road.
The body is fully dipped against corrosion.
You get a powerful heater/defroster and instant cold weather starting.
And you never have to grease the Renault 4.
The Renault 4 gives up to 45 miles per gallon at 60 miles per hour.
It carries four big people comfortably.
Or two big people and 500 lbs. of what-have-you.
So take your kids to school, go hunting, skiing—use it as a delivery van.
The Renault 4 will do all this, on the highway or off, for years (many people have driven Renault 4s over 70,000 miles without even minor repairs).
Now, what does this kind of performance cost you?

Strauss Opera Overture To Lots Of Action

By BERT BINNY

There's going to be lots of action in the local entertainment world during the next few weeks, and the action starts today.

The Canadian Opera Company and the Victoria Symphony orchestra under resident conductor Otto-Werner Mueller present the famous Strauss composition, Die Fledermaus, at the Royal Theatre this afternoon at 3 and tomorrow evening at 8:30.

Constance Fisher sings the lead role of Rosalinda with Sheila Piercey as Adele. Winnipeg critics acclaimed the latter as "nothing short of perfect."

Jan Rubes assumes the role of Prince Orlofsky.

There are two ballet companies appearing here within a week of each other: the Royal Winnipeg on Tuesday and the Hungarian Ballet Bihari on the following Monday.

There are five stars with the Winnipeg company which, by the way, is celebrating a 25th anniversary. Of these stars three were born in the U.S., one in England and one in South Africa.

Nora Kovach and Istvan Rabovsky, both former stars of the Leningrad (Kirov) and Budapest Opera Ballets, lead the Hungarian company in a program which fuses classical ballet and native folk dances.

St. Matthias Little Theatre Society opens Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest tomorrow evening.

Curtain time at the Parish Hall is 8:15 each evening.

Directed by Very Trueman, the cast includes Jenefer Allen, Jennifer Chaster, Rita Coe, Phyllis Gaskell, Ken Bostock, Richard Litt and Stanley Bowles.

A scene from the first act is the Society's contribution to Lights Up, the opening variety program at the McPherson Playhouse, March 1 through 4. The whole play competes in the 1965 Dominion Drama Festival at Kelowna at the beginning of April.

Esquimalt Secondary School turns to melodrama when they present Love Rides the Rails on Thursday and Friday; 8 p.m. at the school auditorium.

The Victoria chapter of the Royal Canadian College of Organists present their annual Festival of Choirs on Thursday.

The place is First United Church and the time is 8 p.m. The choirs, employing a total of over 330 voices, will be heard individually as well as in a combined performance.

The Duncan Musical Club is this year presenting E. Kalman's Countess Maritza. There will be performances on Feb. 19, 20, 26 and 27 with curtain time at 8:15 p.m.

Victorians, Awake!

We Don't Deserve What We Get!

By E. D. WARD HARRIS

A city gets what it deserves in the way of culture. Victoria is getting more than it has any right to expect. But at the rate we are going this cannot last for long.

The deplorable lack of public support for those who are selflessly spending time and money—their own time and their own money—to bring Victorians food for the soul is, to understate, disheartening.

In city theatrical and musical circles this public apathy has long been accepted as a fact of life, but I refuse to believe that the situation cannot be remedied.

As an example of what I am complaining about, let us take last Sunday's symphony concert.

As soloist we heard a brilliant young Canadian pianist, Richard Gresko. The thrill of hearing his technical mastery, added to the excitement of seeing and hearing an artist at the outset of a promising career, was itself worth the price of admission.

But this was by no means all. The Victoria Symphony Orchestra, while admittedly a little weak in spots, has improved out of all recognition during the past two years and at times last Sunday was positively inspired.

Results Remarkable

Considering that there are many young students dissembled among the handful of professionals and gifted amateurs, the results achieved are remarkable.

The orchestra has cohesion where none existed; it has spirit where once was dullness. In short, it has its foot on the steep ladder of professionalism.

The four playing professionals have done wonders for the general improvement of the orchestra, but the greatest praise must go to conductor Otto-Werner Mueller. Without his guidance and inspiration the orchestra would never have got off the ground.

I say this with no disrespect for anyonec onnected with the orchestra, musicians as well as administrators.

It's about time the people of Victoria acclaimed the genius in their midst and the best way—the only way—to do so is to attend all concerts and not merely those with famous name soloists.

Last Sunday the number of empty seats was both depressing and insulting.

Whilst I am attacking absentees I must spare space to castigate some of those who did attend last Sunday's concert.

Several arrived late. Latecomers should be compelled to wait in the lobby until a work has been completed; concertgoers everywhere else accept this penalty. And then several people left the theatre during the last movement of the symphony. This is not only bad manners but unnerving to orchestra members and public.

Times Are Exciting

These are exciting times in this city for apart from the vastly improved symphony orchestra we now have a new school of music, a lively young university, a considerable amount of theatrical talent performing prodigious feats on shoestring budgets, and a new civic theatre.

The McPherson Playhouse opens next week and everyone connected with the venture is keeping his fingers crossed. The success or failure of the undertaking rests with the public, and past experience in this field is scant encouragement.

A theatre, like any other business venture, must pay its way and the McPherson Playhouse in particular must pay its way for this is a civic theatre and taxpayers are going to scream blue murder if called upon too often to underwrite losses.

The public must realize that it must support the theatre in its early days if it is ever to grow and flourish and attract better and better fare.

A gallant little band of philanthropists has kept things going in this city over the years. Without their support there would not be a symphony orchestra or a school of music or an art gallery —or any worthwhile cultural activity.

Without them Victoria really would be a cultural desert. And we would have no one to blame but ourselves.

'Met' To Visit B.C.

NEW YORK (CP) — The newly - created Metropolitan Opera National Company promises to bring to Canadians "opera with sex appeal."

Arrangements for the company's seven-city Canadian tour were made here last week when Jerome Shore of Winnipeg, president of Opera Tours Limited, met with officials of the company.

Michael Manuel, co-general manager of the national company said that emphasis will be on pleasing voices as well as on a cast that is pleasing to the eye.

Singer Rise Stevens said all 28 principal singers — including two Canadians — have already been signed and that the rest of the 125-member cast will be signed before long.

The national company was formed primarily to give American and Canadian singers an opportunity for a career without having to go to Europe to gain experience with secondary European opera companies.

Victorian's Discotheque Wins Favor on Mainland

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Greater Vancouver's first discotheque went over Friday night without a bang—just the way it was supposed to.

Its owner, a young Victorian, was happy.

North Vancouver officials were happy.

Visiting councillors from Burnaby were happy.

And teen-agers, for whom the club is designed, were happy, too.

Tony Else, 24, ushered about 600 of the teen-agers into the discotheque and treated them to Beatle-beat music, bottles of cola, and modern dances.

The club, called Uncle Jake's, is the first of what Mr. Else hopes will be a chain on the lower mainland, and Burnaby Coun. Russell Hicks was on hand to see if he liked the idea enough to approve a similar layout in Burnaby.

Gary Fletcher, 19, a 205-pound Golden Glover, is the bouncer at the club, and got his training at Uncle Jake's in Victoria.

"As far as booze is concerned, I just take it away from them, pour it out in front of them and ask them to leave," he said.

Pioneering's Over NOW—

The Play's The Thing!

By IAN ARROL

Henry Thoreau wrote, "If I knew for a certainty that a man was coming to my house with the conscious desire of doing me good, I should run for my life."

Each of us has built in revulsion, probably dating back to our spoon-fed porridge days, of anything that someone tells us is good for us—be it porridge, religion or the theatre.

Unless the habit be built into us.

In which case the sophisticated millionaire probably still likes his bowl of hot porridge; the free-thinker feels a periodic desire to join in the singing of a few hymns, and a Londoner far from civilization misses more than anything, the stage.

NOT A TRADITION

But the theatre has not been a tradition for most of us in Victoria.

Even a sell-out at the University Gordon Head theatre workshop means merely, in terms of attendance, that 135 people have gone to the theatre.

If, as is the case of The Wild Duck, the show runs six nights and is held over for a seventh (tomorrow), a full house at each performance means that 945 have attended.

McPherson Playhouse will have almost as many seats—837—to fill for each performance.

FUN, WONDER, AWE

But the good news for those who have yet to find out is that theatre is for enjoyment, another dimension of experience—not to "do you good" other than to stir you up with laughter, wonder or awe.

For most of the generations in this new land of Canada, the primary need, and hence the most honored social cause, has been to pioneer, to chop down trees, to break the land, to bulldoze out transportation facilities and power plants and factory sites.

TOUGH HEROES

Those we most admire have been those with the sinews and determination to do the job at hand. Our heroes have been "the original settlers" and the captains of industry and development, not as in the settled areas of Europe, the pioneers of mind and spirit.

We have not been conditioned by our pioneer ancestry to know how to play, unless the play, too, be some form of work such as outdoor sports activities.

But with increased leisure, with our desire that our children have a world view, with the need to know how to live and not just get a living, new opportunities are needed in Victoria to widen and deepen our understanding and appreciation.

ONE OF AVENUES

The McPherson Playhouse which starts operations one week from Friday is one of the avenues to fill this need, to report dramatically and musically on the good and evil in man, on his joys and sorrows, hopes, frustrations, aspirations, faith and cynicism. The religion of the theatre is life.

And the particular aspect of life with which the opening performances will deal is laughter.

If motorists would show the respect for the law the lack of which many of them constantly deprecate in the case of thieves and housebreakers, the increase in the effective strength of the police for dealing with such offenders would be immense and immediate. — Lady Wootton.

Mars-Bound Mariner Obeys Orders

PASADENA, Calif. (LAT) — Mars-bound Mariner 4 obeyed a series of earth commands in space yesterday, proving its readiness to take pictures of the red planet during the fly-by next July 14.

Twelve separate commands were transmitted from the jet propulsion laboratory's space flight operations centre, via the Goldstone tracking station near Barstow, Calif., starting when the spacecraft was 16,500,000 miles from earth.

COVER OPENED

The test checked out Mariner's ability to perform the encounter sequence, opening the cover that protected the TV camera lens and operating the scanning platform that carries the camera and aims it on command.

In all, 36 components of the Mariner system hitherto untested in space were exercised in the operation and all performed as required, JPL engineers reported.

They said the lens cover was dropped — and will remain open for the rest of the flight—to prevent the possibility of shaking loose dust particles from the spacecraft during the fly-by.

Thatcher Faces Confidence Vote

REGINA (UPI) — Premier Ross Thatcher's Liberal government will face its second non-confidence motion when House sittings resume Monday.

The government survived its first vote of no-confidence, 31-21, Friday.

Citizens' Reactions to New Flag Show Majority Don't Approve

By DON GAIN

Canadians in the Victoria area will view the advent of the new flag at noon Monday with mixed feelings.

Here are the reactions of people picked at random in downtown Victoria, male and female, in several age groups.

"I don't like it," said 17-year-old Valerie Butler of View Royal.

Better Blue

Victoria-born of British ancestry, the Esquimalt Senior High School student said the flag should have been red white and blue.

"I like the maple leaf," she said, " but I would have liked it better with blue borders."

She said there was not much discussion of the flag issue, either at school or among her friends.

Michael Perey of 1571 Burnside West said he liked the old flag better.

For Young

"The new one is all right for the young people," he said.

A native of Lvoov, Austria, Mr. Perey has been in Canada since 1928. He retired from railroading in Ontario after the Second World War and came to Victoria. He said he did not object to the way the flag was chosen.

Peter Flucker, 18, of 1014 Tillicum, said he had no particular feelings one way or the other. An Esquimalt Senior High School student, he said his friends didn't talk about the flag. He would have liked some blue in it, he said.

Our Symbol

"It's okay with me," said bus driver Jack Townsend of 29 Brigadoon. "There's been a lot of bad feeling about the new flag, but it's Canadian and the maple leaf is our symbol."

A second-generation Canadian of Scottish and English descent, he said it was in keeping with general changes in the country.

"We can now call ourselves Canadian citizens instead of British subjects, and we should have our own distinctive flag," he said.

Everyone Knew

"I've talked to some of the Olympic athletes," he said, "and they were asked who they were when they were seen with the Red Ensign. But as soon as they showed their maple leaves, everybody knew they were Canadians."

"There's no distinction to the new flag," said Mrs. Sarah Willis, 2832 Shelbourne. "It looks like a beer label."

Mrs. Willis came to Canada from Manchester 13 years ago with her husband and five children.

All Canadians

"They're all Canadians now," she said. "My son has been in the army since he was 16. He served with the Canadians in the Gaza Strip."

The family has been in Victoria for three years.

"I think Mr. Pearson wanted to get it over with before the election. This is supposed to be a democracy. I think we should have had a vote on it."

"I don't like it," said Anne Sim, 1446 Gladstone, and Kathryn King, 476 Lampson, almost in chorus.

Anne was born in Scotland, Kathryn in England. Both came to Canada at the age of three. Anne works as a shipper, Kathryn is on the staff at Government House.

"I was born under the old flag. I'm not in favor of the new one, but we have to go along with it," said Cyril Penzer, 3185 Midland.

Too Bad

Born in Winnipeg, Mr. Penzer is of Welsh descent. He was proprietor of the barber and beauty shop at the Empress Hotel for more than 30 years.

"It's too bad we can't keep our old traditions," he said.

"We don't like the new flag," said Chief John Albany of the Songhees reserve. "Speaking for my people, we will never go for this flag. We never fought over the flag, but a lot of us fought under it. I think the Red Ensign should still fly in Canada.

"The new flag has been rammed down our throats by a government which is not really our government out here."

Flag Ceremonies Open to Public

The public is invited to ceremonies marking the raising of the new flag at Royal Roads, Work Point Barracks and, weather permitting, HMCS Naden at noon Monday.

There also will be an outdoor ceremony at Bay Street Armory.

The ceremony at HMCS Naden will be held on the large parade ground if there is no rain. Otherwise it will be held in the Naden drill shed with room only for invited guests. Victoria radio stations will make a definite announcement at 10 a.m.

Right Street Wrong Bank

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Manning of Alberta Friday drew a roar of laughter from bank directors and city business men at the official opening of a $3,500,000 Royal Bank of Canada Building when he said while cutting the ribbon:

". . . I declare this splendid new Bank of Montreal . . . ah, Royal Bank officially opened."

The Bank of Montreal opened a new building across the street from the Royal Bank last winter.

Reports of Shortages Mount in PGE Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Reports of cutbacks, layoffs and feed and fuel shortages as a result of a strike on the government-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway are reaching here.

Some spokesmen said a prolonged strike of British Columbia's only north-south railway could cripple the economy of the Interior.

A hundred and seventy-seven members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen (CLC) have been on strike for more than a week for improved wages and conditions.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Pacific Railway reported operations in its Vancouver yard returned to normal Saturday.

WON'T HANDLE

Most of the 144 yard employees booked off sick Friday in an apparent protest about disciplinary action planned against five CPR employees.

The employees either refused to cross picket lines on PGE trackage or refused to handle hot cars from PGE trackage.

Supervisory personnel of the CPR did yard work Friday.

The Chamber of Commerce of 100 Mile House said the railway is needed to transport lumber and bring feed for ranches.

At Williams Lake, Mayor Herb Gardner said some local sawmills may have to close down.

A fuel dealer who supplied remote farm houses was almost out of bottled gas.

Life Full of Contrast

Quiet Millionaire

By JOHN LeBLANC

TORONTO (CP)—Max Bell is a soft talking Westerner who says his business life is full of mistakes who who has a ten-gallon hatful of newspapers, fast horses and money in large denominations.

Whether the part about the mistakes is true—and it is not known that he has been clipped in business since a confidence man took him for six ounces of gold dust in his young prospecting days—his life is full of other contrasts.

He is a student of economics, the Bible and the horseplayer's Daily Racing Form.

Banks, Racetracks

He sits at the board tables of the staid and solid Bank of Nova Scotia and Canadian Pacific Railway but also heads a Chicago racetrack.

He heads a company running seven major daily newspapers —worth a reported $50,000,000— but hates interviews and photographs.

His analytical skill runs to such variety as being a track handicapper of professional competence and working out a plan for financing new congregations of the Presbyterian Church.

Not in Public Eye

Though a powerhouse in business, he operates at low pressure.

The pressure is so low that the public rarely hears of this 52-year-old multi-millionaire and physical-culture devotee except when one of his horses wins a big American race or fails to win the Epsom Derby. He's better known on the sports page than the business page despite a career as a big operator in Western oil.

His own papers—he is chairman of the board of FP Publications with dailies in Ottawa, Winnipeg, Lethbridge, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria — feel only a light touch on the editorial reins. They go varied ways in policy and have far diverging political outlooks.

While he mixes sport heavily with business, he has always had an eye out for a deal. He prefers trading in the large manner to the day-to-day administering of a business.

"I suppose you'd say my ability is more in the area of sizing up deals and trying to put them through," he said during a visit to Toronto recently.

Institution Shaken

He talked about a few of his enterprises.—These include a $1,000,000 horse farm at Okotoks, Alta., in partnership with Frank McMahon, head of an oil and gas empire, and plunges into such miscellaneous ventures as a piece of a hotel near London's airport.

Most spectacular of these sent a shudder through one of Britain's oldest, most revered and most unshakably British institutions in 1950.

He started studying the almost-300-year-old Hudson's Bay Company. He concluded the stock was an excellent buy (the company had more money in the bank than the market value of all shares) but that diversification was needed and he was just the man to provide it.

Sold Out

Before long he was the largest individual stockholder. He got to within two per cent of what he calculated was control and then gave up, figuring he would have to run the company himself to get it on the track he wanted. He sold out at a good profit.

Afterward the stock kept going—with diversification—to a point where his investment would have been worth $100,000,000 in 10 years.

More Dramatic

Shortly after the war he took aim at an even more dramatic proposition. A huge block of 34,000 shares of Canadian Pacific stock was held by Britain's Westminster Bank. He set out to acquire it and arranged for financing of $60,000,000.

It turned out the bank's shares were held in trust for a multitude of Continental clients and were not for sale. However, Mr. Bell continued to watch CPR and my mid-1962 decided its $19-a-share price was a bargain.

He started buying heavily and profited handsomely as it went into a long climb that has seen the market price more than tripled.

Improbabilities

His career as a newspaper owner consists of a series of improbabilities. His father, George Melrose Bell, made a fortune in insurance but dropped it all in newspapers. When he died in 1935, his Calgary Albertan — on which the son was working for $35 a week' — was held by the Royal Bank of Canada as security for loans of $500,000.

Max raised $35,000 through four friends in 1943 and the bank took that as a down payment on The Albertan. In a few years, helped by the wartime boom, he paid off the bank and his backers.

Later he acquired — with some partner help — interests in and eventual control of the Victoria Times, Victoria Colonist and Lethbridge Herald.

In 1859 he persuaded Victor Sifton to join in buying the Ottawa Journal and merging all their interests in FP Publications. Mr. Sifton brought in the Winnipeg Free Press and its enormously successful Weekly Prairie Farmer.

FP's latest acquisition — in 1963 — was the Sun Publishing Company operating the Vancouver Sun, largest paper in the West. Other FP holdings are a half-interest in Lethbridge TV station CJLH and a minority share of CHCT-TV at Calgary.

Papers Now First

Mr. Bell says he now regards his newspaper ownership as the major aspect of his business career. He is active as publisher of The Albertan.

He's strong on family life and physical fitness and has combined these. For years non-smoking, non-drinking Mr. Bell has taken along the family — some now grown up—for golf (he's a 12-handicap player), badminton, tennis, skiing, hockey (he played for Kimberley Dynamiters in the Western International League) and even weight-lifting. He has been a strong backer of minor sport.

Warehouse Fire Destroys Peanuts

VANCOUVER (CP) — The second fire in as many weeks erupted in a downtown warehouse where peanuts are stored. About 200 sacks of peanuts were destroyed. Damage to the building was minor.

SOVIETS ON DISPLAY

Since the end of the Second World War, the Soviet Union has taken part in more than 200 trade and industrial exhibitions around the world.

PRESIDENTIAL DECREE

Dwight Eisenhower, when president of the U.S., ordered homburg hats to replace the traditional black toppers at his inauguration.

THE WORLD POPULATION WILL DOUBLE IN 36 YEARS

Obviously this will be good for our young Canadian economy, calling on its huge untouched resources to meet the ever-increasing demands of all countries.

In the resulting flush of enterprise, antiquating services will diminish — ventures based on new services will appear. Some will lose, some will win and stay on to become institutional. Many businesses, old and new, will continue as before to experience the irregular ebb and flow of success in their respective classes and in the "long haul" provide a reasonably assured growth for the investor.

But, through it all, the Mortgage business will carry on within its own sense, protective ashore—unheralded—non-dynamic—punching out its above-average yield year after year.

It is for the investor who requires economically or psychologically, the assurance of a steady income or growth, without fluctuation, that mortgage investments serve best.

Victoria Mortgage Corp. Ltd. offers 7½% on 5-year debentures; 7½% 2½ years; 7% 1 year; (all callable on death); 6¾% demand. Interest paid quarterly (or compounded on request). Current Mortgages average 8½% of appraised security. Above Capital further secures the debenture holder. For prospectus, Douglas Meadus, 811 Fort, 384-7128.

African Paradise

Ancient and Modern Co-Exist in Kenya

By SEAN BROWN

NAIROBI, Kenya (TNS)—It's only three miles from the city centre to the double strand of barbed wire that marks the beginning of Nairobi National Park.

There you can see everything from scampering, playful dik-dik to lumbering rhinos and slithering crocs. And all in their natural setting.

The game park ranges across some 5,000 square miles of open veldt and, as your plane angles for a landing at Embakasi Airport, it sweeps low over the roving herd of wildebeeste and gazelle.

But a day in the game park is only the beginning of East Africa's tourist marvels.

You feel the quickening pulse of newly-free Africa as you tread the sidewalks of this burgeoning Kenya capital city.

You rub shoulders with Africans, Indians, Arabs and white men, too.

DRY HEAT

Above you, the sun beats down in a fiery equatorial glow, but it is a pleasant, dry heat, accounted for by Nairobi's mile-high elevation.

It is a dreamland, this Kenya, with its rolling, lush-green hills, its banana groves and its miles of sweeping forests.

As the noon-hour traffic edges its way along jacaranda-lined Kenyatta Avenue, you watch in wonder as a massive, almost-naked Masai warrior tries to make it across the street.

ANXIOUS WHOOP

They wait and wait . . . then, finally, with an anxious whoop they go hurtling through the traffic brandishing spears and clubs as they run.

With him are his wife and children, all of them caked with the red-earth lotion that is their tribal hallmark.

This is the stone-age meeting the jet-age, but you can see it all in a day right here in the streets of Nairobi.

This is the white man's Kenya, the stone jungle that has grown up in the past 50 years.

You must travel a little further to see the real African come alive.

EXCITING NIGHT

Only 100 miles to the north, on the slopes of majestic, snow-capped Mount Kenya, Treetops Hotel provides an exciting one-night stand.

There, with full room service, you can spend the night in the spreading limbs of a giant baobab tree and watch game herds almost at your finger tips.

The animals—as many as 100 elephants at a time, plus rhinos, hippos and others — come to drink water and use salt-licks under the treetop hotel. And their actions are illuminated by brilliant floodlights.

Away to the south, you can rove for days in the wilderness of Tsavo or Amboseli national parks, staying overnight at game lodges.

IDYLLIC WORLD

Or, best of all, you can visit the coast. Quaint Mombasa, Kenya's major seaport, is the springboard to an idyllic world of virgin beaches.

There you can lounge in the shade of palm trees and watch the Arab dhows slide silently past on their historic trade route to the Persian Gulf.

You can swim, surf and goggle in tepid tropical waters and squint at the fearless shoals of multi-colored fish.

If civilization bores you, then see Kenya and quit.

It's Never Too Late!

ST. LEONARDS, England (CP) — Mrs. Mary Bayman, who was a housemaid to Queen Victoria for five years, has returned to her Sussex home after a round-the-world trip. Now 91, she said: "If you don't travel you never realize how lovely the world is."

STAN DELAPLANE Tells . . .

How, What And Where

"We are going to Jamaica—to Ochos Rios. Can you tell me the best buys in this area and any suggestions for sight-seeing?"

This is a free port country. No duty, no tax. All kinds of imports: Japanese transistor radios, French gloves, German cameras. You order, but you can't get delivery until you are on the plane leaving the country.

Nothing locally produced except straw hats and baskets. Most of them sold on the roadside near Montego Bay by a brigand known as "Honest Information." Charges about three times what they sell them for in the stores in town.

From Ochos Rios it's a pretty ride of a half-hour or more to the little town of Montego Bay. On the way in, you pass the ruins of Rose Hill plantation house. In ancient days, a lady named Annie Palmer tortured her slaves and was eventually killed by an obeah—or voodoo—man. Jamaicans say her ghost walks the place. And the caretaker tells a great story.

There's a nice train ride over to Kingston. Your hotel will arrange a one-day trip into the Maroon country. These are descendants of runaway slaves—they run their own show and have a treaty with the Jamaica government.

"Would like to drive to Mexico City via El Paso, Texas. Will this be very hot?"

Not now. In fact, it's cold at this time of year. Spring is pleasant. Summer it's about 90 degrees—but dry, desert heat. About three days of this until you start climbing to the great central plateau. Then it cools off. There isn't any cool summer route into Mexico.

"Can you give us some ideas for our European trip. I mean do they follow the same rules?"

Europeans reverse the fork—fork to mouth with the left hand. But YOU don't have to change. Europeans—men and women—do a lot of handshaking. Shake hands on meeting. Shake hands on parting. Women friends kiss each other on both cheeks. (This is on the Continent. Britain and Ireland have the same customs we do.)

France adds "Madame" or "Monsieur" or "Mademoiselle" to each sentence. Even when the customer is talking to the waitress. In Spain and Italy, there is a good deal of hand kissing. YOU don't have to do this. But if you do, you only kiss the hand of a married woman. With unmarried women, you shake hands.

"How can we get over to England from France? I can't fly for health reasons."

You take the crack train "Golden Arrow." (It is marked Fleche d'Or on the French side.) Leaves the Paris Gare du Nord every day—12:30 p.m. as I remember. At Calais you get off and take the channel boat. And at Dover you get the English train to London, arriving 8:30 that night. It's a pleasant trip. Lunch on the French train. Tea on the English.

"You mentioned a kind of hot cakes in Honolulu but I was disappointed in them at my hotel . . ."

The hotel isn't the place. Can't remember the name of the coffee shop. But you walk out of the entrance to the Halekulani. And it's the little place just across the street on the right-hand side. Pancakes with coconut, topped with butter and coconut syrup.

The 'Queen'

This is famed Santa Barbara Mission, usually called "Queen of California Missions", a major tourist attraction for Canadians who flock to Santa Barbara to escape winter (average maximum temperature there in winter is about 70 degrees). Cool interior of old Spanish mission is in marked contrast to sunshine-soaked beaches.

Whoops! Now 50

REGINA (UPI) — The world's whooping crane population increased from 39 to 50 in 1964, according to Ernie Paynter, director of wild life in Saskatchewan.

Paynter said the 11 new whoopers represent the largest increase in many years, and raises hopes the cranes will continue their stately migrations for years to come.

HONOLULU (AP) — Twenty-three men and one woman were plucked from lifeboats by the U.S. Navy cargo ship Greenville Victory 1,100 miles south southwest of Honolulu 11 hours after an engine room explosion killed three men and injured three others on the Danish freighter Margit.

Decision This Year

Scrapyard Fate Faces Mauretania

LONDON (AP) — The Cunard liner Mauretania, 35,655-ton veteran of the New York run, will be withdrawn from service in November and may be broken up.

Cunard said a decision will be taken this year on whether she should be sold, scrapped or chartered, but her life under the Cunard flag is definitely ending.

The Mauretania made her maiden voyage in 1939 and was in New York when the Second World War broke out. Like the Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary she spent the war years as a troopship.

Heading for Europe!

P&O-Orient's 30,000-ton Arcadia sails from Vancouver June 22 for the Caribbean and Europe.

Explore Mexico, Panama and the Caribbean on your way to Europe this year with P&O-Orient—from 17 days, $388.

Now you can sail from Vancouver to France and England on a giant P&O-Orient liner—one of the "biggest bloomin' ships sailing the seven seas." You'll visit up to 9 fascinating ports on the way—for as little as $23 a day. Read highlights below. Then see your travel agent for reservations.

PICTURE yourself at the rail of the P&O-Orient liner in our photograph above, watching Canada fade away behind you.

Ahead are up to three sparkling weeks at sea on a great British ship, one of the biggest and fastest sailing round the world.

You're on the sunlit Pacific bound for California, Acapulco, Panama and ports of the Caribbean. (See itineraries.) You'll be able to shop and go exploring in every port before your P&O-Orient liner turns her bow out into the Atlantic for the crossing to Europe.

Magnificent meals. You step ashore in France or England tanned and fit. Pampered by P&O-Orient's British service and superb international meals. Refreshed by sunlit days of games and swimming. Stimulated by the company of shipmates from every part of the world. You're ready for your second holiday—this time, on land, in Europe.

NOTE: If you plan to fly directly to Europe, why not sail back with P&O-Orient? You can bring home your booty without worrying about excess baggage.

The cost? Your fare to Europe, or back, on P&O-Orient starts at just $525 first class, $388 tourist. Check the schedules below for the sailing you'd like to take.

Then see your travel agent. All fares in U.S. currency.

Ringo's honeymoon will be short. The Beatles start shooting their second movie in about ten days and it will centre around Ringo, if the script remains unchanged.

At one point he is to be attacked by a tiger, but now he's a married man! He should be more responsible, settle down, hand over the cheque and no larking about with oversized kittens.

Kidding aside, we hope he's happy.

Besides all this, the Beatles now have sold the equivalent of 100,000,000 singles. Counting albums as six singles, the Beatles have sold more records in two years than Bing Crosby has in 40.

Hit singles here: Petula Clark has it again. Top seller Downtown leads by one vote over Gary Lewis' This Diamond Ring. Other popular pops are Let's Lock the Door, Jay and the Americans; Tell Her No, Zombies; Laugh, Laugh, Beau Brummels; Ferry Cross the Mersey, Gerry and the Pacemakers, and the Birds and the Bees, Jewel Akins.

Hit LPs: Beatles '65 has staged a rival, leading the Beach Boy Albums, Dave Clark Cross Canada, Gerry and the Pacemakers and the Righteous Brothers' Right Now.

What's happening: A sure hit: I Don't Wanna be Misunderstood, by the Animals.

Teen Letters

"Dear Kitte Turmell: I have a problem at home with my family. Both my mother and father died when I was very young. I now live with my aunt and uncle and three cousins, all boys in teens, who have been mean to me — this just started during the last month. Now everybody in the house seems to have turned against me. I try not to cry but sometimes I just can't help myself. What can I do? 'Unhappy' "

Dear "Unhappy": Try to think back to what started the trouble, then discuss it with your aunt and uncle and ask them to help you glide along with your cousins. You may discover the boys are just teasing, and will treat you in a kindlier way if you make it plain that you don't want to be mean and are part of their family and glad to be.

Act as you would if they were your older brothers and find ways to be happy and contribute to the happiness of the household. Try not to be super-sensitive, and keep your sense of humor as an antidote for self-pity.

"Dear Kitte: I would appreciate an answer to my problem. Recently I got engaged to a boy who wants me to marry him. The trouble is he wants me to live with his mother. It isn't that I don't like her but I think a couple should live alone and have their own family. I want to get married but I don't think living with her would make much of a future for a marriage. Do you thing living with your mother-in-law is the right way for a couple just starting out in life? 'Bride-To-Be-Maybe.' "

Answer: The fact that you already feel as you do indicates you should postpone marriage until you work out a plan to live as a couple, apart from his mother. You may have to work a while to enable your husband to help provide separate maintenance for his mother. If finances are involved, and if care is not needed for an elderly person, the choice is to start out married life as a couple.

Teen-Ager

Girls—Wake Up, Live!

By KITTE TURMELL

Girl likes life, so boy likes girl. It's as simple as that, says Trini Lopez. So wake up, girls, and really live.

"What does a boy expect of a girl as a date?" I asked this young singing star over lunch recently. He'd taken time out of a busy career, as singer and entertainer (who'll probably gross $500,000 this year), to talk about your problems.

"To be interesting, a girl or boy must have personality and enjoy life in general," Trini told me as he slowly sipped his iced tea. "If you enjoy life, you can talk for hours about what you like—flowers, hobbies, people or careers. You'll never be boring.

"Any fellow likes a girl who's a good companion and talkative. I hate it when I ask a question and the girl answers with a flat 'Yes' or 'No' and that is all. But if she has nothing to say, I don't want her to talk either.

"What are good talk-topics? Well, I think everyone likes some kind of music. Ask what kind your date likes—classic or rock 'n' roll—or what records he likes, or which singer or musician. Something new and interesting is always happening in this field.

"The point is, if you're really interested in it—whether it's sports, art or music — you'll make it interesting to your date."

Trini also listed these boosts to date-appeal:

● Grooming—"A man likes a girl who looks her best. Men aren't drawn to girls who look sloppy or don't know how to dress for their type. It's good-looking to be well-groomed. Accessories are important. I like to see girls wearing hats—to me they represent or add maturity."

Trini Lopez

● Appreciation—"Show it in return for things your date does for you. Take nothing for granted. Say 'This is a nice place' or 'What a wonderful dinner that was!' "

● Pampering — "A fellow likes a girl who caters to his tastes and interests, who plays records he likes, goes along with his choice of movies or TV, or suggests something new because she thinks he'd like it, too. She does this in a lady-like way, of course. If she phones, it's for good reason, say, to invite him to a party. But she never does this more than once or twice."

If this sounds pretty one-sided, in favor of the boy, here's what Trini says a girl should expect from her date:

● Respect—"The man shows this in such ways as walking on the outside when on the street, helping her in and out of the car, and offering her the best seat at a table."

● Attention — "When a man turns on the charm, it not only flatters her, it proves to her he's selective in his dating. This makes for a wonderful evening together, whether or not they date again. But if they decide to go steady, he should not turn off the charm."

What kind of a girl would Trini marry? He closed his lively brown eyes in thought before he answered: "She'll be intelligent and well-mannered, Kitte, and polite and considerate. She'll also have a certain magic you find once in a lifetime. And I hope she'll be pretty, too."

Supercalifragilistic-expialidocious!

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Do you have a supercalifragilisticexpialidocious chorus in your house?

We do. Record fancier Caroline Thomas, 6, plays the Mary Poppins album all day and joins in on all the songs.

Even the one with the long title.

Richard and Robert Sherman, who wrote the score, may be the most successful songwriting brothers since the Gershwins.

The album has sold 500,000 copies already and Mary Poppins is only in 21 theatres. The record makers feel sales will go to 2,000,000.

Dick was trying to write serious music and Bob novels, both unsuccessfully, until their father told them to stop being silly and work together. Father Al Sherman wrote Potatoes Are Cheaper and No, No, A Thousand Times No.

Maple Leafs Back in Running For Chance at Higher Spot

By JIM TANG

Victoria Maple Leafs last night got the kind of action at Memorial Arena that they need for their best and they shouldered their way back into contention for the Western Hockey League's show position and stepped to four points ahead of the fourth-place San Francisco Seals by knocking over Portland's leading Buckaroos, 6-3, before 3,550 fans.

A club with a maddening inclination to ease up just when it appears they are in charge, the Leafs have played their best hockey at home when they start hitting and are forced to keep it up when opponents answer back.

They got that kind of action last night from a Portland club which seemed to be offended at the way it's been treated of late by a club which is still trying to balance its record for the season and trying to secure that fourth playoff spot.

Action was on the touchy side, and made touchier by officiating which certainly isn't improving, but the Leafs got the jump. They rode to a 3-0 lead, struck quickly in the second period to get back an offside, power-play goal yielded late in the first period, held off while playing two men short midway through the second period, then struck again for a 5-1 lead for the third period.

THAT LETDOWN

Then came that letdown as the Buckaroos hit for two goals before the period was seven minutes old and got coach Rudy Pilous and Victoria fans to fretting. But the Leafs reacted to the hectic action, got back in charge and were in control at the finish.

Led by Sandy Hucul, who played perhaps his best game of the season with a rousing game on defence and a goal and three assists for the attack, and getting clutch puck-blocking from Al Millar, the Leafs came up with a fine team effort marred only by that shaky third-period start.

Fred Hucul may have set the tone of things by levelling Gerry Goyer twice in the early going with solid checks and John Sleaver got matters on the right track early with a sizzling slap shot which skimmed by Dave Kelly's pads after only 65 seconds of action.

It was the 13th time in their 27 home games that the Leafs got themselves the first goal, and it was to lead to their 12th win in the 13 games.

SCRAPPY MOVE

Steve Witiuk's scrappiness set up the second goal just over three minutes later. Draped over the back of the Portland nets by Jim Hay and Connie Madigan as play roughened and with referee Willie Papp signalling a penalty, Witiuk still managed to get the puck out front.

Keenan did the rest, potting goal No. 29 to again tie Wayne Connely for the league lead.

Ability of Leaf penalty-killers to score may have been what really decided matters.

SHARP ANGLE

With Danny Belisle just about ready to resume action after sitting out a hooking penalty, Sandy Hucul sent Gordie Redahl away down the right side. Redahl got in deep but beat Dave Kelly with a sharply-angled backhander.

It was the 10th time this season that the Leafs have scored while playing shorthanded and Redahl's third such effort.

Art Jones got one back late in the period with Sandy Hucul in the penalty box and officials failing to note Barry Leach was a good stride offside, but rookie Rollie Wilcox backhanded in the rebound off a backhand try by Milan Marcetta in the second minute of the third period to get it back.

Leafs then held out through a hectic session as Marcetta and Sandy Hucul drew successive penalties, got the margin they were to need when Belisle clicked with another rebound.

Two fine stops by Kelly early in the third period almost got things turned around.

Buckaroos broke away after a spectacular save on Lou Jankowski and Tom McVie scored at 1:30. Then Kelly blocked Wilcox, the Bucks got a two-on-one break. Miller stopped the shot but Bill Shvetz drew a penalty for trying too hard to break it up, and Andy Hebenton, Portland's best, got it to 5-3 at 6:34.

Another penalty, less than a minute later, to Shvetz, gave Buckaroos their big chance but the Leafs held off, then went back to the forcing play which is the way to handle the Buckaroos, at their best when they can dictate the pace.

UBC Trips Tide

Penalty goal by Dave Howey with less than five minutes remaining in the game proved the difference as University of British Columbia Thunderbirds edged Victoria Tide, 6-3, at Macdonald Park yesterday in a sudden-death McKechnie Cup playoff game.

Thunderbirds clicked for a try when a Tide pass was intercepted but Victoria tied the score on Terry Ryan's try.

Victoria was defending cup champion and UBC will now play the winner of the North Shore-Vancouver sudden-death semi-final game.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kevin Alexander of London Boxing Club of Victoria defeated clubmate Ricky Cox in a 70-pound match at the Emerald Gloves tournament here last night.

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

Matters appeared to have changed considerably in the Inter-City Lacrosse League, which, barring the unexpected, will open its 1965 schedule late in April with the same four clubs it had in 1964 playing an identical schedule.

Several months back, the two Mainland clubs, feeling they had in Coquitlam an available replacement, were threatening to try and do away with the Nanaimo entry. Today it appears as if the Mainland clubs will be forced to keep Nanaimo on Nanaimo's terms.

Ed Bourke, president of the Nanaimo club, laid Nanaimo's cards on the table at a league meeting in Vancouver Friday night—that his club will remain in the league this season only if the ICLL approves a travel equalization pool with all four clubs sharing equally in the total cost of transportation.

"We are prepared to continue only if the league adopts the travel-equalization pool," Bourke said in a telephone conversation yesterday.

"We're in or out of the league according to what is decided at the annual meeting in Vancouver on Feb. 28. There are no ifs, ands or buts about it. We have decided this is it. If the travel-equalization plan is not adopted we will take a year's leave of absence, as we are entitled to do, to protect our players, and see what happens after that."

Both Bourke and Mason Sheldrick, who attended the meeting as the representative of the Victoria Shamrocks, are confident that the Vancouver and New Westminster clubs will go along with the plan.

"The reaction seemed favorable," Bourke said.

"I think everything went along pretty good," Sheldrick concurred. "I believe the Mainland clubs understand our problem."

The problem is that it costs the two Island clubs approximately $4,500 each season for travel expenses, compared to the approximate $1,750 for Vancouver and New Westminster.

The Nanaimo club goes to the Mainland by ferry from Nanaimo, returns by chartered plane to Pat Bay and from there by chartered bus to Nanaimo, arriving home about 3 each morning.

"The inconvenience is bad enough," Bourke said, "but the cost is killing us. Every year, it's the same. We have no chance to show a profit and our players get nothing out of it. We just can't keep carrying on under these circumstances."

Using the approximate travel costs for each club, a travel-equalization pool would mean each club would contribute about $3,100, a saving of about $1,400 for each of the Island clubs.

That means an added $1,400 in operational costs for the two Mainland clubs but, it seems, they have little choice if the league is to retain its present numerical position.

It has been reported that Coquitlam's backers were unable to resolve either financial or personnel problems and are no longer seeking an ICLL franchise. A three-team league could not hope to operate successfully, but even if the Mainland clubs were willing to try it, they would first have to set up a travel pool to enable Victoria to remain.

"We wouldn't consider a three-team league," Sheldrick said. "For one thing, the travel costs for us would be prohibitive."

LOOSE BALLS: Terry Davis, the little fellow who led the ICLL scoring race last season and who might have been headed from Nanaimo to Victoria Shamrocks had all gone well, will probably sit out this season and it's possible that he may have played his last lacrosse. Davis, it is reported, lost three toes from his right foot in an accident at work. Two were stitched back on, but unless the operation is a success, it seems his playing days may be over . . . the Shamrocks, however, expect Barry Ashbee to return for another ICLL season as soon as his playing commitments in the American Hockey League are finished . . . no verification has so far been possible of the report that Jack E[illegible]da is planning to form a team in Huntsville, his home town, to play in the Ontario Lacrosse Association. It has been reported that he had approached Ashbee and Davis . . . Tom McVie, who has a summer job in Portland, is not likely to play in the ICLL again unless a club comes up with the kind of offer he couldn't turn down . . . lights at Cassidy St[illegible]rt, at least good enough to permit charter flights to set down at night, would ease Nanaimo's burden considerably, but Nanaimo officials so far have been unable to make much headway in this effort . . . Shamrocks will likely name their coach at a meeting Monday night. The two main stipulations from the players are that he be a Victoria resident and a non-playing coach. Jim McNeill, Ed Kowalyk and Tom Druce are the leading condidates . . . Shamrocks expect to have their three Mainland players—Skip Chapman, Dick Crampton and Bill Bradley—back for this season and will likely be bolstered by ex-juniors Ranjit and Nirmal Dillon, John Hansen and Rod Kilduff as well as Charlie Cunningham, who made a good showing when called up from the senior "B" Jokers last season . . . ex-Victoria coach Don Ashbee is said to be set to make application for a refereeing job, and he could turn out to be a good one . . . ICLL teams will experiment with playing three 20-minute periods instead of 15-minute quarters in pre-season exhibition games and note what effect it has on the players.

Yippee!

Chinooks Take Junior League

Victoria Chinooks staged an overpowering team performance at Central Junior High School last night to bury Vancouver CYO, 78-55, and move within bag-packing distance of the Canadian junior men's basketball championships in Hamilton March 1-6.

Last night's win gave Chinooks the inter-city league junior men's playoff championship three games to one over CYO, the 1964 Canadian champ.

The Victoria club, however, must still play Victoria Optimists, an unaffiliated team, in a two-game total-point series at Oak Bay High School next weekend for the B.C. title.

SLOW START

Despite a slow start which saw them trailing 11-5 at one stage, Chinooks didn't panic and fought their way back to an 18-17 lead. Then five successive CYO fouls brought Chinooks eight points and a 26-19 edge. Foul shots provided them with 14 of their points as they built up a 40-29 halftime lead.

And after the interval, although Chinooks stopped giving special attention to CYO's elusive Ed Suderman, the Victoria club maintained its momentum with brilliant rebounding and an unstoppable all-round attack.

STRONG REPLY

While Suderman picked up 21 points (17 of them in the first half), Roger Kettlewell with 12 was the only other CYO player to hit double figures.

In reply, Chinooks had Ken Jackson (18 points), Ken Gregory (17), Barney Spaven (13), Ron Bowker (12) and John Lauvaas (9). It was too potent a combination to stop.

Gregory was particularly outstanding. The big centre who has been Chinooks' mainstay all season displayed his usual fine ball handling and rebounding while managing to find the glory which often eludes him, with his 17 points.

Scorers:

CYO — Charlie Lipp, Dennis Howe, Neil Murray 4, Neil Dumont 2, Ian Donald 4, Norm Bingham 2, Bruce Robertson 2, Mike Brooks, Roger Kettlewell 12, Ed Suderman 21, Neil Worboys 5. Total: 55.

Oak Bay Girls Win Tourney

Oak Bay, Victoria High and Mount View last night qualified for the Vancouver Island girls' high school basketball championship series at Courtenay next weekend following a two-day tournament at Oak Bay High School.

Oak Bay emerged as tournament champion with a 36-27 win over second place Victoria High in the final game last night. Mount View whipped Esquimalt, 30-21, to take third spot, with Esquimalt fourth.

Oak Bay reached the final by beating Esquimalt, 48-25, in one semi-final and Victoria High beat Mount View, 32-28, in the other.

In consolation games, St. Ann's Academy defeated Belmont, 30-24, and Belmont beat North Saanich, 33-23.

Three provincial men's curling champions were named Saturday. Harold Worth of Saskatoon defeated Bob Pickering of Avonlea, 11-8, to win the Saskatchewan title.

Calgary's Nick Lashuk will carry Alberta colors after a 12-4 victory over Hec Gervais.

Ron Grant of Unionville will represent southern Ontario for the third time. He won a round-robin with six victories and one loss.

The Canadian final for the Brier tankard will be held in Saskatoon starting March 1.

Toronto Chills Wings

Frank Mahovlich's third period goal gave Toronto Maple Leafs a 2-1 National Hockey League victory over Detroit Red Wings last night and moved them into a second place tie with Montreal Canadiens, four points behind leading Chicago Black Hawks.

In afternoon games, Canadiens were stopped, 5-4, by last place Boston Bruins while Chicago shut out New York Rangers, 3-0, before a capacity New York crowd of 15,925.

Crozier had been a standout for Wings, especially in the second period when Leafs threatened to break a 1-1 game.

Andy Bathgate scored Toronto's first goal, on a power play, but Bruce MacGregor got that back for Wings when his long, spinning shot dribbled between Toronto goalkeeper Terry Sawchuk's legs into the net.

Victoria Wins Two Island Titles

Victoria juveniles and bantams won Vancouver Island minor hockey championships at Nanaimo last night, while Victoria midgets were eliminated in their Island final with Nanaimo. All series were two-game, total-goal affairs.

In the juvenile game last night, Victoria won, 8-2, after surrendering the game's first two goals, to take the round, 14-6.

Nanaimo won last night's bantam game, 5-3, but dropped the round, 9-8.

Nanaimo scored after 8:15 of an overtime period, with Victoria playing a man short, to take the midget crown with a 3-2 win. The first game had ended in a 5-5 tie.

CFL Cuts Imports In Economy Move

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian Football League clubs trimmed their rosters down to 32 players from 33 Saturday by agreeing to sign 14, not 15 imports. They'll still carry 18 Canadians.

Delegates to the closing session of the annual CFL meeting also decided to limit each club to three naturalized Canadians effective this season. Teams with more than three U.S.-born players who have played five seasons in Canada and have taken out citizenship papers must carry the others as imports.

As in 1964, the clubs will be allowed to dress 13 imports and 17 Canadians for each game.

Commissioner G. Sydney Halter, who agreed to continue on as boss of Canadian pro football for another two years, said economy was behind the move to cut the rosters by one American.

Confining the teams to three naturalized Canadians could mean that these players would be more evenly spread out among the nine clubs and thus "equalize" playing strength, said Halter.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Toronto Argonauts, last-place clubs in their respective conferences, now are the only clubs with more than three naturalized Canadians, Halter said.

But other clubs soon would reach or surpass the number and delegates felt now was the time to make the move.

On the recommendation of the general managers, the league rejected common scouting for all nine teams and a plan whereby the National Football League would send players to the CFL until recalled. The managers felt this plan would set up the Canadian league as a farm operation for the NFL.

The Eastern Conference is to meet within the next few months to consider changing their total-points final to a best-of-three series, the system now used by the west.

Halter, announcing that he has agreed to stay on as commissioner for two more years, said "that probably will be it."

There had been reports Halter would quit at this meeting. He told reporters "I would have been happy to call it a day."

George Royal Strong Third

Gun Bow Back and Winning

ARCADIA, Calif. — The brilliant Gun Bow came off a period of inactivity to score an impressive victory in the $57,500 San Antonio Handicap here Saturday.

Gun Bow held onto the lead in the final jumps to the wire despite the charge of Candy Spots and B.C. bred George Royal.

Candy Spots was second by three-quarters of a length and George Royal a neck behind in third. Such as Hill Rise, Duel and Pelegrin, all recent Santa Anita stakes winners, were also-rans.

George Royal got a good ride from Johnny Longden, who replaced Don Richardson after the B.C. horse had come up with some lack-lustre performances recently. He ran in his usual trailing position until the final quarter in the mile and an eighth race.

Stars Fall To United

Two goals by Jim Jamieson gave Victoria United a 4-2 victory over the Victoria and District League All-stars in an exhibition soccer game at Royal Athletic Park yesterday before about 300 fans.

Jamieson capitalized on easy chances for both his goals. His first, which tied the score after Jim Schultz headed all-stars into a 1-0 lead, was a first-time effort from about 10 yards on a pass from Harold Holroyd at 25 minutes of the first half. And just before full-time Jamieson hit a rebound into an empty goal.

Ced Robb sent United ahead 2-1 just before the interval, and George Paul made it 3-1 with a long swerving shot at 20 minutes of the second half. Schultz got the All-stars' other goal when he tapped a pass from Alan Metcalfe into a vacant net.

Yesterday's scores: Firefighters 0, New Westminster 0; Columbus 0, UBC 0.
Next game: today — North Shore vs. Canadians.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two scoreless-tie games dominated Pacific Coast Soccer League action here Saturday.

Vancouver Firefighters moved back into sole possession of first place on the strength of the one point they earned playing New Westminster Royals to a 0-0 tie.

The other scoreless game, between University of British Columbia Thunderbirds and Columbus, did not affect league standings.

In the Columbus-UBC game, Columbus mounted a strong first-half attack with the wind at their backs while UBC was content to keep its goal spotless.

In the second half, with the field positions reversed, UBC remained on the defensive but Columbus pressed strongly in the closing minutes to try and break the scoreless deadlock.

Firefighters were outplayed in their game with Royals as the New Westminster squad adapted themselves better to the windy weather.

Firefighters' single point from the tie moved them into sole possession of the league leadership.

Snell Nips Crothers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Peter Snell of New Zealand won the 1,000-yard feature race of the Los Angeles Times indoor games Saturday night, defeating his arch rival, Bill Crothers of Toronto in a spirited race with a winning time of 2:07.9.

The 26-year-old Snell, running on the boards for the last time in his career, finished four yards in front of Crothers, who was timed in 2:08.4 before a packed crowd of 13,278 in the sports arena.

Still Wall In Panama

PANAMA (AP) — Art Wall Jr.'s putting magic deserted him Saturday after two brilliant sub-par rounds but the Pennsylvania veteran held a three-stroke lead after 54 holes of the Panama Open Golf Tournament.

Wall soared to a three-over-par 73 and 205 total.

Al Besselink of Grossinger, N.Y., with a third-round 68, and Keith Guise of Mexico City, with a 69, moved into a second-place tie at 209.

Victoria's Bill Wakeham had rounds of 79 and 74 but his third round score was not available.

Leeds United, Chelsea Keep Up Torrid Pace

LONDON (AP) — Chelsea raced to a 3-0 victory at Blackburn Saturday and kept alive a neck-and-neck race with Leeds United at the top of the English soccer league standings.

Goals from Bobby Tambling in the first half and from Bert Murray and Barry Bridges in the second half gave Chelsea the victory.

In the meantime, Leeds United kept close to Chelsea by winning 2-1 from Arsenal at London's Highbury Stadium.

Arsenal was hit by an injury to George Eastham, its captain and star, in the second half. Leeds' winning goal came from Don Weston in the 75th minute.

Chelsea and Leeds United are tied for first on points with 44 each, but Chelsea leads on goal average.

Manchester United, 3-2 winners over Burnley, is third with 41 points, followed by Tottenham Hotspur with 34, Nottingham Forest with 33 and Liverpool with 32.

Manchester United, England's representatives in the European Inter-cities Fairs Cup, kept close to the English league leaders by defeating Burnley 3-2.

One of the biggest upsets of the day was at Fulham where Tottenham Hotspur slumped to a 4-1 defeat.

In Scotland, Rangers were held to a 1-1 draw in Glasgow by Hearts, the First Division leaders, before a crowd of 45,000.

Hearts, with 37 points, lead by two points over Hibernian, which beat St. Johnstone 2-0.

Stirling Albion, run-away leaders in the Second Division, were held to a 1-1 away draw by Queen of the South, despite the home side losing Danny Currie with a broken leg in the 18th minute.

Esquimalt Teamsters defeated Metropolitan, 27-20, Friday to square their best-of-three Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association pre-midget boys' final.

One-Sided Wins

One-sided victories were prominent in Combination Soccer League activity yesterday as Rangers blanked Island Tug, 3-0, Hotspurs whipped Falcons, 8-1, and Duncan defeated Malahat, 6-2.

In one other game, Royal Roads and RCN played to a 2-2 tie.

Bert Yancey Aiming For First Pro Victory

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Bert Yancey of Philadelphia tapped in a short birdie putt on the final green Saturday and took the undisputed lead after 54 holes of the $67,500 Phoenix Open golf tournament.

Yancey, a 26-year-old pro who never has won a professional golf tournament, shot a three-under-par 69 for a three-round total of 206, ten strokes under par.

It gave him a one-stroke advantage over Al Geiberger and Rod Funseth.

Tom Nieporte was just two strokes back at 208 and four others, including defending champion Jack Nicklaus, were three strokes off the pace.

LEONARD OFF

George Knudson of Toronto was in a two-way tie with 211 while Stan Leonard of Vancouver and seven others bogged down at 215.

Economic Winter Hibernation Hits Everyone

Old Habit Patterns Cause Hardship

Habit dies hard in Victoria — especially the habit of economic hibernation during the winter months, says E. E. (Ted) Chamberlin, chairman of the Greater Victoria Winter Employment Committee.

Although winter still brings a 40 per cent increase in the number of unemployed, the figure once stood at 160 per cent, says Mr. Chamberlin.

A satisfying reduction? Yes, but 40 per cent still means a lot of people without incomes.

The cause, then and now, is failure of Mr. and Mrs. Victoria to crack a habit pattern handed down from agrarian forefathers.

"From our agricultural ancestors we inherited a pattern of thought that spring and summer is the time to get most jobs done and winter is a time to relax and take things easy.

"This may have been satisfactory when each household was a self-sustaining unit. But it doesn't work any more, now that most people are dependent on an employer for a livelihood. Even when it works — it works so poorly that everyone, including the employer suffers from the effect.

PLANNING AHEAD

"To get the most out of our earning power we must now work for 12 months of the year. When we do, we can calculate our income in advance and can plan on buying such things as homes, cars, refrigerators and television sets with reasonable certainty and regularity.

"Everytime we make such a purchase, or have some other form of work done, we are providing work for many people. They use the pay it provides to make other purchases, some of which help to pay our wages.

SETTING OF CYCLE

"In other words, we set a cycle in motion that returns benefits to ourselves. To get the most out of this cycle it has to be kept in constant motion. The way this is done is to spread our purchases or provision of jobs as evenly as possible over the whole year."

Nobody is exempt from this community operation adds Mr. Chamberlin.

"The business operator who wants to make a $100,000 addition to his building, or your next-door neighbor who wants to have his lawnmower sharpened both provide work for people."

EVERYONE CAN HELP

"A man who buys a can of paint and a brush to paint a chair or a woman who buys yarn for mending are both helping to keep a series of people at work."

This is what the committee means when it asks people to take a critical view of habits.

"If we abandon the old summer and winter habits and spread our work and spending as evenly as possible over the 12-month period work can become constant and winter layoffs a thing of the past," said Mr. Chamberlin.

B.C. Hydro Orders Five Generators

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority has placed an order for five generators valued at $7,600,000 with the Canadian General Electric Company plant here, the company announced Saturday.

Three of the generators will be delivered in 1967, the other two in 1968. They will be installed at an underground powerhouse at the Portage Mountain dam, 580 miles north of Vancouver.

IMMEDIATE START

James B. Girven, manager of the motor and generator plant here, said designing of the generators will begin immediately. Actual production will start in four or five months.

The Portage Mountain dam will be 600 feet high and more than a mile long. It will trap run-off water from more than 27,000 square miles, creating the province's largest lake.

Ultimate capacity of the power station will be 10 hydro-electric generators.

Spread Spending Over the Year To Spread Cheer

Seasonal buying habits are second only to bad weather in causing unemployment, says National Employment Service spokesman H. W. Smith.

Because climate itself can't be controlled, the construction industry and its related suppliers have found some ways of counteracting bad weather.

"Cement and mortars were developed that could be poured just as well in winter as in summer. Weatherproofed materials were invented. Paints were developed that can be applied in rain or snow and ways were found to defeat the effects of mud and snow.

PROJECTS PLANNED

"Construction companies began to plan their projects so that the maximum amount of work could be enclosed or sheltered during the worst of the weather, thus allowing extensive work to continue in spite of rain or snow," said Mr. Smith.

"But seasonal buying habits are not so easily overcome. So much in this field depends on the general public, who, in the main, have not yet realized how much of the nation's productivity depends on how and when they spend their money.

"The majority of families have only so much money to spend, but if they habitually channel this spending into certain times of the year such as Easter and Christmas then everyone from the retail store to the manufacturer of the raw materials experience peak loads requiring additional workers followed by extreme slackness when almost all the staff is laid off.

"The only answer is for everybody to review their known and anticipated purchases for the whole year and then to schedule them so that they are spread as evenly as possible over the entire 12 months.

HOLIDAYS, TOO

"The time of holidays produces similar reactions to buying habits but is a factor that is more easily being overcome.

"Most progressive companies," said Mr. Smith, "have found out that it is more economical to keep their machines and equipment working all year round.

"Their crews are more efficient and turnover is lower when work is steady.

"Consequently, these firms, instead of closing down for holidays as in the past, now spread holidays over the whole year and generally keep a small crew trained in all the operations to replace workers who are absent."

Maple Leaf Appears At Border

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (AP) —White doves of peace flew over the Maple Leaf flag and the Stars and Stripes on Saturday after ceremonies marking 150 years of peace between the United States and Canada.

A commemorative service was held on the international boundary at the middle of the Rainbow Bridge here, to celebrate the ratification Feb. 17, 1815, of the Treaty of Ghent, which ended the war of 1812.

Color parties from the New York National Guard and Canada's Lincoln and Welland Regiment led dignitaries from both countries to the boundary as veterans' organizations watched from both sides.

At the end of the ceremonies, two dozen white doves were released.

$2½ Million 'Lab' Invites Visitors

A ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held Monday to mark the official opening of the new $2,500,000 federal government Forest Research Laboratory on Burnside Road.

Opening ceremonies will be conducted by Lieutenant-Governor G. R. Pearkes starting at 2 p.m. outside the main entrance.

More than 400 people from all parts of British Columbia have been invited to attend the ceremony and to tour the research centre.

Guests will include officials of B.C. forest industry, university and scientific organizations, as well as senior provincial and federal civil service officials.

Federal deputy minister L. Z. Rousseau, Ottawa, and Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston will be present.

There will be open house for the public on Tuesday and Wednesday between 7 and 9 p.m. Children will not be admitted unless accompanied by adults.

New Federal Government Forest Research Centre is imposing-looking structure.

Native wood panelling is featured in spacious foyer.

RESEARCH FACILITIES TOPS ON CONTINENT

Victorians can rightly be proud of Canada's new Forest Research Laboratory on Burnside Road.

It is the most modern of its kind on the North American continent, according to forestry officials.

It is also equipped with the latest in precision equipment and facilities to fight insects and diseases — the two main enemies of B.C. trees.

In many ways it resembles a large medical research centre. But the emphasis is on the well-being of trees instead of man.

For the laboratory is vital to B.C.'s forest wealth, the province's greatest natural resource.

More than half of the land area of the province is forest and is the source of immense quantities of lumber, pulpwood, fuelwood and other wood products valued at millions of dollars.

And dependent on the forest too are B.C.'s great hydro electric power systems, fish, game, recreation and even agriculture as trees conserve the moisture of the soil and regulate the flow of streams and rivers.

Situated on 22 acres of property at 560 Burnside Road West, the three-storey building has a total of 30 laboratories devoted to various aspects of forest research.

Some of these include insect pathology, forest pathology, insect and disease survey, mycology (fungi and mushrooms), insect control, forest fire research, soils, land classification, tree physiology and photometry.

In addition to these laboratories there are 18 rooms or chambers to be used for the conditioning, growth, forcing and freezing of plants and insects.

The administrative side of the building comprises 65 offices.

Working in various fields of plant and insects research are 34 scientists and research officers.

There are also 30 technicians, six engineers and 10 administrative staff personnel.

Built at a cost of $2,399,000, the building has a gross floor area of 80,000 square feet.

It would cover nearly two acres if constructed as a single-storey building.

The reason for so much space is because research groups, formerly under a number of federal government departments, have been brought under one roof. They are now all joined as a district regional working unit.

It is hoped that this will lead to greater efficiency, but it will take months before all the administrative bugs are straightened out.

The total length and width of the three-storey building is 265 by 45 feet. A penthouse, accommodating mainly air conditioning units, also runs along the full length of the laboratory.

On the eastern face to the rear and connected by underground tunnel, as well as a first floor passageway is the power plant.

The building also has a full basement.

A feature of the building's interior is its wood panelling.

The executive offices and conference room have all been panelled with bird's eye maple seasoned for 25 years.

The stairwell and entrance panels are made of walnut. Birch was used for the corridor walls and research office and oak for the administrative block floors.

Forest Staff Reorganized Into Unit

While his staff is fighting to keep B.C. forests green and healthy, Ray R. Lejeune will be ironing out difficulties in reorganizing the staff at the new Dominion Forestry Research Centre.

Appointed recently as acting regional director, Mr. Lejeune will co-ordinate all phases of research in the new lab. He has both the scientific background and experience to cope with the reorganizational program.

He graduated from the University of Manitoba as a bachelor of science in agriculture. Later he received his master of science.

He joined the federal government service in 1939 working in forest entomology. He was transferred to Victoria from Winnipeg in 1955 taking over the forest entomology and pathology labs.

Chief engineer at the lab is George Drewery.

He spent much of his childhood in Victoria and, after travelling extensively throughout the world, returned here a few years ago.

46 YEARS OF RESEARCH
...A BEGINNING

The Government of Canada has conducted forest research in British Columbia continuously since 1919. To keep pace with the Province's dynamic forestry development over the intervening years has been a great challenge.

Now, as British Columbia enters an unprecedented era of expansion in her forest economy, the Department of Forestry of Canada moves to meet the intensified need for fundamental and applied research — never more critical.

The opening of the Department's new Forest Research Laboratory in Saanich climaxes the work of almost a half-century, and marks a new beginning through the establishment of forest research facilities second to none, to better serve the people of British Columbia.

Punching Policeman Costs Youth Jail Term

An early-morning punch thrown at a policeman earned 20-year-old Kenneth Robinson of no fixed address, a three-month jail term when he appeared Saturday in city magistrate's court.

The bearded youth, charged with assaulting a peace officer, pleaded guilty to that and another charge of impaired driving.

For the driving offence, Magistrate J. A. Byers fined the youth $300 and suspended his licence for six months.

Constable James Ramsay of the city police testified that at about 1:30 a.m. Saturday he had gone in the patrol wagon to Douglas near Pandora, where the car Robinson was driving was stopped after the youth had driven through a red light.

Robinson, who had liquor on his breath, was escorted into the patrol wagon and Const. Ramsay climbed in after him.

As he did so, Robinson hit him on the left side of his face.

Robinson continued to be violent on the drive to the police station, although he did not succeed in striking Const. Ramsay a second time.

When Robinson had calmed down, he said he was worried because he had been driving a borrowed car and had wanted to be allowed to park the vehicle, in case it got damaged.

A police car hit speeds of up to 85 miles an hour early Saturday morning before catching two teen-age drivers on West Saanich Road, court was told in another case.

Raymond Jones, 18, of 1288 Marchant, and John Keef, 19, of 6075 West Saanich, both pleaded guilty to charges of dangerous driving.

Each was fined $100 and had his licence suspended for six months.

Fines of $100 each were imposed on two men who pleaded guilty to impaired driving charges.

They were Kenneth W. Scace, 1336 Richardson, and Leroy Taylor, 1048 Craigdarroch.

Scace was stopped on Cadboro Bay Road last Jan. 23 after his erratic driving had forced a police car onto a curb.

He told police he had drunk six rye whiskies in the space of one hour.

Taylor was stopped on Douglas near Vanalman Jan. 22.

The licence of each man was restricted to use for business purposes only for three months.

George Novak, 1017 Greenridge, received a $300 fine for impaired driving and had his licence suspended for six months.

Novak, who pleaded guilty, was involved in a collision with another car at the Douglas-Finlayson intersection early Saturday morning.

"I'm a stranger in town and very unfamiliar with the streets," said a Nova Scotian who pleaded guilty to careless driving.

Carl Alexander Newman of Springhill, N.S., went through a red light Friday on Foul Bay Road at the Lansdowne intersection and was involved in a collision.

Newman, who said he failed to see the red light because he was looking for street signs, was fined $40.

Mending Money Is Possible To Make Big Haul Pay Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver's great train robbery that might have been, may be after all.

Police forces across Canada and the United States have been alerted to watch for the four men who robbed a Canadian Pacific Railway warehouse here of three boxes of cancelled money.

COULD BE PATCHED

The bandits obtained an estimated $1,250,000 in bills punched with three half-inch holes and experts say the holes could be patched enough to make the money passable.

But they said it would take the capabilities of a well-organized gang.

Police agree the gang that lifted the money boxes was certainly well organized, and they believe the money may start to be passed in about a week.

The bills in the boxes ranged from $1 to $1,000.

Had they not been cancelled, it would have been the biggest haul ever for a Vancouver holdup, city Police Chief Ralph Booth said Friday.

IN THREE BOXES

The bills were in three boxes, each weighing about 300 pounds, kept in a cage inside the downtown CPR warehouse.

Money clerk Doug Kuzmicky, 25, was on duty inside the cage Thursday night, when three men walked up to the door and knocked.

He looked through a slot, and saw a man in a CPR policeman's uniform.

When he opened the door, the three men outside muscled their way in and bound and gagged him.

Then the three men wheeled the boxes out on a handcart to a waiting station wagon, driven by a fourth man.

Castro Quebec Model?

MONTREAL (CP) — Provincial Secretary Bona Arsenault says separatism could force Quebec to "follow the path of Castro."

He told the opening session of the Quebec Student Liberal Federation Friday night that an independent nation of French-speaking Canadians, if fanatical enough, could arouse 200,000,000 English-speaking North Americans against it.

"Then our little separatists would have no choice but to follow the path of Castro."

Mr. Arsenault said he was confident that, with the evolution of co-operative federalism, Canada would emerge with "nine provinces and a state."

The state — Quebec — "would have "the greatest autonomy possible within Confederation."

Car Crash Kills Five Teen-Agers

WINNIPEG (CP)—Five teen-agers died Saturday when the car in which they were riding crashed into a concrete abutment that divides Highway 4 about 20 miles north of Winnipeg near Selkirk.

Two teen-agers are in hospital.

Dead are Gordon Robert Hawes, 19, of Selkirk; Gordon Blair Wright, 19, of Asherne, Man., Alice May Palmer, 16, of Selkirk, Evelyn Joan Durie, 17, of Selkirk and Lawrence Alexander Gunn, 18, of Selkirk. Gunn died in hospital.

In serious condition in hospital was Raymond Paul Motkaluk, 19, of Selkirk. Glenn Harlan Kelly, 17, of Asherne was in fair condition.

Police said the car was travelling along the inside lane of the four-lane highway and had just passed a panel truck when it hit the abutment.

An inquest has been ordered.

Gordon Head

Road in Need Of Quick Repair

An Oak Bay council committee has decided a major repair job is needed on Gordon Head Road, and not all the work can be put off until 1966.

'B' committee included the road on its tour of projects Saturday, at the request of Saanich Public Works Committee.

Gordon Head Road is a boundary road between the two municipalities.

MAJOR JOB

The Saanich committee has proposed a major job be done on this road in 1966, at a shared cost of $40,000.

"The portion shared by the municipalities is 2,400 feet long," said Oak Bay engineer G. O. White.

"The $40,000 would pay for a 22-foot wide road. Curbing and sidewalks would double the cost," he said.

The letter from Saanich will be turned over to Oak Bay council Monday night.

'B' committee will recommend some work be done on the road to keep it in repair in 1965.

The engineer estimated the cost of this work will be approximately $2,000, and Saanich will probably be approached to share this cost.

Mr. White said Gordon Head Road was never properly constructed, was damaged by winter weather this season, and the oil surface is flaking off.

DRIVING ON GRASS

The touring committee looked at the intersection of Upper Terrace and Uplands, and found cars had been driving around on the grass triangle at the intersection.

The committee will recommend placing of a cable around the triangle to keep cars out.

The committee will recommend lighting be installed on Mayhew Street where buses stop.

Another light will be installed on Sunset Avenue and a tree will come down if the committee's recommendations are accepted.

The committee will also recommend:

● Widening of Barkley Street near King George Terrace over a 400-foot section at a cost of $1,887 to permit car parking on one side.

● Close cutting of a hedge and removal of one tree to provide better view for motorists at the intersection of Newport and St. David.

● More parking on some residential streets, including Henderson near Uplands school, to permit smoother passage of traffic.

First-of-a-Kind Premier—and Picture

Premier Bennett establishes new record Monday by becoming premier to hold office longer than any in B.C. history. Here he is shown with his cabinet in rare photograph taken by Jim Ryan — first of its kind ever taken by a press cameraman. Cabinet ministers are, from left, Trade and Commerce Minister Ralph Loffmark, Agriculture Minister Frank Richter, Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston, Health Minister Eric Martin, Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan, Premier Bennett, Attorney-General Robert Bonner, Provincial Secretary and Welfare Minister Wesley Black, Works Minister William Chant, Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Donald Brothers, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and Education and Labor Minister Leslie Peterson.

Gorge Priority

Esquimalt Gives Stadium Plan Cold Shoulder

By GARY OAKES

A Saanich proposal to build a multipurpose stadium as a joint centennial project has already run into a snag.

"We think development of the Gorge is much more important," Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtele said after learning of the proposal advanced Saturday by Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis.

ESQUIMALT WILLING

Esquimalt is willing to work with other Greater Victoria municipalities in developing a wonderful tourist attraction out of the Gorge, Reeve Wurtele added.

He agreed a multipurpose stadium would be very nice, but feels there is a more pressing need to work on the Gorge.

SUPPORT, TOO

But support for the idea came from acting Mayor Cecil M. Parrott, who says:

"Greater Victoria certainly needs something like that, and the centennial grants might be the way to get it."

Each municipality may want to work on individual centennial projects, Ald. Parrott said, adding:

"But a joint plan would achieve more."

GETTING TOGETHER

The obvious problem with a joint project, he added, is getting everybody together.

Victoria Ald. Millard Mooney wants a multipurpose stadium built as a joint project but not until Royal Athletic Park is rebuilt and modernized.

Ald. Mooney believes the type of stadium outlined by Reeve Curtis would be too ambitious a centennial project.

WANTS TO HEAR ALL

Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox is purposely noncommittal about the Saanich suggestion because he wants to hear all proposals before making up his mind.

Reeve Curtis suggested forming a committee to work with the centennial group to investigate the whole matter.

The reeve's proposal calls for a stadium built in stages on a 30-40-acre site to handle parking.

'INDIVIDUAL, TEAM'

"The design concept should be as multipurpose as possible with a wide range of facilities for individual and team use as well as accommodation for spectator sports and mass appeal events," Reeve Curtis wrote in a letter to the councils of Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

He suggests the development be in stages because only $450,000 would be available under centennial grants.

NOT SUBSTITUTE

The stadium should not be designed to take the place of the normal recreation park and playfield requirements in the individual municipalities, the reeve said.

For example, Athletic Park should be retained for limited sports use.

And Reeve Curtis believes it important to get views of all Greater Victoria athletic and sporting groups.

Stall Seeking High and Low

Bounty from the root cellar is in demand for the next free food stall, Feb. 20.

"We need any food that's fit to eat," said Mrs. E. E. Harper, manager of the stall at 732A Cormorant Street.

"Residents are asked to give special attention to vegetables; they may have some vegetables in the basement we could give out," said Mrs. Harper.

Residents with food to donate may call Mrs. Harper at 658-8177. Victoria Labor Council will collect the food.

Foster Children Offer Prize Of Achievement

By A. H. MURPHY

(Second of Two Articles)

There are children, mostly teen-agers, who desperately need the protection of a Victoria home. That is known. What is not known is that it can be an interesting and rewarding experience for those who take them in.

Mrs. B. Lewitz Packford, whose job it is to find homes for homeless adolescents, so they won't end up in such places as Brannan Lake or Willingdon Home for Girls, points out that foster-parenthood doesn't always work.

"Some of these children just won't react to normality and affection. Their backgrounds have led them to be extremely suspicious of adults—in fact of all people. But, believe me, it is a real achievement and a triumph for anyone who can bring them back into the human race," she says.

Two couples who have taken children and who have found that the joys and satisfactions outweigh the dislocations which are a part of being a foster parent, are Herbert and Joan Lane, 804 McKenzie, and an Oak Bay family.

The Lanes have sheltered about 15 youngsters, about half of them teen-agers and all girls.

"We have a big house and we decided to furnish it the best way we knew how—with children," said Mr. Lane. "We have never regretted our decision."

What displaced children need most of all, and what the foster parent must have plenty of to dole out, is—love, according to the Lanes.

There are few rules this family has worked out but they seem to be the same regulations most parents use with their children.

The foster-parent must give the children plenty of love, but it must be tempered with discipline and a sense of fair play. There must be plenty of give and take, with a little more give on the side of the adult.

Problems, and there are problems, must be solved and worked out as they come along. Common sense is the most useful tool in the ironing-out of difficulties.

"Foster children are like all kids. Some are bright and some are dull, some obedient and some not, some gay and some moody—just like the members of your own family.

"But, unlike the members of your own family, their need for security and reassurance may be greater. Most of them have been put through more than a child should have to suffer and they need more help," says Mrs. Lane.

Many of the adolescents have had their education interrupted; some are almost without education, and that presents difficulties. The ordinary amenities of life, taken for granted by most children, are new to many foster children and they must be told what to do and how to do it and why.

This takes patience and forbearance.

The Oak Bay couple would have no part of the word "problems" as applied to the relation between foster-children and parents.

"The word really has no significance," said the father who has taken a total of six boys into his home over a two-year period, and who has two lads with them at present.

"These children have difficulties as all children have difficulties. We use exactly the same methods in working them out that we use with our own children."

Neither father nor mother had any good words for the provincial "industrial school" at Brannan Lake nor for Willingdon School for Girls on the mainland.

Stories of solitary confinement in bare cells all were true, they said. They had talked with boys who had been there.

"These youngsters run away from Brannan. Of course they do. They are just trying to escape from an intolerable situation such as any adult would. Some of them have been running away from trouble and ugliness all their lives. Believe me, they've got a break coming to them," said the mother.

One of the boys in this household, a lad with a tortured past, has demonstrated an amazing talent for music.

With little or no training, he sits at the piano and improvises. A bit shaky on the technical side, he plays with depth and sensitivity.

Exposed to formal musical training for the first time, he is eating it up.

"It's a wrench when they leave to go back to their parents, as most of them do," admit the mothers. "You see, they are rejected by their parents but they never reject their parents, no matter how they have been treated. Makes you think, doesn't it?"

Car Hit Gateposts

Driver Hurled from Car

By AL ARNASON

A Metchosin man was thrown nearly 30 feet from his car Saturday evening when it smashed into two heavy gateposts in front of a Gorge Road motel.

City police were still withholding the name of the driver early today.

He was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital in an unconscious condition, but was later reported semi-conscious and in fair condition.

Police had been unable to locate next of kin of the seriously injured man.

Police are working on the theory the compact model British car went out of control when the driver suddenly noticed a woman pedestrian standing at the curb near a bus stop.

ALONE IN CAR

William Layman, 2965 Earl Grey, said:

"I didn't see the actual crash, but it looked as if the car hit one of the concrete gateposts outside the motel and then smashed into the other." Mr. Layman had been driving home and stopped at the accident scene before police arrived.

"The man seemed to have been alone in the car. He was lying on the motel driveway, maybe 25 or 30 feet from the car.

EYES OPEN

"He seemed to be in a deep sleep but his eyes were open and he was bleeding from the back of the neck.

"The light was pretty good at the time. It must have been about 5:20 p.m.," said Mr Layman.

Mr. Layman said people who arrived at the scene earlier told him the driver may have lost control of the car in an attempt to stop suddenly for a pedestrian.

HARDLY MARKED

Windsor Motel owner William Brown described the reinforced posts as six feet high and three feet thick.

"They were hardly marked at all," he said.

"He must have had the brakes on hard because the boulevard grass was all torn up. Some of it flew right into the yard," said the motel operator.

Alarm Ringers Sought

Two black-clad youths were being sought by city police early today after three separate false alarms drew fire rigs into Saturday night traffic.

A woman told police she saw the youths loitering near one of the call boxes.

The alarms were sounded at 9:47 p.m., Fernwood and Bay; 10:07 p.m., Queens and Quadra and 10:30 p.m., Blanshard and Kings.

Mud, Cold and Comradeship Recalled

50 Veterans Look Back 50 Years

By DON GAIN
Colonist Military Reporter

Fifty survivors of Victoria's 30th Battalion celebrated the 50th anniversary of their departure for the First World War at a dinner in the Ingraham Hotel Saturday.

It was 50 years ago at noon today, St. Valentine's Day, when 1,100 men bade Victoria goodbye aboard the ferries Princess Adelaide and Princess Mary.

The faded snapshots passed around last night brought memories of Willows racetrack, the CPR wharf, the dockyard and towns in England, France and Germany.

Surprisingly spry were the veterans, ranging in age from 66 to 80. There are 98 survivors in all, spread from California to the British Isles but most of them in B.C. M. M. Lamb of Amherstburg, Ont., came the farthest distance for the reunion.

Oldest member was William Pearce of 520 St. Patrick, who retired to Victoria 10 years ago from the prairies.

They talked of their voyage from Halifax to Avonmouth on the SS. Missanabi, Megantic and Vauderland escorted by the British cruiser HMS Essex.

Oldest at reunion was William Pearce, 80, of Oak Bay, who was transferred to 4th Company, Royal Canadian Engineers.—(Jim Ryan)

Gas Attack

They talked of their time at Napier Barracks in Shorncliffe near Folkestone. It wasn't long before they were split up to join the 7th, 15th and 16th Battalions in France.

"I remember when 311 of them joined the 16th in the middle of the second battle of Ypres, just after the gas attack of April 22," said Major Alex MacLennan, 1121 Reynolds.

"They made up five per cent of our strength and won 8.5 per cent of the decorations," he said. "Fifty-one were commissioned in the field, 29 with the Canadians and 22 with the Imperial services. They won 35 decorations."

Scots Motto

Major MacLennan pointed to the Canadian Scottish motto on his blazer.

"Lieut. Norman Cameron and I chose that for our motto in 1914," he said. "It's Deas Gu Cath—Ready for the Fray."

"I remember that Sunday. We left at noon," said Henry Simmonds of Crofton, London-born Mr. Simmonds brought home an English wife in 1919 and they have lived in Crofton ever since.

"I was with the 88th Royal Victoria Fusiliers," said Major Harold Nation, 2380 Windsor.

All Lined Up

"The colonel lined us up and said 'The war's on. What are we going to do?' and we all stepped forward."

"I came from Kamloops with the Rocky Mountain Rangers," said Leslie Eastman, 681 Newport.

"The 30th was made up of the 88th, the Rangers, the 50th Gordon Highlanders of Victoria and the 68th Militia Regiment of Prince Rupert," said Jack Pinson of Chemainus.

"I get a wonderful feeling out of these affairs," he said. "It's too bad the feeling of comradeship and co-operation we have in wartime doesn't continue into peacetime."

The men spoke of their most decorated men—Col. Cy Peck who won the Victoria Cross, the DSO and bar and was mentioned in despatches five times; Col. James Scroggie, who won the DSO, the Military Cross and two bars and the Medaille Militaire.

Mud and Cold

The men spoke of the mud and the cold and the lice.

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow said "God bless you" on behalf of Mayor Wilson and the citizens of Victoria.

They saw a film of the desperate days in France—Lest We Forget.

Unit Reunion

Canadian Scottish Regimental Association annual reunion dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m. March 6 in the Bay Street armory.

All ex-members of the Canadian Scottish Regiment (16th CEF) are eligible to attend. Tickets are available at PO Box 135, Victoria.

Duck Case Quacked?

City police went duck-hunting Saturday afternoon in Beacon Hill Park.

Their quarry: a missing mallard, believed stolen.

They went to the park after a passerby reported seeing someone take the bird.

Leo Cohen, Oakland

Hon. Felix Chalvo, vice-mayor of Oakland, California, left, pictured presenting "Key of the City" to Mr. James Audain of Victoria while Mrs. Audain looks on. The Audains have recently returned from California where they visited Dunsmuir House, the mansion built by Mr. Audain's great uncle, Alex Duhsmuir. Author of the book "Alex Dunsmuir's Dilemma," Mr. Audain tells the story of his uncle's colorful life. The mansion is now a conference centre.

PERSONAL MENTION

Mrs. George R. Pearkes will attend a coffee party on Monday, to be given by Mrs. Harold Elworthy in her home on Tarn Place. The affair is arranged to honor Mrs. Malcolm G. Taylor.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Pearkes will attend a luncheon in the Empress Hotel. The luncheon is part of the social activities arranged by the Provincial Council of Women during their annual meeting.

Travelling South

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Charman, St. Charles Street, will leave on Monday for a two to three-week holiday in Beverly Hills, Palm Springs and San Francisco. In the latter city they will stay with former Victorians, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. (Pat) Bate.

Christening Today

The three-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Munn, 2226 Greenlands Road, will receive the names Janet Elizabeth at a christening ceremony in St. Aidan's United Church this (Feb. 14) morning. Rev. A. G. MacLeod will officiate. Godmother of the baby is Miss Joan Butterworth of Merritt, B.C. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. James Munn and Mr. and Mrs. James Richmond, all of Victoria.

Christening Sunday

At a christening service in St. Aidan's United Church on Sunday morning, Rev. A. G. McLeod will bestow the names Michael John on the son of Mr. and Mrs. Erik Davis, 1876 San Juan. He will wear a gown made for him by an aunt, Mrs. M. Woodhead of New Zealand. Godparents will be Mr. and Mrs. Nels Holst. After the service a luncheon will be held at the Davis home. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Eric Alberg of Victoria and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Davis of New Zealand.

Wedding Guests

Among the out-of-town guests at the George-Elwood wedding in Lady Chapel of Christ Church Cathedral were Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Schwengers, Miss Carla Schwengers, Mrs. C. U. Luckhart, the Misses Denise and Lynda Poyntz, Mr. B. Metzger, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Swanson, all of Vancouver; Mrs. M. George, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Edward George, Miss Carolyn Stanley, North Vancouver and Mr. and Mrs. Maurice George, Prince George, B.C.

In San Francisco

Mr. and Mrs. A. Brooker and Dr. James Hatter have signed the book this week at B.C. House in San Francisco.

One of Victoria's popular teachers is Mrs. M. Rietsma of View Royal Elementary School. Among her many Valentine presents were flowers from two of her students in Division 7. They are Colin (right), son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Baur, and Alan (left), son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Worsfold.—(Robin Clarke)

It Was a Big Party With 400 at Lunch

When 400 people come to lunch it's a big party. And the luncheon was only a small part of the IODE's giant annual festival held at the Club Sirocco Saturday.

Arranged by the Municipal chapter and all Primary chapters of Victoria's IODE, it was opened at 11 a.m. by Mrs. George Pearkes and did not finish until 5 p.m. During that time a grand total of $4,000 was realized.

Hundreds and hundreds patronized the affair, convened by Mrs. Lance Muirhead, and excitement mounted as the time drew near to draw the name of the winner of the $500 bond. Mrs. Eileen M. Woodward of 511 Macaulay Street, Esquimalt, was holder of the ticket for the festival's big prize.

"From Bustles to Bikinis," a sparkling song and dance review, was presented twice during the day. Entertainers were Reg Stone, Cliff Clarke, Marge Bridgeman, Janet Senior and Robbie Gillespie.

Another popular "entertainer" was Mrs. R. W. Roskelley, authentic gypsy fortune teller, who had a long queue formed around her all the day long. Mrs. Hazel Sherratt, accompanied by Mr. Stone, was opening soloist.

The Club Sirocco was gaily decorated with streamers and balloons for the occasion, and luncheon tables were beautifully arranged with centrepieces of tulips, snowdrops, fern, and white daisies. Official flag of the IODE, the Union Jack, one for each chapter, filled the stage after opening ceremonies conducted by Mrs. Elsie Lothian, Municipal Regent, who also introduced Mrs. Pearkes.

Esquimalt Chapter arranged the luncheon this year which coincided with 65th birthday of the IODE in Canada.

A highlight of the afternoon was the busy auction sale, but stalls around the perimeter of the ballroom were busy too, with everything from sale of jams, jellies, aprons, novelties, delicatessen, to an Olde Curiosity Shoppe and a French shop.

Conveners of the various stalls, representing all chapters, were Mrs. J. Van Norman, Mrs. H. Davenport, Mrs. J. Pettersson, Mrs. A. W. Smith, Mrs. Graham Harris, Miss A. Chrow, Mrs. E. P. Angus, Mrs. I. Burrows, Mrs. G. Dunaway, Mrs. E. Norton, Mrs. W. Walsh and Mrs. C. Menzies. Mrs. George Pears, past convenor, looked after publicity.

Party Raises $365

Red and white felt hearts and flowers highlighting a red paper-lace background, covered the front door of the nurses' residence, Thursday afternoon, when the Ladies' Auxiliary to St. Joseph's Hospital held a Valentine bridge and tea.

Adding to the theme were large arrangements of red and white carnations decorating the tea and bridge rooms.

The refreshment table in the tea room was centred with a similar arrangement in a huge silver bowl, flanked by white candles. Presiding at the table were Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, Mrs. J. A. McLellan, Mrs. P. Sallaway, and Miss Emilia Kobelsky.

The theme was carried out in the home-cooking stall, too, convened by Mrs. R. Girard, who was assisted by Mrs. R. Brand and Mrs. R. Lindsay. Heart-shaped cakes and cookies covered with red and white icing vied for top honors at this sell-out stall.

The bridge room was decorated with arrangements of red and white carnations and paper hearts. Guests at the 36 tables were served by Mrs. W. Shipley, Mrs. G. Bowes, Mrs. A. D. Blair, Mrs. A. L. Robinson, Mrs. H. Jackh, Mrs. R. Atkinson, Mrs. W. H. Hayward, Mrs. G. Norrie, Mrs. W. R. Critchley, Mrs. M. Steele, Mrs. R. G. Hebron, Mrs. H. O'Neill and Mrs. M. Adkinsson.

President Mrs. Connie Baker welcomed the guests. Convenor was Mrs. P. W. Semenchuk, assisted by Mrs. E. H. Michaux.

In charge of decorations was Mrs. Ralph Adams. She was assisted by Mrs. M. Adkinsson.

Other convenors included Mrs. W. Rogers, tea; Mrs. B. G. Ryan and Mrs. T. C. Rogers, raffles; Mrs. A. Cownden, Mrs. G. DeCorte, Mrs. C. Rose and Mrs. W. Coldwell, receipts; and lounge serviteurs, Mrs. R. Adams, Mrs. T. J. Pye, Mrs. B. A. Goodwin, Mrs. C. M. Kilgour, Mrs. P. Greenwood, and Mrs. M. Beasley.

Proceeds amounted to $365.

Danced a Jig

VENTURA, Calif. (UPI) — Mrs. Sarah Hampton — one of the Duckworth sisters — danced a spry jig Thursday when she and her sister, Mrs. Mattie Peale, celebrated their 98th birthdays.

The sisters — believed the oldest living twins in the United States — vowed they'll be around next February to observe their 100th anniversaries. Their "baby brother," Daniel, 94, Mount Vernon, Ind., was unable to attend this year's party.

The party was held at the cottage home of county general hospital, where Mrs. Peale has lived since she was 68. Mrs. Hampton of Fillmore, Calif., and other members of the family met at the hospital.

Mrs. Hampton said she keeps busy with routine chores, watching television and playing solitaire. She confided she takes a little wine nightly on doctor's orders to help her sleep.

"I don't need anything to get to sleep," Mattie interjected.

CATHOLIC WOMEN

The Catholic Women's League of Queen of Peace Church, Esquimalt, will hold a Valentine tea on Wednesday, Feb. 17 at 2 p.m. in the Parish Hall, 849 Old Esquimalt Road.

LAWN BOWLING TEA

Canadian Pacific Ladies Lawn Bowling Club will hold a card party and tea in the Douglas Room, Hudson's Bay Store, at 2 p.m., Feb. 17.

Klondyke Night Coming Up

Things are changing out Sidney way these days because everyone is getting ready for Klondyke Night. On this night, Saturday, Feb. 20, this year, Sanscha Hall will be transformed into a replica of an Alaska Gold Rush night spot.

Games of chance, good old-fashioned gambling and a real bar will all be part of the fun program for everyone.

All proceeds are for the Sanscha Community Centre.

If It's Twins Stay in Bed

By HARRY NELSON

LOS ANGELES — Women who are going to have twins should stay in bed the last half of their pregnancy to avoid premature births, a Washington, D.C., obstetrician advised today.

By doing this patients have cut their prematurity rate in multiple births fourfold, said Dr. Robert H. Barter, professor and chairman of obstetrics and gynecology at George Washington University School of Medicine.

The prematurity rate in multiple births in the United States ranges from 50 per cent to 75 per cent. Diagnosing the presence of more than one infant early and putting the mother to bed reduces the rate to 15 per cent, Dr. Barter reported.

Asked whether women are willing to stay in bed that long, he replied:

"It works if you tell the mother that the fate of her babies is in her hands. It is also necessary to impress upon her that carrying multiple babies is much different from carrying one."

One of the problems has been to diagnose multiple births early enough to give the advice. In those that are diagnosed, X-ray is the common method.

But Dr. Barter said he can tell by the 14th week by taking an office electrocardiogram with a special attachment through the mother's abdomen.

Sixth Auntie Honored Today

By TRUDIE KEMP

This afternoon Victoria's Chinese citizens will pay tribute to one of their own members, Miss Grace Lee, at a special service in the Chinese Presbyterian Church on North Park Street.

Miss Lee, a missionary worker in the church, is being honored on her retirement after 34 years service. Affectionately called Look Goo, sixth aunt, she is beloved throughout the Chinese community and not without cause as she has spent a good part of her life helping her people.

Ever since her appointment in 1931 by the Women's Missionary Society of Presbyterian Church of Canada, her mornings have been spent teaching some 30 to 40 youngsters in the kindergarten. In the afternoons, following regular school hours, she taught the Chinese language to about 50 young people between ages of seven and 14 years.

Another of her self-imposed duties was visiting new Chinese citizens and interpreting for them.

GOLD MEDAL

She is president of the senior women's auxiliary in her church and was for many years connected with the young women's group which she organized about 25 years ago.

In August, 1956, while attending an annual council meeting of the WMS (western division) of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in Ottawa, Miss Lee was awarded the gold medal for 25 years service. She was the first Chinese to win the coveted award.

The kindly, soft-spoken teacher was born in Victoria to Lee Woy and Lee Mun Shee. Her father first came to Victoria from China in the 1870's at the age of 18. Lee Woy soon went into business for himself opening up the old time Lai Yuen store located in the vicinity of the new Centennial Square. He opened a second store on the corner of Flagard and Government Streets and then branched into the greenhouse business—one of the first Chinese citizens to do so.

GRACE LEE, MISSIONARY WORKER

In 1912, Mr. Woy decided it was time to retire and take his family back to China. They went to live in Kongmoon of Kwangtung province.

"My father was a wealthy merchant then and had good character and manners," Miss Lee recalled. "He did not like us to mix with the other children because he was afraid we would learn bad ways and spoil his name."

There was no girl's school in Kongmoon at that time so Lee Woy engaged a private teacher for his daughters.

Grace Lee, who was about seven years old when she first went to China, recalled a visit with a girl friend which was to change her entire life.

Her new friend, who was also from a wealthy family and a Christian, told her about the missionary school in Kongmoon and encouraged her to attend.

"I told my father I wanted to go to this school. He said I could if I promised not to become a Christian," she said.

After two years at the missionary boarding school young Grace Lee decided to become a Christian and recalls her father was extremely angry when she told him of her intentions. He sent servants to take his daughters out of school but not in time to stop her from being baptized.

She refused to give up her new faith and was no longer welcomed in her father's house. She returned to the missionary and finished her primary classes after which she taught in the kindergarten for two years. Friends loaned the young student money to go to Canton so she could continue her education at the academy and later Tung Shan, a theological school.

FORGIVEN

In 1928 she returned to Victoria as a qualified instructor and taught for three years in the Chinese Public School.

During this period her aging father was ailing and his business had gone under so she began sending money home regularly to help her family. Shortly before his death her father told the rest of the family she was "his best child". Grace knew she had been forgiven.

Miss Lee's 83-year-old mother, who is at present in Hong Kong, returned to Victoria in 1957 and two years later was baptized in the church here.

"About 80 per cent of my relatives in China are now Christians," she said.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Objets d'art to transform your home . . .

Today's trend in home decorating is back to the elegant . . . the traditional beauty that has stood the test of time . . . Things to look at and things to use that hark back to a more opulent age . . . Where to find such objects? You don't have to comb the marts of Europe . . . or even the galleries on New York's 57th Street . . . They're right here in Victoria at Sydney Reynolds (who originally did the searching with exquisite taste) . . . Reynolds' whole corner window is given over this week to "Decorators' Choice" . . . and if you hunger to feast your eyes on really choice items for the home beautiful, don't miss seeing it . . . There are hand-wrought iron lamps, Italian lanternos, Dresden figurines, Sevres vases . . . A truly magnificent hand-painted Donnat vase . . . a pair of big Meisen urns . . . Capa di Monte figures the like of which you'll find nowhere else in Canada . . . Crested Minton dinnerware patterned in pure gold . . . Sconces, lustres, and literally dozens of other rare and dramatic decorator items . . . all newly arrived from Europe . . . Many originals, some reproductions . . . a symphony of subtle charm and colorful dignity . . . Sydney Reynolds, 901 Government St., EV 2-2021.

For evening, Pierre Cardin showed long beaded sheaths in dazzling beaded art nouveau prints.

A hat for every face, every occasion . . .

One of the many things that impress us about Miss Frith's Millinery . . . apart from the unbelievable choice of hats for every conceivable costume and occasion . . . is the very real interest they take in matching the hat to the wearer . . . We've seen numerous examples of this . . . in fact we understand that at Miss Frith's they won't even let you buy a hat that's wrong for your face and figure! . . . The millinery buyer (one of those smart gals who understands hats and loves them with an abiding passion) . . . told us that when making her selections she actually visualizes each creation on the type of woman who'll eventually wear it . . . Right now they're receiving boxes and boxes of new spring hats . . . This week we admired a wide Breton entirely covered with pink cornflowers . . . a Vogue-ish navy straw braid with high crown, huge pink rose nestling on one side of the brim . . . a black baku with dipped brim and big black taffeta bow that's pure drama . . . a draped turban of black and white loose straw braid with grosgrain trim . . . You'll be happy to know that along with all the lush creations, there are plenty of plainer, tailored hats you can put on in the morning and wear all day, anywhere . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., EV 3-4912.

In the Paris spring and summer collections, fresh flower and fruit shades dominated the couture's color palette . . . along with a definite revival of the spring-time classic navy and blue.

Beautiful Joyce shoes for Spring . . .

Shoe fashion shows are a comparatively new phenomenon in our town . . . and certainly for the style-conscious woman, they make good sense . . . So we urge you to make a point of going to Munday's next Wednesday at 2:30 or at 8 p.m. for their spring fashion show of Joyce shoes . . . (No charge for this, and refreshments will be served) . . . We saw the new Joyce shoes for spring this week, and they're really very smart . . . lovely colors, too . . . Three brand new styles this season to join all the other favorites . . . "Show Down," which has a crescent toe and set back covered heels, perforated design . . . a number of colors include a very pretty avocado green . . . "Derby Winner" is a more casual shoe with low stacked heel and crescent squared toe . . . The plain pump called "Soft Fold" with illusion heel and oval toe, is our idea of the perfect suit shoe . . . Black, blue, brown, white and sand calf, black patent . . . The ever-popular "Left Bank," with it's little heel, appears in yellow, blue and pink as well as platinum, Irish oats and baby ganges . . . Another new style is called "Period Piece" . . . has a higher stacked heel and perforated trim . . . All the new Joyce shoes will be shown at the fashion show, so don't miss it . . . Munday's, 1283 Douglas St., EV 3-2211.

An almost wickedly pretty blouse, reminiscent of the 30s — comes in pale blue or pink dotted Swiss — neck deep in rippling lace-edged ruffles, which also circle the wrists.

The gracious gleam of fine silver . . .

Nothing can take the place of silver as an adjunct to gracious living . . . The silver tea and coffee service . . . silver trays and entree dishes . . . all spell graciousness and hospitality . . . Naturally we can't all own sterling silver holloware . . . it's fantastically expensive . . . but really good plate has all the gleaming beauty and durability of sterling (after all, it is silver heavily overlaid on some hardier metal) . . . Little & Taylor have a beautiful 4-piece hand engraved tea and coffee service . . . the much-admired melon shape . . . which we think is almost a gift at $148 . . . Handsome trays in all sizes . . . We spent some time looking at their silver display this week and were really amazed at the variety of things you can get in silver . . . like knife rests, trivets, sauce warmers . . . sugar shakers, pepper mills, egg cups, champagne and ice buckets . . . ash trays that hold a candle to light your cigarette . . . martini mixers, sauce spoons, salt spoons, smoker sets . . . a long-handled drink spoon which has an ice crusher at one end . . . corn cob holders, butter molds, grape scissors . . . And of course all the more obvious silver articles . . . in the very finest silver plate . . . Many articles imported from France . . . Little & Taylor Jewelers Limited, 1200 Douglas St., 385-4431.

Your pinkies will smell like carnations or roses when the new perfumed nail polish appears on the market. It's in the experimental stage now.

Dynasty dresses for daytime . . .

We've long admired the gorgeous satins and brocade evening and cocktail dresses by Dynasty of Hong Kong . . . at W. & J. Wilson . . . but only a few days ago learned that Dynasty also make charming day dresses . . . some of which Wilson's have right now . . . They're simple and distinctive . . . rely on good cut, beautiful materials and imaginative touches . . . There's a pure silk sheath with wide blue panels front and back . . . the rest of the dress is green . . . It's an unusual and very smart combination . . . Tailored silk shirts and blouses also by Dynasty, have frogged trim on the skirt's slash pockets . . . come in gold, royal blue, turquoise and fuscia . . . Another Dynasty dress that caught our eye is the figured crash linen . . . black, rose and unexpected touches of orange . . . ball fringe trimming the round neckline . . . There's a white lace shift . . . very tailored . . . for the woman who wants a really different dressy dress . . . New spring coats are on hand . . . Off-white and pastel colors . . . Don't forget Wilson's fashion show at the Yacht Club on February 22 . . . Promises to be extra-special! . . . You can get your tickets at . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am about to marry into a family of pill-takers and heavy drinkers. Charley's mother is a neurotic who goes for tranquilizing pills as if they were lemon drops. The minute she is faced with an unpleasant situation she stops eating and dopes herself up. She's not responsible for what she says when she's on pills so everyone must overlook her mean tongue.

Her daughter does the same thing and she is only 20. Her two older sons are confirmed alcoholics who take pills right along with the booze.

Charley is the only one in the family who is normal. He doesn't drink at all and I have to fight to get an aspirin down him when he has a headache.

I've discussed this problem with my doctor and he says such behavior is more environmental than hereditary—"usually" — which leaves me with questions in my mind.

Do you feel Charley and I could raise normal children despite his background? I need your help.—OUT-DOPED.

Dear Out: A person who married into an unstable family always runs a risk since we do inherit our nervous systems.

You don't say how old Charlie is but he seems to have done immeasureably better than the others of his family. If you marry him I hope you will move to another city, as added insurance. Sometimes nutty relatives can make a well person sick.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 55. My husband is 57. We've been married 10 years. This is a second marriage for both of us. I was a widow. Clancy divorced his wife because he found out she was a tramp.

Our marriage was wonderful until last year—when Clancy's former wife rediscovered him.

When Clancy was married to her he never had a home-cooked meal. The house was a mess, there were no clean sheets and no groceries (so he couldn't even fix his own meals). He carried his laundry and dry cleaning to the corner. She was such a cold proposition he nicknamed her "Ice Cube."

For the past three weekends Clancy has taken her up north and I have sat home. She leaves gloves, scarves and earrings around so I will be sure to know she has been in the car.

I'm sick of this and have told him so. He says if I don't like it I can leave. This is my house, Ann. What shall I do?—V. C.

Dear V. C. The ice cube has melted and spring is here. When ex-mates rediscover each other the flame can get pretty high.

Tell Clancy he can move out and now, but insist that he send those support cheques in the mail. Chances are he'll suddenly remember why he divorced the doll.

Dear Ann Landers: We are five high school girls with a very serious problem. Last year there were five big dances but not one of us got asked to any of them, so we went stag. A whole string of fellows showed up, also stagging it.

They just stood around, holding up the walls, looking everybody over but not one of them asked a girl to dance. We had to dance with each other, which I hate.

Why do fellows come to a dance if they don't want to dance? How can we break the sound barrier and get these guys to shake a leg? Help! Help! —SENIORS NOW

Dear Seniors: One reason boys don't ask girls to dance is because they don't know how to dance.

What your school needs is dancing instructions for both boys and girls. Ask your principal or dean if your can organize dance classes after school or on Friday evenings. Make posters and promote it big. Generate some excitement. When the fellows can shake their legs with some confidence they'll do less standing around.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The Mad Hatter will love the beach scene this season, as gay millinery takes over as a centre of fashion interest. At left is blue opal stitched cotton pique, adapted from the New England fisherman's hat. Her beach bag is matching blue with a giant white and yellow daisy. Hat in centre photo is of white organdy with sheer ruffles across top of crown and around the edge over a rubber swim cap base. It matches the white organdy bow on the jersey suit. Black linen hat in last photo is reminiscent of the side-swept hats worn by the Australian infantry or by 17th century cavaliers. Note the bracelets made of wooden beads worn by each model. The bracelets are color co-ordinated to match outfit.

Birthday Parties Celebrated At Gala Valentine Smorgasbord

By DOROTHY WROTNOWSKI

This is St. Valentine's Day when hearts and flowers are the thing.

I had my own Valentine party a couple of days ago jumping the gun a little, but an awfully good party.

It was at the Empress Hotel smorgasbord. As usual the hotel had gone all out to make the dining room attractive. Red paper hearts were festooned across the room and flowers were on all the tables.

It was the first time this winter that I had been to the smorgasbord and when I took a look at the gorgeous spread I wondered what I had been thinking about by not going to this affair more often.

For my money, there isn't any better food in town. And when you think that the price covers as much as you want, it is really inexpensive. And the choice.

For Valentine there was really a festive board. Birds, part of the decorations, looked quite at home with the hearts, flowers and cupids.

Then the heart-shaped cakes fancied up so that you almost hated to see them cut—peach tarts, cherries floating in the fruit salad all seemed to add their own festive touch.

Desserts seem to lend themselves to decoration more than other dishes but those ham cornucopias with a delicious kumquat nestling in the centre looked pretty festive, too. Turkey, roast beef, tongue, chicken, veal were cold cuts accompanied by crisp looking salads, olives, beets and so on.

It is always difficult to make up your mind—or it is for me—whether to have the cold dishes or the hot. Because remember you have already had hors d'oeuvres and probably a crab or shrimp cocktail.

A baron of beef with golden brown Yorkshire pudding and other trimmings, beef stroganoff and curried shrimp make the decision even more difficult.

Terry Cain singing as she strolls around the room adds to the party atmosphere.

Birthdays were her specialty the other night — and Happy Birthday was heard two or even three times during the evening.

Mrs. Christina M. MacNab had a birthday cake with lighted candles. It was her 87th birthday. "Mother still loves a party" said her daughter Christine. Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Mayne and Mr. and Mrs. Grant Patterson made up the rest of the MacNab party.

Terry Cain was singing Happy Birthday again at the table next to us for 18-year-old Carol Smith. It was a delayed party for Carol who was there with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Vincent Smith, sister Barbara and brother Willie.

"We always let the children decide where they want to go when it is an occasion for them and they always choose the Empress smorgasbord," said Mrs. Smith.

The Smith children are showing good taste in their choice of a place and that wasn't meant as a pun.

What made the evening a little more special was when Terry Cain knowing I had just returned from Hawaii sang the Hawaiian Wedding Song.

Valentine Day is special for Mrs. Fannie Mott. It is her birthday, 99 today. Mrs. Mott lives at Glen Warren, Balmoral Road, and is still active for her years. Today she will be guest of honor when Mrs. M. Enoch entertains at a family dinner in her Yale Street home tonight.—(Robin Clarke)

Policies to China Subject of Address

"Anglo-American Policies Towards China" is the timely theme of an address by an eminent authority on Far Eastern affairs scheduled for the English Speaking Union meeting in Douglas Building cafeteria, Friday, February 19, at 8 p.m.

Professor George E. Taylor, educator, author and diplomat, who is the guest speaker, was born in England and acquired his M.A. and D. Litt degrees at the Univeristy of Birmingham. Coming to the United States he was associated with John Hopkins and Harvard Universities prior to spending nine years on academic research work in China. As a naturalized American citizen he served in the Office of War Information during World War II, as a faculty member of the U.S. War College, as an officer of the State Department and as official representative at SEATO and other international conferences in Manila, Tokyo and London.

Panayia Moutsaina

Ship Brings Heritage, Sacred Name to Port

By DON GAIN

Panayia Moutsaina is a Greek Orthodox Church in the town of Vrontados on the island of Chios.

It is also a tramp ship loading lumber at Ogden Point.

The name dates back to 1890, says chief officer Stamatios Moundros.

"Vrontados Bay was the anchorage for sailing ships," he said.

'DECKBOYS' MADONNA'

"The deckboys who anchored the ships built a small church there and called it Panayia Moutsaina.

It means Madonna of the Deckboys."

In 1954 the small church, which had a capacity of 50 persons, was replaced by a new church, built by Fafalios Brothers, shipowners, the chief said. The new church can accommodate 500.

The chief wishes he were back in Chios, his native home. It is a small island off the west coast of Turkey. About 50 miles long, it has a population of 70,000.

'THIS IS MY JOB'

"I'm too far from my family," the chief said. "But this is my job."

In six months he'll return to Chios to take his master's examinations.

"When I get a ship of my own, I have permission to bring my family on board with me."

He said his wife Despina, his four-year-old daughter Marika and two-year-old son Kostos would like that better, and so would he.

"A seaman's life is a bad life," he said. "He is too far from his family and his country.

"The only thing I like is to look at foreign countries."

'I LIKE VICTORIA'

The chief has been to B.C. several times.

"I like Victoria very well," he said. "The forests around the town, the clean streets and the nice buildings."

—Don Gain

His ship is a 16,000-ton general cargo freighter, 519 feet long.

It was built in Japan in 1957, and, like the other seven ships of its owners, travels the world.

The ship is taking on 12,000 long tons of lumber, will pick up the balance of the cargo in Vancouver, for Tampa, Fla., and Brooklyn N.Y.

CREW OF 37

Its last voyage took it from Portland to Yokohama with grain and back here in ballast.

It carries a crew of 37, including the master. All are Greek.

The ship is registered in Chios, but is owned by Akme Steamship Co. of Panama, which in turn is owned by Los Brothers of New York and London.

Matros Steamship Co. of New York is the agent.

Smoke Clears At Age 44

Life begins at 40, but the smoke doesn't trail off until 44, according to the Non-Smokers' Association of Canada.

The group quotes a recent report from the federal department of health and welfare, which shows the heaviest percentage of smokers is found in the 25-to-44-year-old bracket.

In that age range, 51 per cent of Canadians indulge the cigarette habit.

After the age of 44 the smoke begins to clear; only 10 per cent of Canadians over 65 smoke cigarettes.

Only 27 per cent of teenagers in the 15-to-19-year-old group are cigarette-smokers.

Talks Fail

TRAIL (CP) — The city of Trail and its firemen have been unable to agree in salary talks. The union says it will ask for a provincial conciliation officer.

To Spread School Costs

Assessors Eye Standard

Assessments must be in line with the provincial standard to spread school costs equally, according to Oak Bay assessor D. C. Wyatt.

"If we under-assess property in Oak Bay, we are not carrying our fair share of the school costs in the Greater Victoria school district," he commented.

Oak Bay court of revision Friday held the last of four day-long sessions to hear a record 104 appeals against assessment.

ONE DAY

Last year there were 19 appeals, and they were heard in one day.

"One problem we have is: We can't re-assess every year, but market values continue to fluctuate," said Mr. Wyatt.

In the past few years property has been assessed at 45 per cent of market value in British Columbia.

OAK BAY FOLLOWED

This year, the provincial standard is 50 per cent, and re-assessment in Oak Bay followed this standard.

"The assessment commissioner reviews assessments, and if they are too far below or above the standard, in his opinion, he will order an adjustment."

Few of the appellants scheduled to be heard Friday came to the hearing but all their appeals were considered.

RECOMMENDED

Eight received no reduction; two assessments on land, two on improvements, and two on land and improvements were reduced.

The reductions dealing with land concerned a rocky lot and a lot suffering commercial encroachment. Reductions were recommended by the assessor.

TEMPORARY

Six property owners on Henderson Road appealed assessments because a temporary boathouse has recently been constructed in the area.

Two were considered too far away for market value to be affected. Four received reductions, but were told the reductions would be temporary.

"When the boat is built and the boathouse comes down, the assessments will go back up," said the assessor.

ONE ON TUESDAY

An appeal on an apartment house is scheduled to be heard by the court next Tuesday.

Representative of the company was unable to attend this week's sitting of the court.

Committee to Pick Touring Students

A committee responsible for selecting Victoria school children who will take part in the Canadian Centennial Youth Travel Program will soon be set up by the Greater Victoria School Board.

This year 240 students are expected to travel to and from B.C. in the know-Canada program. Last year 48 students travelled to Ontario and Quebec.

Costs of the travel program are met by the federal government with the provincial government participating.

The students travel in groups of 24 with two adults supervising.

Purpose of the project is to provide opportunity for young Canadians to broaden their ideas about their own country, said L. J. Wallace, general chairman of the B.C. Centennial.

He said by 1967 more than 17,000 Grade 10 and 11 students will have participated in the program.

Tear Gas, Copters Scatter Rioters

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Riot police, reinforced by heavily armed soldiers and overhead helicopter support, battled leftists who stormed the downtown section Saturday, demanding overthrow of the Malaysia federation.

One mob of about 200 youths marched on the U.S. Information Service library, smashing windows with poles, rocks and in one case by hurling a bicycle into the building.

BARBED WIRE

Tear gas barrages pushed back the demonstrators and police erected barbed wire barricades at key intersections. Soldiers with fixed bayonets and automatic weapons manned the barricades.

Downtown streets were cleared after several hours and an emergency curfew was clamped on the heart of the capital. Many demonstrators were arrested.

The cabinet of Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman met in emergency session.

LEFTIST REBELS

Government officials said the rioting was touched off by the Socialist Front, a left-wing political opposition group.

Socialist Front statements said the agitation was intended to protest the arrest of a number of leading opposition politicians last Jan. 28, including three who have been accused of plotting with Indonesia to set up a government in exile and promote armed revolution.

Green Potatoes in Alaska

Prison Camp for Real

By TERRY ROBERTS

FORT GREELY, Alaska (CP) —Psychological bombardment in the "prisoner-of-war" compound here is designed to extract information from the most stubborn mind.

"The odds are with us," United States Army Col. A. E. Nelson, commander of the POW "cage," said in an interview. The camp was set up for the current Alaska war game Polar Strike which ends Feb. 17.

Col. Nelson looks on his compound as escape proof and highly efficient for breaking down reluctant minds.

TORMENTS

Prisoners taken during the sub-Arctic exercise are subjected to the torments of the "cage" under simulated wartime conditions.

Says Col. Nelson: "See those outdoor loudspeakers? Listen."

Wailing babies, barking dogs and distorted music was aired loudly and incessantly.

"A man hears that 24 hours a day and he doesn't think straight—that's when we get him."

WARM HUT

Prisoners are interrogated at least hourly by Russian-speaking members of the unit. The interrogations are held in a warm hut.

"They get to look forward to our chats and warmth," says Col. Nelson.

FOOD GOOD, BUT—

The temperature outside ranges from 12 to 40 degrees below zero.

The food is good, but cooked without seasoning and it's colored. Potatoes are a fluorescent green, gravy is construction-yellow and the beans are vivid red.

"Some of the guys won't eat it no matter how good we tell them it is."

Arrive Each Day

Blossoms Bedeck Churchill Grave

BLADON, England (AP) — A carpet of fresh flowers, their mingled scents piercing the cold winter air, covered Sir Winston Churchill's grave during the weekend — just as they have every day since he was buried in St. Martin's churchyard two weeks ago last Saturday.

One bunch came from a former Dutch resistance fighter and his wife. The card gave no names. It simply said:

"A small token of our tremendous admiration and sorrow at your departure. From a couple whom your voice inspired."

FLOWN FROM GREECE

A bouquet of delicate light-blue flowers was flown from a garden in Greece; a freshly-plucked bunch of red poppies came from a field in France; and a score of wreaths came from men and women all over Britain.

A policeman stood by the grave Saturday, along with two men and three women, who were looking at the grave and its flowers.

"It's like this all the week long," he said. "It's a steady trickle. Always there is someone standing here. But weekends it's a crowd."

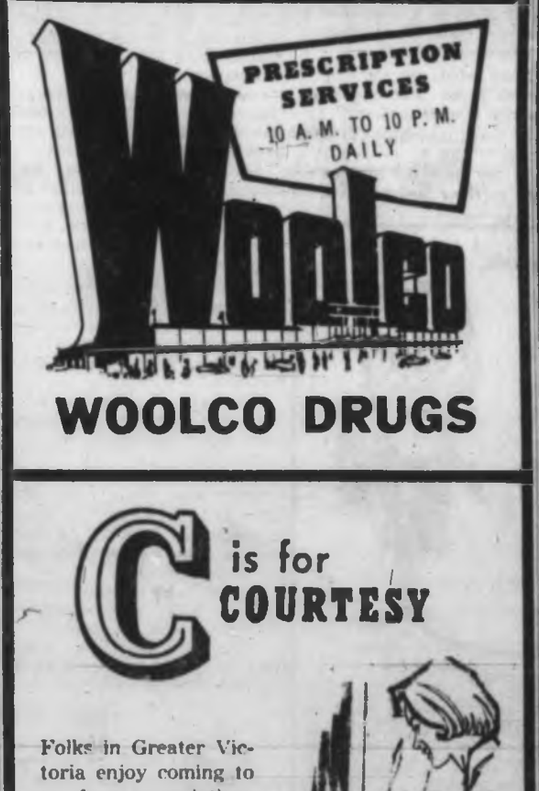

VILLAGE CHANGING

Will the crowds change this sleepy village of 413 people?

Slight changes already are visible — the traffic policeman, for instance. And bulldozers are moving in on a large meadow at one end of the village to turn it into a parking lot.

In Oxford, seven miles away, tourist bureaus used to organize bus tours to Blenheim Palace, the huge home of the Duke of Marlborough, Churchill's birthplace. Now they also visit nearby Bladon.

Garden Notes

Annuals Last Longest

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

BEDDING SCHEMES (E.L.J., Victoria)—The first requisite in a bedding plant is a very long period of bloom, which is why annual flowers are almost always chosen for this role in the garden. While it is a nuisance to have to buy and set out new plants every spring to provide color in the ornamental beds, such annuals as petunias and salvias remain in bloom far longer than any of the common perennials.

Perennials are best grouped by themselves or combined with the smaller flowering shrubs, and a mixture planted in such a way that when one plant is finishing its blooming period, another is just coming into bloom, thereby retaining color and interest throughout the growing season. With the long-blooming annuals, on the other hand, it is best to stick to one kind per bed and mass them boldly to create an eye-catching splash of color.

PLANTS FOR SHADE (K.McL., Colwood) — Some good perennial flowers for the shaded portions of the garden are: Campanulas in variety, columbines, fritillarias, monkshood, primulas, sedums, Solomon's Seal, some lilies, violas, and the grassy species of iris.

Regarding shrubs, most of the broad-leafed evergreens will tolerate partial shade, particularly the Oregon grape, barberries, pieris, daphne and the Portugal laurel. Among the deciduous shrubs, I can recommend the shrubby honeysuckles, flowering currant, hawthorn, high bush cranberry, spiraea, red osier dogwood and the European red elder.

TOO-TALL RUBBER PLANT (A.M.W., Victoria)—I can understand your feeling of frustration when your rubber plant, sitting on a table, had to be lowered to a stool, then to the floor as it continued to put on height. You could, of course, follow your husband's suggestion and chop a hole in the ceiling to accommodate your runaway plant, but there are other and less drastic ways.

You could, for instance, cut the plant back to whatever height you see fit, making your cut immediately above a leaf so as to leave no stub to rot back. Better rub the cut surface of the stem with powdered charcoal to dry up the milky sap, as these plants will often bleed like a stuck pig. The tipping should cause your plant to branch out, making a more compact specimen.

The cut-off tip could be used as a slip to make a new plant, rooting it in a mixture of peat moss and vermiculite, then potting it when rooted in sandy loam soil.

Or you could air-layer it, which is a Chinese technique of rooting a slip before you cut it off. Make a notch in the main stem at a suitable distance from the tip, dust with Seradix or Rootone rooting powder, bind the notch with a ball of damp sphagnum moss, then seal the moss ball in a wrapping of plastic film. The notch will put out roots into the damp moss, and when well rooted, the stem is cut off just below the new roots and the whole rooted tip is potted up to make a new plant.

It seems rather a pity to cut up such a fine large plant, though, and I am wondering if you couldn't make a deal with a local florist to trade it in for a smaller specimen. Your plant would be a grand acquisition for, say, a hospital or any public building.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Finney Joins the $ Elite

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Albert Finney, leading the quiet life in London, is asking $750,000 plus a healthy percentage for each future picture. He can do this because of the smash success of Tom Jones. Richard Burton is getting the same. Who would have thought all this was possible for either actor five years ago?

When Paul Newman was offered the film biography of painter Salvador Dali, he replied, "I can't say anything until I've seen the script, but I'd sure as as hell like to wear that mustache."

Lex Barker converted to the Catholic Church to marry 21-year-old Maria del Carman Cervera. She was Miss Spain of last year. Among Lex's previous mates, Lana Turner and Arlene Dahl. His previous wife, Irene, died two years ago. Maria is number five.

Playing a small role in Paul's Lady L, is the six-foot-one, pretty, Denise McLaglen, niece of the late Victor. Denise went to Paris with a role in Something Happened on the way to the Forum. The show folded after four weeks and Denise was left with a little money, two dogs and a monkey. She decided to stay, and has been living with dogs and a monkey at a St. Germain hotel in the room where Oscar Wilde died. On the wall is a framed letter from the writer, asking for money and stating, "I am dying beyond my means."

If The Great Race is the hit Warners hopes it will be, Jack Lemmon will make $1,000,000 from his salary and percentage . . . When Richard Boone gets back to normal living again in Hawaii he will get on with the project most dear to his millionaire heart—to build a film studio and live there forever and a day.

Arthur Miller was saying in London, anent his After the Fall play, that now that the critics had reviewed Marilyn Monroe, he hoped they would review the play. It is playing in France, and Arthur will put his play on in London, when he comes up with the right cast.

Those walkie talkie units are all the rage in England. Kim Novak used one to call her chauffeur after finishing the day's work in The Amorous Adventures of Moll Flanders. The radius of her set was five miles. You can talk to a lot of people in that kind of space.

ART BUCHWALD Takes Off

No Biz Like Air Biz

The entertainment on airlines has suddenly become a big and very competitive business. Ever since TWA started showing films on their planes every airline has tried to get in the act.

Some airlines are offering the choice of films, television, hi-fi, symphonic music, pop music, jazz, or children's stories.

One airline we flew with the other day even showed television pictures of the takeoff and landing, which didn't thrill the lady sitting next to me as much as I thought it would.

"It gives us a chance to see the pilot make a good landing," I explained to her.

"And what are we supposed to do if we don't think he's making a good landing?"

It was something to think about.

In any case, the airlines are now in show business in a big way and no one knows where it will all end.

We must look into the future a few years and find ourselves at a board meeting of Twentieth Century-Fox Airlines, presided over by Sol Hurok, the chairman of the board.

"Gentlemen," Mr. Hurok says, "our earnings are down. The competition is killing us. People are getting tired of watching movies, listening to hi-fi, and tuning in children's stories. They want something different."

"But," the public relations man says, "we've got Harry Belafonte on our New York to Miami run—live."

"Sure," says Hurok, "and as soon as we did, Eastern booked the Beatles and took all the teen-age business away."

"I don't think it was the Beatles that hurt us as much as Delta Airlines booking Sonny Liston and Cassius Clay to fight daily on their Chicago-New Orleans flight."

"Okay, so we're not appealing to the sports fans," Hurok says. "But we gave them Margot Fonteyn and Nureyev on the shuttle to Washington and we still lost business."

"That's because American Airlines was featuring Van Cliburn and Artur Rubinstein—at the same time."

"You never know what will work and what won't," the sales manager says. "United Airlines had After the Fall and they did no business at all."

"People who fly want to be uplifted. Hello, Dolly is packing them in on Pan American."

"Sure, but take Carol Channing off the plane and see what happens to their business."

Hurok says, "I'll admit we made mistakes. Booking the Vienna Boys Choir to play on the Las Vegas jet was an error, but why didn't we do any business when we had the Holiday on Ice show on the Puerto Rico run?"

"The aisles were too narrow," the chief pilot says, "and most of the passengers didn't know the cast was on skates."

"Well," says Hurok, "we've got to come up with something new."

A vice-president raises his hand. "I know this is going to shock you, but I think we can offer our passengers something that no other airline has."

"What's that?"

"Silence. No movies, no shows, no hi-fi, no television. The passengers can read a book or sleep or just sit and think. It will be the biggest attraction to come along in years."

"It's great," shouts the advertising manager. "But will the CAB approve? If we offer silence, they'll accuse of us unfair competition."

"It's great all right," says Hurok. "Now, I've just made a deal with the Esther Williams Aquacade."

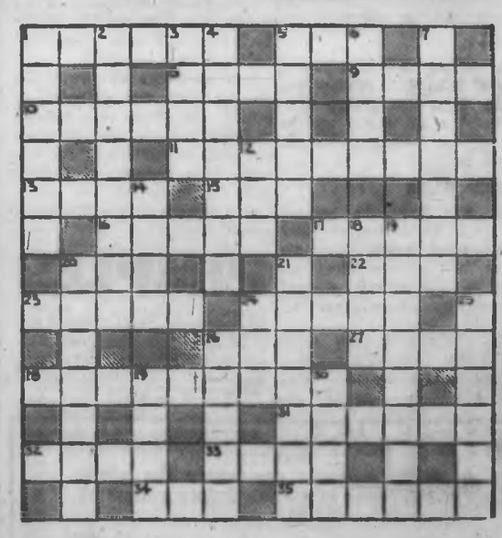

SINGER

When Ted first joined our staff we didn't know what to make of it. So we asked him the reason why he was singing all the time. He then gave us plenty of reasons. "It's as simple as Do Re Mi," he explained. "Look at all the beauty and Rhythm in these 'OS cars. Notice the lines . . . the whole composition . . . It's classic, and even these prices are a song." If you'd like to know more what Ted is singing about, ask him for the key at

Arms Ban 'A Blow to U.S.'

Arabs Believe Washington Behind Shipments to Israel

By DAVID LANCASHIRE

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Middle East checkerboard is so jumbled it is always difficult to tell who is ahead, but the West seems to have been pushed back a bit in recent weeks.

The most important new move was U.A.R President Gamal Abdel Nasser's pressure against West Germany to stop sending arms to Israel. Nasser won, and Arab newpapers throughout the Middle East applauded it as a blow against the United States. Most Arabs believe the German arms shipments actually were sent by Washington.

Nasser, who as part of his East-West gamesmanship has told the United States it could halt its aid and "drink from the sea" — the Egyptian equivalent of "go to hell" — is continuing his pressure against Bonn. He is awaiting a visit from East German President Walter Ulbricht.

While the Arab press was still crowing about Nasser's "great victory," other minor events in the area indicated the Communists were gaining a few small points.

The game is being played out against a backdrop of rising tensions in the Middle East, with the Arab-Israeli dispute at its bitterest level in years.

One Communist gain was in Syria, where the government announced it had agreed to let the Soviet Union prospect for oil. Only two months ago Damascus announced it would grant no more Syrian oil concessions to foreigners. The Soviet deal was technically a contract to drill deep wells, not a concession, but Communist technicians will be doing the job.

Co-operation appeared to be growing between the Communists and the Baath Socialist regime in Syria — a big change from the days when the Baath party ran neighboring Iraq and executed and jailed many Arab Communists. Communist newspapers in Beirut have stopped assailing the Baath regime.

The checkerboard is at its most complicated in Iraq, where President Abdel Salam Aref follows Nasser's warm approach to Moscow, but keeps an unknown number of Arab Communists behind bars. The latest speech by Aref, who lashes the West as a matter of routine, was directed, for a change, against local Communists for having "flooded Iraq with blood" in the past.

Ulbricht

Last week Kuwait, which gets a flow of oil dollars from the West, made a gesture toward the Communists by sending a delegation to China "to promote trade relations."

Just what trade the Kuwaitis have in mind is difficult to tell. The country produces nothing but oil, and shoppers in the little desert state are far more interested in the glittering Western goods that fill the stores than the sort of items Communist countries usually export.

In Beirut, the most capitalistic city in the Arab world, former Interior Minister Kamal Jumblatt — best known as the man who banned the twist and campaigned against belly dancing — called for Lebanon to recognize Communist China. Jumblatt, who recently visited Peking, asked the government to invite Chou En-Lai and get rid of U.S. influence here.

Major Diplomatic Defeat

Bonn Blackmailed by Nasser?

By STERLING G. SLAPPEY

BONN (LAT) — West Germany, in agreeing to end direct military aid to Israel at the insistence of Egypt, has suffered a major diplomatic defeat.

That is the consensus in diplomatic circles in Bonn.

The total extent of Germany's discomfiture was not yet clear as envoys continued to shuttle back and forth among Bonn, Cairo, Frankfurt and Jerusalem. Most diplomats, however, believed West Germany had opened the door to continuing blackmail in its desperate effort to preserve the Hallstein doctrine, under which West Germany does not recognize any nation which recognizes East Germany.

If other nations follow Egypt's successful exabple, it is likely West Germany will pay heavily in the years to come in attempting to prevent general diplomatic recognition of East Germany as a nation.

In agreeing to halt arms shipments to Israel, and for its promises not to recognize the Jewish state, the government of Ludwig Erhard only got Gamal Adbel Nasser's promise that he would continue non-recognition of the East German regime of Walter Ulbricht. It was also reported that Nasser will only give Ulbricht a second-class reception when Ulbricht visits Egypt beginning Feb. 26.

What was shocking to non-Communist observers in Bonn was the knowledge, put into words to this correspondent by a top-ranking West German party chief, of Russia's "frightening" success in behind-the-scenes manipulation.

The Russian government called signals and egged Nasser on, this source declared. While the Kremlin did not gain full diplomatic recognition for East Germany, it made the cost to West Germany almost prohibitively high.

Now, almost any nation seeking concessions from West Germany can threaten diplomatic recognition of East Germany and apparently gain its points.

The Erhard government's concessions to Egypt obviously do not reflect the desires of a majority of the German people. The report that Russia masterminded the deal, forcing concessions from West Germany, also rankles.

It is now known that former Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev urged Nasser to invite Ulbricht last year. Alexander Shelepin, now high in the Kremlin hierarchy, again urged the invitation in October.

Erhard

Nasser's bid to Ulbricht in January was first assayed as de facto recognition of East Germany in Bonn's first reaction. The Erhard government indicated unofficially that it would break relations with Cairo and halt aid programs which had already funneled $200,000,000 to Egypt. The Erhard regime quickly became more conciliatory, however.

It also was a matter of considerable surprise that West Germany had been furnishing arms to Israel since 1960. This had been widely rumored, but until Nasser made it his price for non-recognition of East Germany, it had not been confirmed.

It was also believed that the Erhard government must make handsome concessions to Israel — in non-military, economic areas—to save some face for knuckling under to Nasser and ending arms aid.

Chancellor Erhard spent two hours conferring with Dr. Felix Shinnar, the Israeli special representative in Bonn, who then flew to Israel to confer with his government.

It was said West Germany had an $80,000,000 arms commitment to Israel, most of which had already been shipped.

There were reports that West Germany had assured Dr. Shinnar that Bonn would not permit Israel to suffer by termination of the arms aid. In some circles, this was taken to mean that West Germany would stand as guarantor for Israel's account in placing arms orders elsewhere.

There's reportedly a second, unfulfilled arms obligation existing between West Germany and Israel. It will apparently take much negotiating before a satisfactory settlement is reached.

"Serious Consequences"

Warning Sent Cairo: Cancel Ulbricht Visit

BONN (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder advised the Egyptian ambassador Saturday of the "serious consequences" which might result from the proposed Cairo visit of East German President Walter Ulbricht, the federal press office said.

West Germany announced Friday it is stopping arms aid to "areas of tension" including Israel, and simultaneously warned Egypt not to go ahead with the proposed Cairo visit of Ulbricht, expected later this month.

The announcement followed two days of official silence after Egyptian Premier Ali Sabry told the National Assembly in Cairo Wednesday that West Germany was ending arms aid to Israel.

Informed sources said 80 per cent of a 1960 secret agreement between West Germany and Israel has been fulfilled, and that Bonn will press Israel to take the rest of the sum involved in non-military deliveries.

Mr. Kronitz said West Germany's original decision to supply Israel arms recognized Bonn's "moral obligation" to help the Jewish nation and "in some measure atone" for Nazi atrocities against the Jews during the Second World War.

MONTREAL (CP) — The Labor Zionist Movement of Canada said Saturday it is "shocked and deeply disturbed" by the West German government's decision to halt arms shipments to Israel.

"This decision places the security of the state of Israel and the prospects for peace in the Middle East in great danger," President Leon Kronitz said in a statement.

Heiress' Mother Dies At 60

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The mother of heiress Gloria Vanderbilt, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, died of cancer Saturday at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital here. She was 60 years old.

A hospital spokesman said Mrs. Vanderbilt was admitted on Feb. 2.

She first had entered the hospital for surgery last Dec. 8. Her doctor at that time said the surgery was performed on the aorta, the body's major artery.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was the widow of Reginald C. Vanderbilt.

Following his death, she and other members of her family were involved in a custody fight over her daughter Gloria. Ultimately, the daughter's aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Vanderbilt Whitney, was given custody.

ASTIGMATISM

Nearly nine out of ten people have astigmatism, many without knowing it. Astigmatism causes an uneven focusing of the light rays that enter your eye. The rays of light in one section of a beam are focused at one point, but the rays of a section at right angles to this are focused at a different point. Thus a blurred picture or image results. In many cases, the image can be made quite clear by a constant focusing of the lens in the eye. This, however, usually causes a great deal of strain, fatigue, soreness of the eyes and frequent headaches. To have comfortable vision and to protect the only pair of eyes you will ever have, be sure they are free from this common defect, or that they are properly corrected for it. It is advisable to have your eyes examined at least once every two years.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Mrs. Daisy A. Dodd would like to express their deepest gratitude to Dr. Neil R. Stewart for his constant care and attention.
To Sandringham Private Hospital staff, for their outstanding service, and personal kindness.
To the Rev. J. A. Roberts, for solace and understanding, so beautifully expressed in the simple service, that brought its own comfort.
To our dear relatives, valued friends both near and afar, and our neighbors, whose esteem, of our beloved mother and granny, and thoughts of us, were so lovingly expressed, by their letters, cards, and the many beautiful flowers. To the Pythian Sisters of Island Temple No. 8 who acted as flower bearers, following the service, and for many acts of kindness. The officers and members of El Vic Mahuta No. 142.
Florence Nightingale Chapter, I.O.D.E. Victoria and District Parent-Teacher Council. To the dear friends who served as pallbearers.
To McCall Bros. Floral Chapel, for their thoughtful consideration.
Our sincere thanks to you all. The sympathetic understanding and many kindly acts all blend into a heartwarming memory that we will cherish always.
Mr. and Mrs. William Blair.
Mr. and Mrs. W. Alan Blair.

We wish to take this opportunity of expressing our sincere thanks and appreciation to our many relatives, friends and neighbors for their lovely floral offerings and expressions of sympathy at the loss of our beloved husband, father and grandfather, Robert Warnock. We would especially like to thank B.C. Forest Products management, Sawmill Division, his fellow workers, IWA Local 1-118, pallbearers, Rev. S. Parsons and McCall Bros.
—Mrs. Dorothy Warnock and family.

We are thankful to friends for their sympathy and support during the long sickness and loss of Sheila. It was more helpful than you know. Thanks also due to Dr. L. Bapty, Dr. Lockyer, staff of Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals, Rev. C. A. Scott, and McCall Bros.—Mrs. C. Mackinnon and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HOCKNELL—In memory of Mrs. Ann Hocknell, who passed away February 14, 1963.
Deep in the heart lies a picture
Of a loved one laid to rest.
In memory's frame we shall keep it
Because she was one of the best.
—Ever remembered by her family.

ROBERTS—In loving memory of my dear husband, Jack Roberts, who passed away Feb. 14, 1962.
He bade no one his last farewell,
He said good-bye to none;
The heavenly gates were opened,
A loving voice said "Come."
I often sit and think of him,
The things we used to say;
I wonder why he had had to die
Without a chance to say good-bye.
Though out of sight, you're ever
Still missed, loved, still mine;
You will live with me in memory
Until the end of time.
—Sadly missed by your loving wife, Flo.

STEVENS—In loving memory of a wonderful son, Leslie John Stevens, who passed away February 13, 1964.
No one knows our longing
As we write these simple lines,
For our dear son's love and friendship
Which was ours for a time.
You shared our dreams,
Our hopes, our tears,
God bless you, dear Son,
For giving us those precious years.
—Sadly missed by Mother and Dad.

VINCENT—In cherished memory of my beloved husband and "Our Daddy," Roy Wm. Vincent, who was called home February 15, 1964.
One year has passed since that sad day
When one we loved was called away.
God took him home, it was His will,
But in our hearts he liveth still.
The dearest Daddy, the kindest friend,
One of the best whom God could lend;
Loving, thoughtful, gentle and true,
Always willing a kind act to do.
—Deeply missed by your loving wife "Tory" and sons Ronnie, Rickey, Randy, Rusty and Baby Roy.

VINCENT—In loving memory of a wonderful son-in-law, Roy William Vincent, who passed away Feb. 15, 1964.
No one knows our longings
As we write these simple lines,
For our dear son's love and friendship
Which was ours for a time.
You shared our dreams,
Our hopes, our tears,
God bless you, dear Son,
For giving us those precious years.
—Sadly missed by Mom Wyatt and family.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

BRIDGE QUIZ

3,000 deals were played in the North American Team Trials before six players won the right to take on Italy, Britain and Argentina in the next World Championship. Here are just six of those deals — with each of the six team members taking one of the winning positions which helped qualify him — or her. If you can take the same winning positions, maybe you should be on the team, too. With the cards shown in each case, what should South bid?

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

a. Pass. Although North has bid twice, the second bid shows no extra strength. North could have as little as 4 or 5 points — which is what B. J. Becker's partner did have. By passing two diamonds and making just eight tricks, Becker netted a plus score on a deal where six players out of nine got too high.

b. The point-saving pass was found by Mrs. Dorothy Hayden among others. Despite South's massive trump holding, four spades was made four times out of five — even though it was not doubled.

c. Five diamonds. A player who has preempted should leave decisions to partner, so in principle Ivan Erdos should have passed here. However, principle's don't always win matches, and five diamonds proved a rousing success. East-West went on to five spades, which was defeated for an 11 point pick-up for Erdos.

d. Pass. With a seemingly ready-to-run heart suit, Kelsey Petterson's decision to pass three no trump was impeccable — and was worth 10 International Match points. A bad trump break ruins four hearts.

e. Five clubs. Adverse vulnerability made this a close decision for Howard Schenken. In practice, his five club bid was doubled and was just made, though it could have been set on a different defence. Even then it would have shown a profit, since four spades was there for E-W.

f. Pass. A classic case for keeping quiet. Partner has failed to open the bidding, so there is little hope of buying the hand. Surprisingly, Peter Leventritt was one of only four players who passed. His opponents made a part score, but four players who entered the bidding on Leventritt's hand got clobbered for penalties ranging up to 1,100.

THE ASSOCIATES
HOME OWNER'S LOAN PLAN!
Now you can borrow the money you need to pay off large outstanding bills . . . to finance a university education . . . to remodel your entire home . . . purchase a summer cottage . . . or for any good money reason. It's the Associates Home Owner's Loan Plan: big money for today's biggest needs. Here's how it works. If you're a home owner, you can use the equity in your home as collateral for the loan. And you may qualify whether your home is paid for or not. You get cash at a reasonable rate of interest—no bonus charge or hidden fees added. Stop at your nearest Associates office or telephone and ask about our HOME OWNER'S LOAN PLAN—it's the easy, worry-free way to enjoy the things you want now!

145 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

COMMERCIAL HIGHWAY CORNER

We are selling the best location on Trans-Canada No. 1 Highway for development. We have been using this corner for a trailer sales lot and dispensing propane gas. We now want to cut our activities so as to be free in the winter.

This corner of Trans-Canada No. 1 Highway and Millstream Cross Road, about 7 miles from town, is now a busy corner and with the future U.S.A. to Alaska via B.C. ferry loop to open, the traffic will be greatly increased.

This is outside the municipalities (lowest taxes, minimum building restrictions bother). We have ample room to do what we want beside the corner portion. A woman or big child can tend to the propane gas service. If the husband wishes he can hold another job, or you could add gasoline pumps, or put up a grocery-hardware store. There is not on Trans-Canada from Douglas Street to the Malahat, a store on this Highway. It is hard to find any property for commercial use anymore. We have been established for many years as commercial and offer this ideal corner at a price including the propane sales (net approximately $?? a month steady-like) and tanks, pumps and spare cylinders for $28,000. Will sell on terms, $6,000 down.

We have the capital to finance the installation of gasoline pumps or a store building. You put up 25% of their cost and we will finance the other 75%. If you want to use a mobile home on the lot for living quarters, we will also sell and finance it to you. This is a real opportunity. Call us before it is too late. You may not have another chance.

PRINTED PATTERN A914 SIZES 10-18

For Spring! Sheath Plus Sweater

Spring's smartest "plus" is the knit sweater that pairs up with a simple, bloused sheath. McMullen creates the ensemble for town, country, riding in a convertible, anywhere! Printed Pattern A914 includes two patterns—sheath and sweater. The cardigan is knitted in one piece on a circular needle from the neck down including sleeves! Note the sunburst cable yoke that adds a one-of-a-kind look. Choose pastels or vivid colors in knitting worsted for sweater—jersey, crepe, linen for the dress.

Printed Pattern A914 is available in Misses' Sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 16 sheath requires 2 yards 54-inch fabric.

Send one dollar for Printed Pattern A914 to The Daily Colonist, Pattern Department, 60 Front Street W., Toronto, Ont. Please print plainly your name, address with zone, style number and size.

Send for the Premiere Edition of our Couture Pattern Collection—57 of the world's most beautiful designer originals plus 50c free coupon to apply any one dollar pattern. Send 50c right now for Couture Collection 10.

3-BEDROOM HOME
$18,500
Here is an attractive and immaculately-kept home with handsome yellow cedar and stucco exterior. A gracious cathedral entrance leads to a combined living and dining room with centre fireplace, to a spacious, bright and modern kitchen, to three bedrooms with wide closets, and to a full bathroom with vanity.

The front window offers you a secluded view of trees and rock. The rear view provides freedom with the mountain range on the horizon.

Easy steps lead down from the entrance hall to the lower floor, comprising of a large family room with a wide picture window in the front and French doors opening onto a covered patio in the rear. In addition to this you find a storage room, a utility room, an extra washroom, and a drive-in garage with workspace in the back.

The layout of the property would enable the two-car owner to provide for an extra parking space.

Week on the Prairies

Cells So Packed Sleep Outlawed

Police Chief Robert Taft got some action from Winnipeg city council when he charged that prisoners "are practically hanging out the windows waiting to appear before the magistrates."

At one period, he said, there were 92 in police cells, including 15 women, and there wasn't room for all of them to sleep.

He blamed lack of court personnel.

City council acted after three days' deliberation. It voted $1,500 to meet the cost of a third magistrate and third prosecutor on a temporary basis.

Attorney-General Stewart McLean has offered to pay half the cost of the required expansion of the court, but up to now Winnipeg has not met his terms.

Manitoba

Manitoba's first potash mine and refinery is soon to be established at St. Lazare, near the Saskatchewan border, according to Metal Mines Ltd. of Toronto, which is planning a $30 to $40 million operation there.

Shaft sinking is expected to begin this year.

A regional air service to Norway House, 300 miles north of Winnipeg, has been inaugurated by TransAir Limited of Winnipeg. An eight-passenger aircraft will serve the community of 1,500 with three flights a week.

A limited form of shared services for church-operated schools in Manitoba—including free transportation and text books—has been recommended by a committee of the legislature. But Premier Duff Roblin says his government won't legislate unless the report receives majority approval of every party in the legislature.

This brought charge that the premier was trying to saddle the opposition with the onus of the decision.

A plastic surgeon says getting a thumb pulled off is the most frequent accident injury on farms.

Such accidents usually result because a farmer wants to save a few minutes, Dr. Norman P. Merkeley of Winnipeg told the Western Canada Farm Safety Conference.

He said farmers, especially during winter, don't take their gloves off when they check or clean a machine. Wearing gloves gives them a false sense of security.

Saskatchewan

Dr. C. D. McRae, a prominent physician and surgeon in Regina for 25 years, has died there.

He had been living in Kelowna, B.C.

After some time in practice in Transcona, Sask., he received a fellowship in the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons in Edinburgh in 1927.

He returned to Canada to practise in Arcola, moved to Regina, and retired in 1959.

Mel Air Ltd., of Swift Current will begin a twice-daily passenger service between Regina and Swift Current in about a month, company president Robert Jensen has disclosed.

The company has received approval from the Air Transport Board for the Regina-Swift Current run, but had an application to extend the route through Medicine Hat to Calgary rejected.

The company has ordered a six-passenger, twin-engine Aztec C plane, and expects to start service shortly after March 1.

For a motorist stalled on a winter Prairie road, the price of survival may be less than 50 cents—the cost of two tins of canned meat and a box of wooden matches.

Staff Sergeant A. E. McAuley of Saskatoon RCMP says many travellers who have died of exposure would still be alive had they been properly outfitted for winter conditions.

In addition to matches, he said, only a few common household items and a good supply of common sense are required.

Implementation of the recommendations of the final report of the Royal commission on public administration by the Saskatchewan government could result in a saving of between $7,500,000 and $10,000,000 annually, the commission's chairman reports.

Chairman Frederick W. Johnson, a Regina lawyer, made the estimate.

The commission tabled in the legislature a 142-page interim report of "special extracts" from the final report which, the commission said, "warranted immediate consideration" by the government. The final report is expected within three weeks.

Alberta

Two Calgary lawyers are to seek the provincial Conservative party leadership at a convention in Edmonton March 19 and 20.

They are Peter Lougheed, 36, grandson of Alberta's first Conservative federal minister, Sir James Lougheed, and Duncan McKillop, 29.

Henry Lembiez, president of the Alberta Fish and Game Association, says his group will continue to feed ducks and pheasants despite criticism from biologists, who said the feeding program helped to keep inferior birds alive. Mr. Lembiez said ducks which land on open water within Calgary city limits could not be left to starve.

Alberta dairy farmers had record gross returns of slightly more than $53,000,000 from milk sales last year.

McNamara Construction Western Limited of Edmonton has been awarded a $7,141,000 contract for construction of an institution for young offenders at Drumheller. It will include 21 buildings and will have a capacity of 450 prisoners.

The institution, the third of its type in Canada, is designed for younger and first-time offenders and includes more facilities for recreation than are normally provided in penal institutions.

Trapped In Icy Pit

BULLETIN

DOLGEVILLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Rescuers early today abandoned for the night attempts to reach the cave explorer. Police say they are certain he is dead.

DOLGEVILLE, N.Y. (AP)—A 23-year-old cave explorer was trapped Saturday night under a shower of cold water in a 75-foot deep pit, 1,000 feet inside a cave near this village east of Utica.

Herkimer County Sheriff Richard Folts said rescue workers, hindered by contined conditions, did not know if James Mitchell of Lynn, Mass., was still alive.

AFTER NOON

Mitchell and two companions, Hedy Miller, 21, a nurse from Boston, and Charles Bennett, also 21, of Groton on the Hudson and a graduate student at Harvard University, entered Schroeder's Cave on an exploring mission shortly after noon.

The cave, room-size near its entrance, narrows to a 12- to 16-inch-wide crawl space and the three had wormed their way back to the underground river.

Four from B.C. Hunt Texas Snakes

Rattling Good Time

By TOM JOHNSON

SWEETWATER, Tex. (AP)—Against the background of chugging oil wells and restless cattle, four Canadians learned Saturday how they catch live rattlesnakes on the rolling ranchlands of West Texas.

It didn't take the four British Columbians very long to catch on to the Texas method.

They captured a dozen Western diamond-back rattlers — one five feet long and as big around as a man's arm — in their first 15 minutes of hunting.

AMONG 300

The Kelowna residents, who drove 3,000 miles to participate in the Sweetwater rattlesnake roundup, were among some 300 hunters taking part.

By nightfall Saturday, the seventh annual running of the three-day event will have netted 3,000 to 4,000 rattlesnakes.

The reptiles are "milked" of their bright yellow venom, worth as much as $20 per gram for medical research, and hundreds are butchered for their skins and meat.

LIKE TOUGH HEN

"Rattlesnake meat 50 cents a plate," read signs at the Nolan County coliseum here where the snakes are brought after capture. The meat is cooked like fried chicken and tastes like a tough old hen.

The Canadians — Mr. and Mrs. Bill M. Baker, Jim Burbridge and Joan Critchley — were ready to begin hunting at dawn but a snowstorm delayed activities until about noon, when the sun melted away the snow.

Their guides, Don Akin and Ed Akin Jr., took the visitors to several dens on the family ranch near Sweetwater.

FIND DEN

The Akins demonstrated the West Texas method which goes like this:

First, a rocky ledge is located and a possible den found. Such a den usually will have a relatively small opening, perhaps two feet wide and several inches high.

A large mirror is used to reflect sunlight into the pitch-black cavern. If any of the hibernating snakes can be seen, the next phase begins.

Nanaimo Hotel Owner Dies in Road Crash

NANAIMO (Special — William Frizzel, 46, owner of the Quarterway Hotel here, was killed in a collision at 4th Street and the Trans-Canada Highway in the suburb of Wellington Saturday night. RCMP said the Frizzel car and a pickup collided. Mrs. Frizzel was in satisfactory condition in hospital while the driver of the pickup was not hurt.

And Fires Home

Father Kills Five Kin, Self

PUYALLUP, Wash. (AP)—A father killed five members of his family, set fire to his home, then shot himself early Saturday, Pierce County coroner Larry Amundsen said.

Amundsen termed it manslaughter-suicide and said Melton Fisk, 43, was found dead near the burned home. A 12-gauge shotgun lay beneath him.

Amundsen said an autopsy performed on the body of Harley Fisk, 17, revealed three stab wounds. A charred pocket knife was discovered near the father's body.

SLEPT UPSTAIRS

The other victims were Fisk's wife, Mary, 38, their three children, Linda, 13, Carol, 5, Harley, and Fisk's mother, Laura W. Fisk, 65. They had slept in upstairs bedrooms in the two-storey frame house near this berry-growing centre.

Fisk, who worked at a Tacoma chemical plant, reportedly had called in Friday evening and said he would not be at work because his daughter was sick.

County Detective Bill Regan said the family automobile, hooked onto a house trailer, was parked in the driveway.

The Fisks' telephone was stuffed under the vehicle's front seat. The car was locked.

Neighbors said Fisk and his family were going to begin a five-day vacation Sunday.

A neighbor girl, Linnea Anderson, told police she was awakened about 4 a.m. by an explosion. Her mother, also roused by the blast, telephoned the community fire department.

'WEREN'T SCREAMS'

Linnea watched the Fisk home go up in flames from her bedroom 100 feet away.

"There weren't any screams at all," she said. "It was very quiet."

Volunteer firemen said the home, a converted cattle barn, was too far gone to save.

The five scorched bodies were found in the rubble. The coroner said autopsies on other bodies were nearly impossible.

Spectre of Korea

RED BORDER BUILDUP

From UPI, AP

TOKYO—China has threatened a Korea-style intervention in the Vietnamese war. It also appealed to Russia to close ranks in the struggle against "our common enemy—U.S. imperialism."

A Chinese government statement broadcast from Peking Saturday said the U.S. bombing raids on North Viet Nam gave the North Vietnamese the right to strike "counterblows" at South Viet Nam with Chinese support.

The Peking statement, broadcast in English, hinted that the Chinese might be willing to support North Viet Nam by advancing troops "wave upon wave" as they did in the Korean war in 1950.

Peking did not promise any imminent military action in its vague warning. But it was the strongest Chinese threat of possible intervention to date.

The statement, aimed at the United States, said: "You will become utterly helpless when the people resisting aggression, instead of being afraid of you, dare to fight, defy difficulties and advance wave upon wave."

"You have been taught a lesson on this score in the Korean war," the Peking declaration added. "Do you want to have the lesson repeated in Indochina?"

In another broadcast China pledged its people will stand by the Soviet people in combatting "U.S. imperialism" and called for world Communist unity to give "resolute support of the armed anti-U.S. struggles of the Vietnamese."

Tass reported that the Kremlin sent a similar "unity" message to Peking, but that it did not mention the United States as the foe.

The Soviet message, signed by Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev, President Anastas Mikoyan and Premier Alexei Kosygin, spoke only of "aggressive imperialist quarters."

UNITY TOASTED

In Communist North Korea, Premier Kosygin boasted that Communist forces are strong enough to stop "the aggression in Viet Nam" and predicted "victory will be ours." He toasted unity in the Communist world.

The Chinese pledge to remain at the side of the "great Soviet people" was signed by Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, President Liu Shaochi, Premier Chou En-lai and Marshal Chu Teh.

FINAL VICTORY

It was sent to Moscow in connection with the 15th anniversary of the Chinese-Soviet treaty of friendship, alliance and mutual assistance.

The Soviet Union, China and all other Communist countries must unite to fight against "U.S.-led imperialism until final victory is won," the Chinese message said.

"This is the unshirkable international duty of each and every Socialist country."

DISPUTE IGNORED

The text of the 550-word message was broadcast in Chinese by Radio Peking.

Although it comes at a time when the Kremlin and Peking are at odds over how to spread Communism throughout the world, there was no mention of this ideological dispute in the broadcast.

Go South For Winter

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters)—South Viet Nam is trying to boost its tourist trade. "Come to Viet Nam" tourist advertisements — with the slogan "For your next vacation . . . something different" have appeared in Malaysian papers.

At UN

Viet Nam Protest Jails Five

NEW YORK (AP) — Five persons were arrested Saturday at a series of protest demonstrations over Viet Nam at the United Nations.

Three girls and a young man belonging to a group called Youth Against War and Fascism, were taken into custody when they tried to break through police lines that confined their demonstration to the UN plaza.

About 20 minutes later, another youth scuffled with police and was arrested when he failed to obey orders to keep moving.

The demonstrators had been parading back and forth along the plaza inside lines of wooden barricades set up by police.

Earlier, a long line of demonstrators sponsored by the Women's Strike for Peace marched for two hours without incident after holding an hour-long peace vigil in the plaza.

The marchers delivered letters to the United States, Soviet, British and French missions to the U.N.

The letters were signed by Mrs. Dagmar Wilson, founder of the Women's Strike for Peace.

They said in part:

"The grave situation in Viet Nam threatens the peace of the entire world . . . We condemn and fear the recent events of this week, which substitute military force for constructive diplomatic policy."

Other demonstrations were carried on outside New York. Rival groups of about 40 members each picketed at the University of Cincinnati, in Ohio.

One called itself Students Against the War in Viet Nam, while the others is Students for a Strong Stand.

LONDON (AP) — The Sunday Times reports that Red Chinese troops had been observed crossing into North Viet Nam and that big concentrations of Chinese forces are massing near the North Viet Nam-China border.

The reports were contained in a front-page story compiled from information filed by two of the paper's correspondents—Richard Hughes in Hong Kong and an unnamed special correspondent in Saigon.

"The spectre of another Korea-style struggle with Communist China suddenly appeared over South-east Asia Saturday as reports began to come in that units of the Chinese People's Liberation army had begun moving into the satellite state of North Viet Nam," the article said.

The story reported only two battalions of troops had been sighted actually moving into North Viet Nam. But the article said:

"Reports from Hong Kong of U.S. air reconnaissance over South China pay particular attention to Nanning on the line to Hanoi, capital of North Viet Nam. Military rolling stock, including freight trucks and carriages, is said to be concentrated at Nanning in considerable numbers."

The article said since the Tonkin Gulf incident six months ago, Nanning had become the headquarters for a force of some 200,000 troops.

The two battalions entering North Viet Nam were said to have been seen on the highway running parallel with the Nanning-Hanoi railroad.

Anti-Pope Play Halted in Rome

ROME (AP) — Police marched into a theatre Saturday night and stopped the final dress rehearsal of Rolf Hochhuth's play, The Deputy.

The play, which has not yet been staged in Italy, was to have had its premiere before members of a private theatre club today.

The theatre hired by the club is in the basement of a disused 18th-century church in central Rome across the river from Vatican City.

When the police marched in and an officer gave the order for the theatre to be cleared, the actors chanted "liberty, liberty" and clapped their hands rhythmically.

Some of the audience joined in.

Pope Paul has several times attacked accusations against Pope Pius XII in the play.

It says Pope Pius failed to speak out against Nazi persecution of the Jews.

Israelis Shoot Infiltrators

JERUSALEM, Israel (UPI) — An Israeli patrol shot dead two Arab infiltrators Friday night south of the Gaza Strip, an army spokesman announced.

He said the patrol seized a sub-machine gun and ammunition.

No further details were immediately available.

'Supplied Planes'

Uganda Blames U.S. in Bombing

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP)—Prime Minister Milton Obote charged Saturday Congolese planes supplied by the United States bombed two villages in Uganda.

He said Uganda's ambassador in Washington was ordered to protest to the state department.

SOLDIER INJURED

An official statement said the villages of Paidha and Goli were bombed and one Ugandan soldier injured.

The statement claimed the planes were American-supplied and piloted by "American citizens, Cuban refugees or other mercenaries."

NO CONTROL

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said:

"Our embassy has pointed out to the Ugandan Foreign Ministry that the United States has no combat aircraft in the Congo and that the U.S.-manufactured airplanes provided to the Congolese government are not under our operational control.

"Accordingly we advised the Uganda government to express its concern directly to the Congolese government in Leopoldville."

Fog Slows Hunt For Plane

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP)—Poor visibility is hampering a search for a plane missing over Washington state with four persons aboard, including a Canadian couple.

Only one search plane was out Saturday looking for the missing aircraft, which was on a flight from Olympia, Wash., to Las Vegas. Aboard were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henry of Vancouver and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Barry of Olympia.

Clearer skies in the area of Yakima today are expected to bring out more search planes.

Man and Wife from England

New Dental Team in B.C. Only One in All Canada

Story and picture
By AGNES FLETT

CUMBERLAND — Dr. M. Curzon and his wife Jenny, who arrived in Canada from England only about a month ago, are believed to be the only man and wife dental team in the nation.

The provincial government hired them to take part in a school dental program which has been in operation for some time, and the Curzons started on Hornby and Denman Islands near here.

By the time the picture above was taken, they were operating a clinic in the Cumberland school, assisting such pupils as Wendy Hart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hart of Fraser Road.

The program, designed for about 50 small and fairly-isolated communities throughout the province, provides dental services to pre-school children and pupils of Grades 1, 2 and 3.

The children receive complete checkups, necessary dental work and cleaning and painting with a fluoride solution. B.C. pays most of the cost, with the local school board paying a small share.

The government also supplies the equipment, which travels from community to community with the dentists.

The Curzon team will go to such communities as Port Alice, Port Hardy, Alert Bay and Sayward.

Dr. Frank McCombie, a provincial government dental consultant, said the couple was started in this area so they would "gradually" get used to Canada's wilderness.

The Curzon's first reaction: they thought Hornby and Denman were "awfully isolated."

Five Face Charges

NANAIMO — Gordon Atkinson, 20, one of five people facing similar charges following a police check of local licensed premises Friday night, was fined $50 in magistrate's court Saturday after pleading guilty to being a minor in licensed premises.

The other four will probably appear in the same court this week. RCMP chief Staff Sgt. Frank Salter said, "It is intended periodic checks under the Government Liquor Act will be conducted."

DUNCAN — Funeral services will be held from the Hirst chapel at 2 p.m. Monday for well-known district resident Eric Johan Hjalmar Erickson, 75, who died Friday in King's Daughters' Hospital. A native of Sweden, he lived at Youbou for about 40 years before moving here two years ago. He was employed by Western Forest Industries at Honeymoon Bay for 14 years until his retirement in 1956.

PARKSVILLE — A $3,500 cheque has been presented to village commission chairman John Robertson by W. D. Ewing, manager of Mac-Powell's Northwest Bay division, to help build a picnic shelter in Parksville community park.

NANAIMO — Mrs. Phillis Thomas, 644 Centre, was released from hospital early Saturday after treatment for injuries received when her car went out of control at Townsite Road and Terminal Avenue.

PORT ALBERNI — A 13-year-old girl received a minor cut and scratches when she was struck by a car at Third Avenue and Argyle Street Friday evening. RCMP said Laurie Anderson was walking on Argyle when she was struck by a vehicle driven by William James Carr of Alberni.

CUMBERLAND — Long-awaited renovations to Holy Trinity Church will probably be completed by March, officials said Thursday. They said the renovations likely will be done in time for a parish dinner March 2 where the church guild will do the catering.

COURTENAY — Damage to the car was estimated at $600 and to property was described as extensive in a recent accident at 17th and McPhee. Police say the car, driven by Terrance Jack Brown of Courtenay, may have suffered a brake failure before going across the road, jumping a cement curb, tearing down part of a garage and tearing gaps in two fences.

Mid-Island Association

New Rules in Effect For Car Race Tracks

NANAIMO — The Mid-Island Auto Racing Association has put new racing regulations into effect which will allow B-modified drivers to build their cars to Canadian American Auto Racing Association A-modified standards.

Jalopy drivers will now be able to run any Canadian or American passenger car up to 1954 except cars with overhead valve V-8 engines.

'EXCITING SEASON'

Officials of MIARA say auto racing enthusiasm is running high this year and they expect "a very exciting season."

Jerry (Basher) Anderson of jalopy fame has moved up to the B-modified class by purchasing a Chev V-8 engine.

Driver Nibbs Anderson ran into a bit of hard luck during the cold weather by neglecting to drain the motor in his modified.

A FAIR AMOUNT

The block froze and cracked, so Nibbs will have a fair amount of work to do to have his car ready for the season.

Renewal of the contract for Grandview Bowl is being considered by the civic properties and recreation commission. At the last meeting of the commission MIARA also asked for some repairs to the structure.

Commissioner Jack Stevenson, head of the finance committee, said there is "a good possibility" a decision will be handed down at the next meeting Feb. 22.

Half-Century in Alberni

Best-Informed Man in Town

By MARGARET TREBETT

PORT ALBERNI — John Mintianski, this city's John the Barber, can thank his flair for landscaping ground for his 50-year career of landscaping heads.

Mr. Mintianski, a native of Austria-Hungary who came to Canada in March of 1910, talked about his career last week, a day or two after passing his 80th birthday.

CATHOLIC COLLEGE

He worked in woods and dam jobs in Quebec and Ontario before going to a Catholic college near Sudbury, Ont., about half a century ago to landscape the grounds.

At the end of the season, he stayed on to work at odd jobs around the college and soon took on the chore of cutting the students' hair—and some of the priests even lined up for a turn in the improvised barber chair.

GONE HUNTING

A neighboring barber who found he had lost his college clientele invited Mr. Mintianski to work for him, offering a certificate on completion of training.

Within a month, the shop owner had left his new man in full charge and gone hunting.

A barber's wages then were $2 for a day which ended at midnight, but Mr. Mintianski stayed on, working on commission until mid-1917.

WESTERN TERMINUS

He inquired about rail service to the west, found Port Alberni was the western terminus and headed this way.

He arrived Aug. 10, 1917, and within a week was working in Walter Hamley's barber shop on Argyle Street, after cutting the boss' hair to show he was qualified.

John the Barber

John the Barber bought Mr. Hamley's two-chair shop for $250 in 1922 and hired as his first employee Wentworth Horton who later set up his own shop, as did some of his many assistants.

He moved to his present shop at 114 Fourth Avenue South a few years ago and now is listening to his third generation of men and boys discussing affairs of country and community while he works.

If they have a mind to, customers can read the Police Gazette, which Mr. Mintianski considers essential equipment.

LIKE THE PEOPLE

"I've enjoyed the town and I like the people," says John the Barber.

The community regards him as one of its best-informed members. He has a fund of stories about the oldtimers and their descendants, and says his memories of the Alberni Valley would fill a book.

CHARTER EAGLE

An Elk since 1924 and a charter member of the Eagles, he still gardens as a hobby at his home on Fifth Avenue South.

His wife operates her own business, the Home Aviary, and gets the credit from Mr. Mintianski for the fact he's still in good working shape.

"She takes good care of me," says John the Barber.

Carpenters Honored By Nanaimo Local

NANAIMO—Pins for 25 years of service were given to Fred Piper and William Emerson as Local 527 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners held a banquet and dance Friday night in the Shoreline to mark its 25th anniversary. The pins were presented by international representative William Page, a union member for almost 60 years.

But Shortage Unlikely

Island-Grown Spuds Near Barrel-Bottom

The supply of Vancouver Island-grown potatoes is expected to run out within six weeks, it was learned Saturday.

But officials doubt if the dwindling supply will create a potato shortage for Island consumers.

U.S. SCARCITY

Don Wilson of Ladysmith, president of the Island Vegetable Co-operative Association and representative of the B.C. Coast Vegetable Marketing Board, said a potato scarcity in the U.S. is taxing local supplies.

"We don't grow enough to supply our own needs," Mr. Wilson explained, "and consequently we depend on other producers."

USUALLY IMPORTANT

To bolster local supplies, potatoes are usually imported from Alberta, Washington, Idaho and Oregon.

But the U.S. shortage has seriously slashed the Washington and Oregon supply, and Idaho spuds are fairly expensive.

Alberta potatoes are being stored in Vancouver and Victoria, and Mr. Wilson expects them to be used when the local supply diminishes.

FEW CENTS MORE

The Prairie potatoes may be sold for a few cents more, however, to cover storage costs.

California potatoes will be ready by about mid-April, which will also help fill the gap until the local crop is ready for marketing again in June.

Locally, Vancouver Island potatoes are selling at about 10 pounds for $1.09.

WEEKEND SALE

However, a weekend sale dropped the price to 10 pounds for 69 cents.

Grand Forks potatoes are also selling at 10 pounds for $1.09, while Idaho spuds sell at 10 pounds for $1.35.

'You're My Funny Valentine'

The chap who wrote the song My Funny Valentine certainly didn't have these two Duncan youngsters in mind, but one thing he set down seems to fit. Loren John Perraton, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Perraton of Cowichan Lake Road, and Brenda Jean Watson, 20 months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Watson of Campbell Street, agree with the advice, "Stay, little valentine, stay . . . each day is Valentine's Day."—(Jean Bain)

In Four Centres

Coin Thieves Cash In At Island Laundries

Special to the Colonist

Thieves attempted to clean the cash out of coin laundries in four Vancouver Island centres overnight Friday — Duncan, Ladysmith, Chemainus and Nanaimo.

The Nanaimo break-in was only one of six in that city late Friday and early Saturday.

RCMP in Duncan said they suspected the same person or people were responsible for the four coin laundry theft bids.

BELIEVED SMALL

Undetermined amounts of cash, believed to be small, were removed from laundries in Ladysmith, Chemainus and Nanaimo, but the culprits were unsuccessful in their attempt to open coin boxes in the Duncan building.

Biggest return of all came at the Tally Ho Travelodge in Nanaimo, where about $300 in cash was stolen from the cash register in the dining room.

Police said the thieves forced a kitchen door to gain entry to the building between 5 and 6 a.m.

IN CUSTODY

Nanaimo RCMP said a suspect was in custody following an attempted breaking and entering of the Lantzville fire department about 2:30 a.m. Saturday.

A black Labrador dog worth $800 was stolen from the home of K. S. Hunter at Extension in the Nanaimo area.

SNACK BAR ENTERED

Larry Wilson, 2765 Bowen Road, told police thieves took a chain saw from his car Friday night. The car was in his garage.

Betty's Snack Bar on Victoria Crescent was entered, as was a car owned by James Sage, 337 Bruce, and parked on the Bastion Realty parking lot.

Police did not report whether anything was stolen from the snack bar and car.

School Trustees

Retired Pair Honored

DUNCAN — Two veteran trustees of the Cowichan district school board who retired last year were honored Friday night at the testimonial dinner attended by about 70 people in the Tzouhalem Hotel.

They are Mrs. Isobel Tarlton, who had served for the previous 10 years, and Pat Mason, a trustee for eight years.

BOTH PRAISED

Board chairman Joseph Frumento praised both former trustees as dedicated and conscientious.

Mrs. Tarlton, in her speech of reply, said the public does not realize the difficulties facing school trustees but, despite this, she found the work gratifying.

RECALLS CHARACTERS

She recalled "quite a few characters on the board" and said there were once five Georges among the trustees, although she didn't say if any of the Georges were characters.

Port Alberni Diver

Two Actions Win Lifesaving Award

PORT ALBERNI — The Vancouver Island Divers Council has awarded a lifesaving trophy to Jerry Paquette of this district.

Mr. Paquette won the award by his action in two incidents when fellow skin divers' lives were threatened.

HELD ON SURFACE

Some time ago when he and another man were diving for a body in the Bamfield area, his partner, wearing a dry suit, got into trouble and Paquette held him on the surface of the water until a boat arrived at the scene.

In the later incident, a new diver without proper equipment got into difficulties in rocks and surf on Tongue Point on the east coast of the Island.

Paquette, who had changed out of his diving outfit, went in fully clothed and helped the man to safety.

He and four other members of the local club are expecting to take tests in Victoria soon to qualify as diving instructors.

Five Years Each

Teen Trio to Prison In RCMP Stabbing

SALMON ARM (CP) — Three youths, two of them from Vancouver Island, were sentenced in magistrate's court Friday to five-year prison terms for convictions arising from the stabbing of an RCMP constable.

They are Clare Daniel Wilson, 17, of Campbell River; John Raymond Jamieson, 16, of Kelsey Bay, and Wayne Charles Scott, 17, of North Surrey. All had pleaded guilty.

They and Teresa Levers, 18, of Burnaby, were arrested after Cpl. John Lawson, 33, was stabbed in the back as he took the four to jail in his patrol car. He is recovering.

The three were sentenced for assault causing bodily harm, breaking and entering and theft and possession of a stolen car.

Jamieson and Scott were also sentenced for theft of a car and the girl was given a two-year suspended sentence for breaking and entering and theft, and for possession of a stolen car.

First of Year Lures Crowd

Spectacular Blaze Guts Cumberland Tool Shed

CUMBERLAND — The first fire of the year in Cumberland Friday night gutted a tool shed owned by J. (Skipper) Murray in the camp area just outside the village limits.

The cause of the fire was not determined. Firemen report the shed contained a stove, but it had not been ignited that day.

The shed contained an outboard motor and numerous hand tools.

From other areas of the village, the fire appeared to be of greater extent than it proved to be, and residents on foot and in cars immediately converged on the area.

Mr. Murray is well known as the former owner of the Bevan Hotel.

Cowichan Group Elects

Poultry Outlook Labelled Dismal

DUNCAN — Henry Westwick of Fairbridge was re-elected Friday night to his third year as president of the Cowichan Agricultural Society, defeating Archie Stevenson by one vote.

Mr. Stevenson was elected first vice-president and Norman Quist was re-elected second vice-president.

20TH YEAR ON JOB

Secretary-treasurer is William Barker, who is starting his 20th year in the position.

Society member Hamish Mutter, reporting on the poultry situation, described the Cowichan outlook as "very dismal."

He said the poultry business has a dark and gloomy future unless a national poultry marketing board is formed.

NOT BREAKING EVEN

Even the biggest operators are not breaking even, he added.

The society went on record as strongly supporting a move by the Koksilah Women's Institute to have something done to get rid of unlicensed dogs running loose.

Unit Reunion

Canadian Scottish Regimental Association annual reunion dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m. March 6 in the Bay Street armory.

Parksville Chief Re-elected

PARKSVILLE—W. H. Hamm Wheeler has been re-elected to his eighth consecutive term as chief of the Parksville volunteer fire department.

Other officers chosen at the annual meeting were treasurer Guy Moore and secretary Gaylord Merkel.

The department will begin annual baby sitting courses in the near future. The firemen conduct these courses to give baby sitters a knowledge of what to do in case of fire and how to prevent fires in the home.

Centennial Life for Little Theatre?

Ladysmith Group's Lease on Old School Expiring

By KLAUS MUENTER

LADYSMITH — The fate of the Ladysmith Little Theatre group's home, the old elementary school on Second Avenue, hangs in the balance.

The brightest ray of hope is a rumor that a 1966-67 centennial project for the town might include a theatre.

Town council told the drama group Monday it would consider the group's request for a five-year extension of the lease on the old school after it expires Dec. 1 this year.

Council members were sympathetic to the request but felt the building is unsightly.

It was noted the building is sound but the roof is in poor repair and vandals have broken windows, which had to be replaced or boarded up.

Jack Atkinson, president of the theatre group, says the criterion is not so much how the outside looks but what is inside.

He said the Little Theatre, formed by 12 people in 1955, has won several theatrical competitions.

When the school became Ladysmith's centennial project in 1958, the theatre and several other groups established headquarters there.

Only the small but active and successful theatre unit stayed with it.

"We did a tremendous amount of work," says Mr. Atkinson. "Classrooms were converted into an auditorium which can hold 200 people, the building was rewired and the expensive oil furnace was replaced with two cheaper wood and coal furnaces."

Mr. Atkinson also said the north Island zone of the B.C. drama festival has chosen the old school as its place for a meeting next week.

A theatre group must have a home, he said, because of the need for dressing rooms and storage of props and costumes.

Member John Tooker agreed, pointing out several Island theatre groups have disbanded because no accommodation was available.

Pointing to the theatre, Mr. Atkinson said this is "our home . . . we can come and go when we want . . . we can rehearse without bothering anybody."

Theatre secretary Barbara Little said the group is widely supported by residents of other Island centres as well as Ladysmith people.

Mr. Tooker added: "Why can't a place like Ladysmith have its own miniature theatre?"

The group, which plans interior improvements if the lease is extended, has been heartened by the centennial-project rumors.

So far, no official project has been submitted to the town council and no one is commenting on the rumors.

A PLANK ROADWAY SERVED SETTLERS

By ERIC SISMEY

Not more than a decade ago wooden sidewalks lined many of our streets, especially in small towns. The planks rattled underfoot, protruding nails could trip or scuff one's shoes and knot-holes contributed to local comedy.

I recall one young lady losing the heel of her shoe; a portly Englishman's walking stick snatched from his hand, and "Peg-Leg's" peregrinations reminiscent of Long John Silver. Once, after taking more than his head would hold, he was found at daybreak, sitting on the sidewalk with his timber limb, jammed to the knee, in a hole where a knot had been.

During the last year or two the rattle of loose planks on Island Highway bridges has been quietened as new structures, one by one, have replaced older spans. And it is likely that the planked one-way bridge over the Salmon River at Sayward will rattle and rumble with every passing car for only a few years more.

Norman Lockyer, my friend of many years, who spent his boyhood in Vancouver, writes: "I can remember the old corduroy road that zig-zagged between stumps from the corner of Granville and Georgia Streets all the way to English Bay."

Sandon, the fabulously rich mining camp in the Slocan, was built in the '90s along the steep banks of Carpenter Creek and part of the main street was laid over the stream. In 1955 a freshet washed the ghost town street away leaving only crumbling buildings staring at each other across its boulder-strewn bed.

A plank road was built in the 1920s across many miles of desert in Imperial County, California, where from a modern expressway portions of the wooden track can still be seen, twisted askew by shifting, wind-blown sand. And in the Queen Charlotte Islands there is nothing left of a 14-mile plank road built more than 40 years ago.

At that time frontier camps and settlements on Masett Inlet and Skidegate Inlet were separated by many miles of stormy Hecate Strait and by 1920 transportation between Port Clements and T'lell on Graham Island was urgently needed if the vast timber stands were to be harvested. But between these two outposts there were 14 miles of quaking swamp and muskeg which could engulf man or beast in a matter of moments. This made construction of a road, with the equipment of the day, economically impossible.

Pioneers, remembering corduroy pack trails across boggy land, conceived the idea of a plank road between the two villages and in 1920 construction was started from both ends. But it was not until 1928 that the ends met. The government paid $8,500 for the lumber and the settlers volunteered their labor for the job.

Logs about twice the length of railroad ties were laid crossways about three feet apart and the plank decking slid from one tie to the next for all the 14 miles.

The first wheel tracks were only two planks wide with a gap between, but shortly after the road opened the government authorized the addition of six-inch planks on each side of the originals. This was a great improvement. At intervals, within sight of each other, turnouts made two way traffic possible.

In wet or frosty weather slippery planks called for watchful driving, a vehicle off the road could soon be swallowed in the muck and a wheel through the open centre could be more than a misfortune.

Yet in spite of these hazards this 14-mile plankway may well hold a record: for its 30-year history is unmarred by death or injury.

The completion of the road was a boon to social life on Graham Island; visiting between settlements was popular and the smooth, straight, nearly level track soon became a bicycle path, enjoyed by youth, especially for Sunday adventure. The spruceway served Graham Island well for 30 years until modern equipment, after the last war, made the construction of a gravel road across the swamps feasible.

It seems a pity that a short section of this pioneer track was not preserved before greedy forest overwhelmed its rotting planks. It would have been not only an historic monument but an example, perhaps not understood by a younger generation, of the spirit which prompted early settlers to roll up their sleeves and go to work rather than cry for help from a near-welfare state.

After my return from the Charlottes last summer, where I learned something of the old road, I asked a friend, who had been in government service, what he knew about the old plank way.

"Quite a lot," he replied. "I was stationed there after the war; I drove a car over it many times. In the late 40s the road was in poor shape. Many planks were loose. On one of my last trips a plank upended to catch the drain plug in my oil pan and before I realized what had happened my crank-case was dry.

"While I was considering whether T'lell or Port Clements was the nearer a pick-up pulled up behind.

" 'What's the matter?' the driver asked.

"I told him!

" 'This is your lucky day!' my new acquaintance remarked. 'I have three drums of crank case oil in my truck!'

"A wooden plug wrapped with a rag made a temporary repair, and with my crankcase filled and the pick-up following I felt quite secure.

"It would have been a long walk either way, had I been forced to hike, and a wet one too. You know how it can rain in the Charlottes!"

FAMOUS CANADIAN ARMY BADGES—No. 22

Royal Canadian Postal Corps

With the recent designation of "Royal" the RCPC hat badge is the newest in the services.

The post horn, still employed in parts of Europe to summon townspeople to get their mail is the featured device of the RCPC badge, while the motto "Servire Armatis" — Serving the Armed Forces — exemplifies the Corps' mission, a tri-service function.

YOUNG ARTIST WITH A MESSAGE

His Art May Embellish The Corridors of Time

By DORIS FARMER TONKIN

A prophet, you remember, often does not have much attention paid him in his own bailiwick, though he may receive honors elsewhere. The same may apply to an artist.

Take Kenneth Galloway of Campbell River. He is much better known in eastern Canada than on Vancouver Island. Yet he is one of our coming artists and we should be getting to know him. Even if you don't like abstract art, there is a strangely haunting quality to his work which is bound to arouse interest.

His pictures are popping up in quite a few collections and the way it all started sounds like an aspiring artist's daydream. But it couldn't have happened to a nicer person.

Though Ken was born at Salmon Arm in 1928, and Vancouver and Texas shared his growing up, his family now lives at Campbell River, where they operate the Driftwood Beach Motel and trailer Park. Ken helps out during the summer and takes time off during the winter to paint.

He likes to go to the city for this. During the autumn of 1962 he went to Toronto, planning on a six-month visit, to paint, have a look-see at what other artists were doing, and attend some concerts. At that time he had not sold any of his paintings. "I didn't think they were ready," he says.

One Saturday morning he walked past the well-known Dorothy Cameron Gallery, and on impulse decided to go in, mostly to look around. He met a lady coming out whom he recognized as Miss Cameron, and plucking up his courage, spoke to her. She admitted her identity.

Over a cup of coffee in a nearby restaurant they chatted, and Miss Cameron consented to look at his pictures. She selected four, and on Monday, Mrs. O. D. Vaughn, a well-known collector, bought one.

That tide in the affairs of men, of which Shakespeare writes, must have been running full, for on the strength of this primary success, Miss Cameron arranged a one-man show for Ken in January 1963. Seven paintings sold, which Ken feels was good going. Since then he's had two more one-man shows, one at Courtenay arranged by his good friends, Jack and Lil Lefcoe, and another at the New Design Gallery in Vancouver. Both were moderately successful.

A sale of one of his works to the students of the Waterloo, Ontario, University in the spring of 1964 was particularly gratifying.

Of course his success wasn't quite as easy-come as it sounds. Ken served a long and arduous apprenticeship — if that is the proper word for self-teaching — before these events took place. Though there is no artistic heritage in the family, he always wanted to paint but didn't get started until about 12 years ago. At that time he was managing a sash and door factory in Vancouver. Friends were always saying:

"Why don't you take up painting, Ken. It's so relaxing."

So he did, but it wasn't.

"It's hell," he says simply. But it is his life now and he gives it all he has, for he believes in doing his best at whatsoever he sets his hand to.

He started with still-life portraits, anything handy, while searching for an individual means of expression. His only formal training was one summer at the Banff School of Fine Arts. Finally he hit his stride.

"If you do not go beyond what has been done before, you are more or less copying," he says.

Certainly he does not copy. Nowhere else will you find a similar use of texture and color — particularly color. He does not use strong pigments, but there is a clarity and a sort of transparency about them reminiscent of ice. He is a meticulous worker and pays great attention to the techniques he has developed. Whether or not the viewer understands them — I don't — his pictures are fascinating and beautiful. I concur with the reference to him as "a painter frankly involved in art for beauty's sake" in the brochure issued by the Dorothy Cameron Gallery.

That same descriptive leaflet refers to his work as "enigmatic" yet his subject is invariably Man, though the shadowy figures set in crystalline boxes of luminosity suggest spirit rather than flesh. Some, and at least one clergyman, see religious significance, but Ken denies this. In many of his pictures a pale disk of the sun or moon adds to the unearthly quality. There is also an atmosphere of contemplation which suggests an oriental influence.

And what of the man himself, the one who paints these dream-like fantasies, what is he? Well that is hard to say, for he is reserved, perhaps shy, and not too easy to get to know. Certainly he does not look the part of a far-out artist. He reminded me more of an old-world fisherman when I went to see him at the trailer camp. A tall, sturdy young man, he was wearing a heavy grey pullover jersey and work pants, and somehow suggested a beret though his head was bare. But he did impress me with his sincerity. He is evidently a deep thinker and has a message which he is trying to put across.

"Artists worry too much about symbolism and that stuff," he says. "The canvas dictates to you what is required. That is what I used to try to make my students understand."

Ken conducted an art class in Courtenay one winter, though he hastens to explain that one cannot teach but only encourage and explain.

He confessed that he did not have a studio and did not own an easel.

"Then how do you manage?" I asked curiously.

"Oh, I just knock a nail into the wall and hang up my canvas," he smiled and proceeded to demonstrate, on the wood-panelled walls of the living room. I forbore to ask how his mother reacted!

For all their styles are so different, Ken is a great admirer of Rembrandt. "His pictures are as valid now as they were when he painted them," he explains.

He is modest about his work. He would not have told me of any of his triumphs if I had not asked. He appeared pleased that I knew about the RCAF officer stationed at Greenwood, N.S., who took time out on a brief tour of duty to Comox to buy a Galloway painting. He'd heard about Ken's work in the East.

"I don't know if my paintings are any good," Ken told me humbly. "A really important painting should not merely be a reflection of the era in which it is produced; it must have a message which will be valid till the end of time."

I don't quite "dig" Ken's pictures, but I admire them greatly and would be only too happy to own one. The things of the spirit are eternal, and time may well prove that like the title of one of his paintings, Ken, too, is a man well able to decorate the corridors of time.

He's a Trapline Thief, with Courage and Daring

WOLVERINE:

I don't remember Baron Munchausen telling of hair-raising adventures with the glutton, the European wolverine, but if he missed out on that one he must be the only teller of tales who did. They are still at it, periodically. He is, I feel sure, the most lied-about animal in existence, not excepting even the wolf.

Seventy years ago, setting mink traps on the little trout creek that ran through our Wisconsin farm, I used to daydream of trapping in the Rocky Mountains. I read "trappers' guides" and learned (hah!) how to trap the fur-bearers, and all about the superhuman intelligence and absolute untrappability of the Wolverine!

I got the "image" of a kind of demoniacal super-wolf who roamed, screecking, through the wilds, killing and devouring everything he came to, mice to moose. Even grizzlies and wolf packs fled before him. Yet he was cunning enough to know that a man with a rifle must be avoided so, being smarter than a man, he devastated trap-lines and cabins, always in the trapper's absence; he being possessed of clairvoyance as well as unlimited physical strength. And so on.

The wolverine is indeed a remarkable animal. He needs not these absurd embellishments of his attributes to titillate the tall tales addicts. A grizzly would knock him into the middle of next week with one clout if he was impudent enough to get in the mountain king's way. A wolf pack would leave not so much as a grease spot of this largest member of the weasel family in nothing flat. He might make a standoff with one wolf. But with two or more? Phooey!

Sixty-odd years ago it was much farther to the Rocky Mountains than it is now, but I made it, in stages. While the years passed I crossed and re-crossed the big hills in various places. I even trapped a little in 'em, desultorily. But it was not until 1928, 35 years after I first read of him that I saw my first wolverine track.

Marten were a good price, averaging about $35, our pole camp was closed for the winter—the Blue River area has a pretty heavy snowfall—

The old trapper himself

I had nothing else to do, so I gave trapping a whirl. I had no cabins on the line at that time; I camped by a fire at night, carrying my food and a blanket or two, setting traps wherever I found marten tracks and moving on when I had caught the marten in a locality.

This of course was in mountain country, ranging from 4,000 to 6,000 feet above sea level. The farthest point reached was perhaps 20 miles from our pole camp on the North Thompson river. I would be gone three to five days on a trip, returning home to rest and sleep two or three days between these excursions. I wouldn't call them picnics, exactly; one five-day trip the mercury hovered between 40 and 50 below every night, they told me when I got back. I was moderately successful, catching 23 marten in two months. I got about $300 for them which represented a lot more purchasing power than the same number of dollars today.

I always camped in the same place the first night out, a "pass" on top of the first ridge west of the Thompson valley. Here, one January day, coming from home with my little pack of home-made bread, chunk of butter, three or four pounds of bacon and little bags of tea, coffee and sugar, and maybe a chunk of the good wife's cake, I first saw the footprints of that ferocious, fearsome phantom whose "image," though considerably modified, still remained in my consciousness from boyhood days.

This image—that an expression!—was to be shattered and reassembled several times in the next few years.

The wolverine struck my snowshoe trail a quarter mile from my camp and followed it to within sight of it when he turned off and circled the campsite at a distance, pausing often, as the tracks in the snow showed, to look things over. I had an axe and cross-cut saw at this permanent camp and I always left my blankets and my few cooking cans and frying pan there. The wolverine never came closer than 50 yards of the camp. I had a line running north along the ridge for several miles. He didn't follow it but struck off west, leaving my line—as I thought and hoped.

by O. E. FRENCH

Next day I went over the north line and got three marten, all frozen stiff. The following day I planned to go on the south line and extend it by a dozen traps, figuring to be gone three days. I had enough to pack, what with traps, bait and grub, axe, blankets, and so on, without carrying those marten with me. I was afraid to leave them at the campsite. Even though the wolverine hadn't entered the camp I feared he would.

So I dug a hole three feet deep in my snowshoe trail half a mile south of the camp and buried the marten, smoothing everything off and tramping it down to look the same as the rest of the trail. When I came back they were just as I had left them. But they would have been safer hung in a tree. All that saved me a hundred dollars worth of marten was that the wolverine didn't happen to come along. He would have found those marten. I was to learn that it is practically impossible to conceal anything from a wolverine, even a trap, let alone such a banquet as an armful of marten.

On my next trip I saw that the wolverine had followed my line from end to end. But there was one thing that puzzled me; not only did he not take anything from my traps, whenever he got within a hundred yards or so of a "set" he left the trail, made a half-circle round the trap at a respectful distance, came back into the snowshoe trail again, repeating this manoeuvre at each trap. Why did he do this and how did he always know where a trap set was? He often left the line before the set was in sight.

As it happened I did not trap again until 1932 when the well-known persuader, Grim Necessity, nudged me, as he did many others during the '30s, into any kind of activity that would bring in even a modicum of "bacon" — no chance of ham and eggs. I then found the answer to the wolverine's behavior, and it was, like most solutions, "simple when you know how" — or why.

This wolverine had been caught in a trap at some time and he simply would not go near a set of any kind. Not all of the clan, only an occasional one, reacts to a toe-pinching in this way. He knew where a set was because he smelled it. I was using strong scent to attract marten, and smell is the wolverine's long suit. I believe that is why it is so hard to hide anything from him.

However I was never able to figure the why of all this particular animal's actions. He did come to one trap. And there was a marten in it and he didn't touch it.

I had made a "limb set"; cut off a spruce limb about three feet from the tree-trunk, trimmed off the twigs, tied a bait to the end of the limb, fastened a trap to the limb just in front of the bait — a squirrel or bird or just a piece of caribou hide, well scented. The trap chain was wired securely to the limb, the trap tied lightly so it would come loose and the marten would fall off the limb, trap and all.

This is what had happened and the wolverine, following his custom, had left the line before reaching the set. But this time he came in from the side-line, directly under the suspended, frozen marten. The snow was packed down solid as though he had stayed there for some time but he didn't touch the marten although he could have reached it easily. He couldn't have been afraid of a trap or he wouldn't have squatted under the marten. I've had other wolverines take both frozen and very much alive martens from my traps since then. This one must have been an individualist. At the time I thought it was all hooey about wolverines robbing traps and dismissed the idea as just another trapper's guide fiction and worried no more (for a while) about wolverine tracks on the trapline.

His Strength is Enough to Snap Steel Chains

But on my last trip, at the farthest extension of the line, a wolverine, not the same one, took three marten from my traps. He had a hard-beaten trail, evidently patrolled it every day, along my last extension and he took not only the marten but a couple of weasels and all the baits. If he had been as smart as the Munchausens make out he'd have left the baits, huh? Even the most audacious liars haven't claimed, or not to my knowledge, that the wolverine re-set and re-baited the traps. Probably didn't think of it.

When, in the early thirties, I had to keep us in groceries I also found I had to trap the wolverine. So I did. To do this I had to study him as well as get all the pode on him I could from more experienced trappers. Any furbearer is trapped by taking into account his habits and characteristics. Some, like the lynx or the marten, simply go for the bait, disregarding the trap entirely — until it grabs them. They will even come back and be caught a second time after getting out of a trap, even if they've left a toe behind.

Not so the wolverine. If he has had no acquaintance with traps he will step into one — once, not twice. And, since it's next to impossible to fool a wolverine by hiding the trap, don't try to deceive him that way. Set the trap in plain sight.

The wolverine is remarkable in several ways and not the least of these is his trait of persistence; he never gives up. He will work interminably to get something apparently of as little value to a meat-eating animal as a caribou's foot or a goat's head. These, or similar, make good baits because they can't be pulled to pieces easily and can be wired solidly. But he'll keep trying. He can break a single strand of haywire in a straight pull so at least two strands must be used, or a heavier wire.

If the trap is strong enough to hold him, if he is caught solidly enough, if the trap chain is wired solidly enough to the "clog" — a segment of sapling four-five feet long and at least six inches in diameter — with all these ifs provided for there may be a wolverine waiting in the trap some morning but nothing's certain about the capturing of this four-legged Sampson.

Perhaps a description of the "tripod set" will show how the wolverine's trait of persistence can contribute to his downfall — literally as well as figuratively.

Three poles about three inches in diameter at the butt and, say, eight feet long are set up like teepee-tent poles to form a tripod, securely wired together at the apex. From the apex the bait is suspended, wired solidly to the peak of the tripod. It must also be wired downward to each of the three poles so it is practically immovable, otherwise our wolverine may, and sometimes does, simply climb up and sit on the apex, haul up the bait and chew it up at his leisure leaving the wire hooped round some cold, thin air. This is a smart beast, remember. All the trapper would have to look at would be two sets of tracks, one coming and the other going.

The wolverine has a furred foot and makes a track out of proportion to his size, about like a medium-sized lynx, also a furred big-foot.

So we have to use not only a strong trap but one with a wide spread of jaws to admit that big foot. The No. 14 jump trap meets these requirements and in this set is placed directly underneath the bait, uncovered and in plain sight, solidly wired to a clog of course.

On his first visit to the set the wolverine, especially if he has been nipped before, may just look things over and go away but eventually he will climb a pole, grab the bait and pull — and pulls himself away from the small, smooth pole and hangs in the air above the trap. He has to let go and fall some time and he probably tries to avoid the trap. But he will return again and again to pull and fall until his final "down-fall." There are many variations of this set but the principle is the same in all — wolverine persistence.

Most of the scary-told yarns about the wolverine relate either to his trapline robberies or to his super cunning in avoiding traps or his incredible strength and toughness in freeing himself if caught. As nearly as I can remember the two boys and I caught about 30 and since we turned the line over to Betty she has caught — we just checked — seven. So we have proved that these subjects of the nature-faker liar's contests are not quite uncatchable. If they were whence come the several hundred (at least) skins offered at the Vancouver fur sales every year?

We also proved to our satisfaction that truth is stranger than fiction — Munchausen-type fiction at least.

How, for instance, can a wolverine dent a steel trap with his teeth? His teeth are certainly softer than the steel trap. But I have seen small, round indentations on a steel trap spring where the wolverine gripped it in his rock-crusher jaws. Once a big wolverine, caught in a No. 14 jump, bit off the trap pan or trigger. That's "telling it scary." What he really did was grip the trigger in his teeth and twist it off. Most "scary" stuff can be rationally explained but I still don't see how he could dent steel. He just did, period.

One of the main difficulties in trapping wolverines in the North Thompson area is the heavy snowfall. It snows and freezes and thaws and rains and snows again and the traps are clogged or sprung or frozen so it is necessary to make the set under the protection of the branches of a big, densely-limbed spruce or balsam-fir to have much chance of success.

One winter a big wolverine took a notion to patrol about a mile of my line, coming in at one point and leaving at another always at about the same places. He hadn't bothered my marten sets but no telling when he would or extend his operations to the rest of the line, so I made a set for him.

There wasn't a suitable tree right on the blazed trapline anywhere in the wolverine's mile. About the middle of his beat, at a bend in the creek, there was a family of beavers, now under the ice, and I figured that was the reason for the wolverine's interest; he hoped to catch one out to get some fresh willows. Beaver-eater is one of the wolverine's nicknames.

Knowing that he would follow my snowshoe tracks I followed up a little creek that came in at the beaver-bend, looking for a good shade-tree — in zero weather.

There were lots of trees but no good snow shedders and I went a couple hundred yards from the trapline before I found one. Here I made my set, using a goat head that I had been saving for this purpose since last fall's goat hunt.

During the next three weeks I made several rounds of the trapline and didn't see a wolverine track. It had snowed three or four feet in that time so I thought I'd better have a look at my set. Big lump of snow might fall off a limb and spring the trap.

The trap was sprung — but not by snow. The set had worked perfectly and I had caught the wolverine. Instead of finding the set by following my tracks as I had supposed he would he had come directly to the trap from the mountainside exactly as though he had been sitting there watching me make the set. Of course he must have smelled it; with a favorable breeze he probably could smell that mixture of fish-oil and beaver castor that I used half a mile away.

Well, this was one time that I only saw one set of tracks — those going away; it had snowed too much since he had come and got in the trap for me to see more.

It was the condition of that sprung trap and its surroundings that caused me considerable cogitation at the time and makes the incident stick to my memory like a burr to a collie dog's coat.

I had used a good heavy clog and it had evidently frozen down so the wolverine had been unable to move it. Now there was an icy mound built up about four feet high and at its summit, directly under the apex of the tripod, my trap sat rigid at the end of its chain, hard, smooth ice enclosing even the swivel. And there wasn't a toe, a drop of blood or so much as a hair in the trap. And the pile of ice-snow was high enough for the wolverine to reach the goat-head. He not only reached it, he ate it. There wasn't a piece of bone larger than my thumbnail left and only a handful of these well-chewed bone-flakes. Woolly hide, jaw-bones, even the teeth — he ate the works.

Now here was the makings of a woeful tale of wonder. It looked as though the wolverine had built up the mound until he could reach the bait, ate it and walked away, leaving the frozen-in, sprung trap to show his contempt for trappers and their tricks, a true ghost of the trapline.

This was the way it looked — if you were looking for a chance to tell it scary. Actually the wolverine had been unable to move the clog and had worked round in a circle with the length of the trap and chain for a radius. As he worked 'round and 'round he pulled snow to the centre, packing it to ice of course by his trampling, the circle getting smaller all the time until finally the trap was solid and immovable. About this time he discovered that he could reach the bait and, having worked up an appetite, had his dinner.

Now this was a single-spring jump trap and while the trap swivel at the end of the chain was free it was practically impossible for the wolverine to force the spring down, the trap would turn over, one way or the other. Even a man trying to set or release this strong-springed trap would have to put one foot on the spring and the other on the trap-bottom-plate extension where the chain was attached to hold it steady while the spring was pressed down.

With the trap held rigid by the ice the wolverine, purely by accident, put one foot on the jutting spring and pushed, at the same time pulling with the trapped foot and released himself as neatlyy as a SPCA man could have done.

The SPCA reference reminds me: I mentioned that there was no blood on the trap. The wolverine's foot, that is the toes and sole, are nearly as fleshless and bloodless as makes no never minds; just gristle, tendons and claws. There is some flesh and some blood but this animal is a tough baby and built tough, from the feet up. And that's no Baron M stuff, either.

An Old Soldier Tells of Exciting Adventure

HIMALAYAN BEAR HUNT

The District of Terai in the eastern Himalayan foothills is not exactly a health resort, but living there had its compensations, especially if one was a keen hunter.

COL. A. HAMILTON GRANT, now retired in Victoria, on the heels of O. E. French's stirring story of grizzly hunting (Islander, Jan. 24), tells a tale of a bear hunt in an entirely different setting.

A graduate in engineering and science, he was commissioned in the Indian Army with the Gurkha Rifles, served in the Indian Political Service on the northeast frontier, Nepal, Sikkim, Bhutan and the Tibet border country.

He transferred to the British Army with the outbreak of war in 1914, and went to France with the Third Division, B.E.F.

Col. Grant returned to India in 1919 as a staff officer of the Lahore Division, on the northwest frontier.

In 1927 he was retired to the Regular Army Reserve and came to Canada, and with the hostilities of 1939 he served with the Canadian Army, retiring in 1955.

This strip of swampy tropical forest, which links the plains with the mountains, is the home of wild elephant, tiger, leopard, wild boar and deer and a variety of wild fowl which includes duck, teal, snipe and peacocks. The trees are of unusual height and remarkably straight, entangled in twisting creepers that spiral round the trunks and hang down to the ground. Orchids are found here in great variety.

Being a fairly good shot I became an enthusiastic hunter, and after many exciting forays into the jungle and long nights squatting atop machans hastily erected over kills, I had been able to account for a tiger and two leopards. However, from what my shikari had told me I was convinced that nothing could be more exciting than a black bear hunt. But the habitat of the black bear being on the lower ranges of the Himalayas up to 8,000 feet and even higher, this was something I could only look forward to just then.

As it transpired, I did not have long to wait for this opportunity because late that September, towards the end of the monsoon rains, I was unexpectedly transferred to Darjeeling, the beautiful hill station set amidst the luxuriant forests of rhododendron, oak and magnolia, 7,000 feet up, and right in the heart of black bear country.

As luck would have it, too, Myla, my Nepalese bearer, had a brother, a bear hunter of some renown, who lived in a small village in Sikkim, about three days' journey from Darjeeling. His main occupation was that of sirdar and provider of porters engaged in the transportation of Indian and Tibetan merchandise over the passes between India and Tibet, and on that account he was never certain to remain at home for any length of time. However, as soon as we arrived at Darjeeling and on the off chance that he might be at home, Myla sent a message to Bhutia Busti to inform his brother Jetta that he had arrived in Darjeeling with me, and that I was anxious, with his help if possible, to bag a Himalayan bear at some later date when he could spare the time. Several weeks passed without any word, then early one morning the messenger returned with the good news that not only was Jetta at home, but if I wanted to bag a bear the time was right now.

First of all, it was necessary to obtain permits from the District Commissioner to travel in Sikkim and to occupy the dak bungalows at Tanglu and Sandakphu, which would be our overnight stopping places on the three-day journey to Bhutia Busti. Two good hill ponies had to be hired, one for me to ride uphill — no good hillman rides his pony downhill — the other to pack my tent, bedroll and provisions. Myla preferred to travel on foot as he knew all the "choribatos" or shortcuts which made the distance to our destination much shorter for him than the pony tracks I would take zigzagging up and down over the ridges from one valley to the next.

Journey Starts

Before daybreak on the morning of our departure we were on our way. Myla and the pack pony led by a syce departed ahead of me to make the three-mile and 600 feet climb to Ghoom before I met up with them. Around noon we arrived at Jorepokri Bazaar 13 miles from Darjeeling, where we had tiffin and rested the ponies before tackling the ten-mile and 3,000 feet climb to Tanglu.

Evening mists were rising from the valleys by the time we reached the dak bungalow, and by the time I had finished dinner and was ready to turn in, the moon had risen. As I stepped out on the verandah to look at the night, all thought of sleep quickly vanished. My feelings were of wonder and awe at the scene I beheld.

Beyond the blanket of mist which covered the deep valleys of Sikkim, and framed by the rhododendron trees which surrounded the bungalow, the great snow-clad 28,000 feet peaks of Kanchenjunga rose silhouetted against a cloudless sky, dwarfing the snowy ranges to east and west. Confronted with such grandeur, I stood for a long time gazing as in a dream — till the silence, intensified by the monotonous hum of insects, reminded me it was time that I, like the birds and the beasts, was in bed.

Next day, zigzagging downhill and uphill, we covered the 14 miles to the dak bungalow at Sandakphu, where Myla, who had arrived ahead of me, had a hot bath and dinner ready.

The third day was a tiring trek, mostly on foot, down short steep zigzags, across swollen streams and up steep ridges. It was late in the evening when we finally descended into a hot, steamy valley from which mist was already rising and camped on the outskirts of Bhutia Busti and my rendezvous with Jetta.

Tired after my dinner I turned in as Myla left to spend the night with his relatives in the village, promising to bring his brother to meet me in the morning when we could talk over plans for the bear hunt.

Message in the Night

I had been sleeping soundly and it was still dark when I was suddenly startled out of my slumbers by Myla who was standing over me swinging a lantern in his hand and urging me to get up quickly. I somehow gathered, from what he was excitedly telling me, that somewhere on the outskirts of the village "the biggest black bear that had ever been seen," was at this very moment gorging himself in brother Jetta's corn field.

Fully awakened by this exciting news, I jumped out of bed and hurriedly dressed. By the time I had checked my weapons, a double-barrel 12-bore gun and a Colt .45, and made sure that my ammunition pouch contained a supply of lethal-ball and shot cartridges, my pony had been saddled.

News of the bear, I later learned, had been brought by Jetta's ten-year-old son, who spent most nights when the corn was ripening atop an elevated bamboo platform erected in a clearing between the forest and his father's corn field. His job was to frighten off marauding bears by violently shaking a rattan rope strung between the legs of the platform on which were hung numerous tin cans and wooden cow bells. When his father was home however his job was to listen, then slip quietly from his perch to alert his father if he should hear or see a bear prowling near the corn field.

The village was already astir, as I rode through, in anticipation of the kill and a feast of meat and some of the much-prized bear fat. At the far end of the village a man appeared from the shadow of his hut, and on seeing him the syce extinguished the lantern he was carrying and beckoned me to dismount and follow this guide. Myla handed me my gun.

Bright Morning

In the dewy freshness of the early morning I felt ready for anything. The sun rising through the eastern vapours was warming the scene into life. The dark blue outline of the mountains around was becoming more distinct, and with their increasing brightness the distant snows seemed to come nearer and nearer.

Tingling with excitement, not knowing what to expect on this my first bear hunt, I followed close behind my guide. He stopped at the edge of a corn patch, and among the corn stalks I could see a man standing motionless, apparently listening or watching something in the corn field. Pointing in this man's direction my guide indicated that this was Jetta, then he quickly salaamed and left me.

As I approached, I could see that Jetta was in stature typical of the strong-limbed, wiry type of hillman in our Gurkha regiments. He wore neither coat nor trousers, only a long piece of cloth wrapped around his middle forming a sort of loin cloth, in which he carried, like all Nepalese, a kukri, the curved knife which they are never without. In his hand he carried a spear-headed staff.

"Salaam sahib," he whispered and touched his hand to his forehead in salutation.

He glanced quickly at my gun and then at me and I guessed what he meant. My gun was still unloaded. Nervously I loaded a lethal-ball cartridge in one barrel and shot in the other and felt for my Colt strapped to my waist. He nodded in approval and made his way to the centre of the patch, pushing the high stalks aside to make a path. I followed.

Forgetting the probable inadequacy of my own weapons, I had to admit a feeling of genuine respect for this barefoot hunter with his primitive gear, prepared to pit his strength and cunning against that of a savage bear.

Track of the Bear

In the middle of the path he stopped and pointed to an area of corn stalks that had been levelled to the ground, and from the pile of chewed cobs scattered around it was evident that a hearty meal of ripe corn had just been enjoyed by the bear we were after. With his hand he made the sign of a very much swollen tummy, indicating the condition of the bear as the result of eating so much ripe corn. On the soft earth he circled a depression where the bear had sat, and from this I could judge him to be a big fellow.

Carefully examining the ground Jetta soon found the bear's trail out of the patch, across the clearing and into the forest. From the direction of the trail after entering the forest, it was evident that our quarry had not gone straight up, but had taken an inclined route across the slope.

Once Jetta had found the trail he never lost it and we continued to zig-zag back and forth across the slope till, at the middle of what I reckoned was the fourth traverse, Jetta turned abruptly and commenced to climb straight up. The going was now much harder but my shikari was obviously in no particular hurry as he took time to slash a path through the undergrowth with his kukri, making what to me seemed a lot of noise under the circumstances. I followed close behind.

We had been climbing steadily but quite leisurely for some time, and I was beginning to wonder how much further we would have to go, when Jetta suddenly stopped, put his finger to his mouth as a sign to be still, and listened intently as if expecting something to happen. Instinctively I released the safety catch on my gun, and just then I distinctly heard an ominous sound as of something moving in the undergrowth above us.

One Quick Shot

Then it happened. There was a crash directly above as if some heavy object dropped from the sky had smashed through the trees and landed with a thud when it hit the ground. Then another crash, nearer this time but still above us, and almost immediately a huge black mass hit the trunk of the tree we were standing behind. As it bounced past in front of me I raised my gun and fired point-black at it. Whatever it was I had hit it, because the object hit the ground below me, bounced and landed in the thick undergrowth, and was still.

While Jetta bounded in after it, hacking furiously at the undergrowth with his kukri, I reloaded and was preparing to follow when he stood up waving his kukri and shouting, "Sahib! Sahib, balu mara guya" (You have killed the bear). The lethal-ball had gone clean through the neck we discovered, killing the bear instantly. Jetta guessed his weight at around five maunds — between 400 and 500 pounds, and while we waited for the villagers to arrive in answer to his hallloos, he explained his stratagem when hunting black bear.

As I listened, I became very much aware of the truth of that old proverb about ignorance being bliss under certain circumstances.

From the angle and length of the first traverses we had followed it was possible, he explained, to gauge the general direction in which the bear was heading, and by slowly climbing straight up when we did, we were able to get nearer to our quarry each time he zig-zagged across the slope immediately above us. In desperation to escape upwards as quickly as possible the bear is forced to take shorter and steeper zig-zags, and by carefully timing our advance and keeping up a steady pressure from below, the bear, now thoroughly exhausted, is compelled to make his final desperate attempt to escape. This, Jetta emphasised, was the crucial moment, when either the hunter gets the bear or the bear gets the hunter.

This moment is decided by the bear when he has reached a point immediately above his pursuers. Here he rises on his hind legs, tucks his head in his hind quarters and plunges forward down the slope, crashing through the undergrowth with the same effect as a huge boulder loosened from the hillside. In this almost suicidal dive he tries not only to escape but to crush his pursuers on the way, which he often does.

KANCHENJUNGA . . . there are bear on the foothills.

Our interesting conversation was cut short just then as men from the village began to arrive, panting from the race uphill to be first to reach the kill, because the first arrivals had the honour of carrying the carcase to the village, and as a reward received the largest share of the meat and fat.

Under Jetta's direction they tied the bear's front and hind paws together, and prepared stout poles from young saplings to sling him on and carry him down.

As I watched these sturdy hillmen struggling with their load, I was thinking what might have happened had it not been for the stout tree trunk behind which we had stood, and remembered what my old shikari had told me about the excitement of a Himalayan bear hunt.

He is not only thick-skulled, the bone is tough, incredibly hard to fracture. His skin is thick and tough and it is impossible to peel it off in skinning as is easily done with his weasel relatives, marten, mink, etc. Every last smidgen of hide must be cut off — and you want a sharp knife and keep the whetstone handy. Wolverine meat — all muscle — is tough! This self-liberated wolverine probably had some sore toes for a while but I'll bet the trapline he didn't lose any.

I have caught wolverines several times in small traps set for other animals but I am sure this was the first time — and would be the last — that the wolverine would step into a trap knowingly. He roughs up the scenery when he gets his toe pinched and once out he stays out — unless out-witted psychologically. He really traps himself.

John once made one of our tripod sets under a big spruce and a wolverine stepped into the trap the first night without any preliminary pole-climbing. There had been a light skiff of snow in the evening and John could see just what happened.

The wolverine, a large male as it turned out, came directly to the set and stepped into the unconcealed trap.

He did not struggle or try to pull out of the trap, the whole story was written in the light snow covering, like scratching a picture on a frost-covered window pane.

John had fastened the trap to the clog with three strands of haywire, passing the wire through the ring at the end of the trap chain and around the clog, then giving it two or three twists, another round and more twists, a final third round and a tight twist before cutting off the wire from the remainder of the coil with a file carried for this purpose. This was to make sure that if the wolverine did happen to seize one strand and break it there would still be two other strands intact. The chances that he would break away all three were so remote that we had never considered them. We considered 'em after this finagle. We began using 10 guage "car wire" which is three times as strong as haywire.

For this wolverine plucked each strand of haywire in his teeth, snapped them like threads, apparently, and walked away with the trap on a front foot. He must have just happened to start biting on the wire — or he had human intelligence. I believe the former, having once held the 29 hand in crib. You either have to be set in your ways or superstitious.

The wolverine hadn't been gone long and John took after him but he would have made his getaway if he hadn't had bad luck.

PINK STRA

Will the real St. Valentine please stand up? There are eight saints who bear that illustrious name, and there's considerable debate among the people who debate such things as to which one, if any, was responsible for the romantic goings-on associated with St. Valentine's Day.

Romanticists say that St. Valentine was a young priest living in Rome 'way back in the third century. The Emperor Claudius had forbidden marriages because many of the male population resisted leaving home and fireside to enlist in Claudius' army. St. Valentine was imprisoned for performing secret marriages for young lovers. The story has it that he died in prison on February 14, a martyr to love.

But serious historians, a professionally unsentimental lot, state that Valentine's Day derives from a pagan Roman festival celebrated in February, honoring the golden-haired goddess Juno, the guardian of women, and sister and wife of Jupiter.

You may take your choice between these two and six other lesser St. Valentines. Whatever the origin, St. Valentine has been the inspiration for expressions on devotions between lovers for centuries. Sentiment is a fine thing and this old world could do with more of it.

The person who loves to cook is always on the alert for an excuse to put color into the meals. St. Valentine inspires meals with a red motif.

Let's start with a tomato aspic which could spark up any lunch or dinner table or made in individual heart-shaped molds could garnish a party spread.

HEART-SHAPED TOMATO ASPIC . . . 2 envelopes unflavored gelatine, 3½ cups tomato juice divided, ¼ tsp. Tabasco, ½ tsp. salt, 1 tsp. sugar, 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce, ¼ cup lemon juice, and a dash MSG. Sprinkle gelatine on 1 cup of the tomato juice in saucepan to soften. Place over low heat, stirring constantly, until gelatine is dissolved. Remove from heat, add remaining 2½ cups tomato juice and balance of ingredients. Stir well to mix. Pour into eight ½-cup individual heart molds (or one large mold) and chill until firm. These can be unmolded on crisp greens or can be served in this way . . .

Cut 8 bread slices to heart shapes the same size as the molds. Finely chopped 8 stuffed olives and blend these with a 3-ounce package of cream cheese. Spread each bread heart with the cheese-olive mixture. Unmold aspic on cream cheese-topped bread. Top with mayonnaise using ¼ tsp. of Tabasco to each ½ cup of mayonnaise used. Yield 8 servings.

At one time, young romantics ran around churchyards at midnight, scattering hemp seed over their shoulders and reciting strange incantations, in the hope that their true love would appear when they had completed 12 circuits of the yard. Nowadays, commemoration of this day is confined to cards, flowers, candy and perhaps a party, or at least to a special dish at meal-time to honor the occasion.

Baked Alaska is always a spectacular dessert and really quite simple to make. You can use a baker's 8-inch round plain cake or make your own.

MURIEL WILSON'S
Thought for Food

With a sharp knife trim it round the edges to give a heart shape. Place on a foil-covered cutting board and spoon a pint of cherry or strawberry ice cream over the top. Frost with a stiff meringue made of three egg whites and ½ cup sugar. Just be sure the ice cream and cake are completely covered with meringue. Have the oven pre-heated to 450° before putting the cake in. Bake three to five minutes or until the meringue is lightly browned. Serve immediately.

And here is another jiffy dessert, delicious Strawberry-Pineapple Squares . . . a dessert that can be made up well ahead of time. A useful recipe to have in your file.

STRAWBERRY-PINEAPPLE SQUARES . . . Combine 2 cups finely crushed graham cracker crumbs, 1 tsp. cinnamon and ¼ cup melted butter. Press half this mixture into the bottom of an eight-inch square cake pan. Beat 1 pint strawberry ice cream with an electric beater or rotary beater until smooth. Quickly mix in a 20-ounce tin of well drained crushed pineapple. Pour this over the crumb crust. Sprinkle with remaining crumbs and press down lightly. Freeze until firm. Cut into squares to serve. If you use this for a Valentine party . . . sprinkle with cinnamon candy hearts.

Perhaps you still have some peppermint candy canes in the house left over from Christmas or you can use crushed after-dinner mints for this next recipe.

PEPPERMINT PARTY PIE . . . for the crust mix together 1 cup fine chocolate wafer crumbs and ¼ cup melted butter. Press into a 9-inch pie plate. Chill the crust while preparing the filling. Sprinkle 1 envelope unflavored gelatine in ¼ cup cold water. Let stand five minutes to soften. Meanwhile scald 1 large tin evaporated milk in a saucepan, add the gelatine and stir until dissolved. Refrigerate until softly set then beat with an electric or rotary beater until foamy. Fold in ½-cup crushed peppermint candy and tint delicately with a few drops of red vegetable coloring. Pour into the crust and sprinkle with more crushed candy. Chill until set. If you are short of time just skip making the crust and layer the peppermint mixture with the chocolate crumbs in pretty parfait or sherbet glasses. Chill well.

Parfait pies are old hat but they are good and they can be made in minutes. I'll give you the method first . . . make your pie shell, use a mix or

DEAR HELOISE:

I wash my wooden salad bowls quickly in detergent suds, rinse them well and let them dry thoroughly.

After they are completely dry I cover the entire surface of the bowls with a heavy coat of olive oil and let them sit overnight.

The next day I take a soft cloth and wipe off any excess oil. This brings back the beautiful deep color of the bowls.

The heavy oil soaks into the wood, filling up the pores, so that the next time I use the bowls the vinegar does not penetrate into the wood.

It's true. I found it better to warm the olive oil slightly before rubbing it on the bowls. The thinner it is, the deeper it soaks into the grain of the wood.

THE COOK'S PALETTE . . .

Color in food is important. It has been said that we eat with our eyes. . . . Food must first appeal to the eye before pleasing the palate.

There is little point in slaving over a hot stove if the end result is drab and colorless.

A last-minute touch of paprika changes many a dish from drab into the interesting category. A few shreds of pimiento lifts a dish right out of the commonplace. Well-browned gravy is so much more appetizing than a pale, color' ss liquid. Many housewives would never use margarine until it was colored yellow. So when planning menus, do give some thought to color.

Garnishes are helpful . . . pimiento, strips of beet, cherries, cranberries, red jellies, radishes, tomatoes, unpeeled red apple wedges, ripe olives, stuffed green olives, pickle fans, parsley, chives and green pepper strips are only a few.

After washing my little girl's hair ribbons, I wrap them around a glass jar while they are still wet and smooth them gently.

Any round, smooth jar will do, regardless of size.

PLAYHOUSE POTABLES PROBLEM

The existence hereabouts of a Deep Thinking and Psychic Research Society may not, to date, have been very widely suspected.

This is not altogether surprising because, to the best of my knowledge, there is no such society. Nevertheless, something of this nature could be mighty useful and what, after all, is one more organization among the scores we already have?

Being of a psychic turn of mind, it could bring to bear on problems of the day far more objective and unbiased opinions than those of longtime Victoria residents who, having lived among the same trees for so long, have lost sight of the wood.

Take, for example, the knotty question of whether or no there should be a bar at the McPherson Playhouse. The opinions of those to whom it couldn't possibly make any difference are most valuable because they would — their authors being beyond the influence of consequences — be expressed candidly: no rationalizing, political or social inhibitions.

Thus:

"A meeting and seance was held last night by Victoria's active Deep Thinking and Psychic Research Society. The chairman was Professor S. Pectre and the medium for the evening was the celebrated Miss Astral Plane.

"As is by now well known, the DTPRS is not concerned merely with disturbing the rest of those departed on some purely quixotic pretext. They do not, as it were, dial frantically and without looking in the hope of raising someone at the other end of the line. To pursue this fascinating analogy, their calls to the spirit world are strictly person-to-person rather than vaguely station-to-station.

"Their interest in this spirit world itself is relatively small seeing that all the members of the society know full well that they will arrive there themselves one of these days and they can then find out all about it, first hand.

"Meanwhile there are present very mundane problems in urgent need of solution and it is specific advice on these that is sought.

"The question of whether or not there should be a bar at the McPherson Playhouse is uppermost in many minds today and views on this topic were, through Miss Plane, solicited with great eagerness.

"The results of these enquiries were varied.

"Said William Shakespeare (who didn't seem able to get his mind off Hamlet):

"To drink or not to drink: that is the question:
Whether 'tis wiser to instal a bar
With slings and rickeys, fizzes and libations,
Or to defer to loud petitioners
And so to silence them? To yield: submit
And thus so wrongly reason that we end
The opposition and the argument
Such matters bring: 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be forsworn. To yield alone
Conjures a flimsy dream of nascent peace!
For in appeasement what dread seeds are sown
To flourish in some future quandary
Must give us pause. Is it defined
Wine makes calamity of every life?
Could we not bear the sore embarrassments —
When comedy is sad or deadly dull,
When drama is drawn out unduly long,
When notes are blue and fiddles out of tune,
Lines are forgotten and the props misplaced
Or kindred ills beset an ill-starred stage —
Could we not better face each one of these
With heart restored by expeditious rite
To Bacchus in that blessed interval?
There is no thought nor newly found compulsion
To rob the abstemious of their temperance:
There is no cunning plot to activate
The flowing bowl in Thespian disguise,
But to provide all such amenities
As grace a thousand theatres otherwhere."
Nor ever yet have soiled a reputation."

"Mr. Shakespeare's contemporary, Ben Jonson, had other ideas. He had, he pointed out, already emphasized that ales, wines and liquors were not the only respite or solace in an unkind world. He recommended pleasant female companionship at the McPherson Playhouse to remove the necessity for a bar.

"Drink to me only with thine eyes
And I will pledge with mine,
Or leave a kiss but in the cup
And I'll not look for wine."

"And," added Ben, "I'm not alone in this opinion. After all, I swiped the whole idea from Philostratus!"

A third rather pertinent opinion came from Thomas Hood who was still busy recalling his childhood.

"I remember, I remember

The Hon. Mark Kearly Embarks . . .

ON PILGRIMAGE TO ROME

PART I

On October 20 the Victoria Art Gallery celebrated its 20th anniversary, and here, from Europe, by special invitation to take part in the proceedings, came the gentleman—and his wife—who founded the institution in the first place.

Everybody in Victoria who is connected with the gallery, and a great many who are not, will remember the efforts of the Honourable Mark Kearley to establish an art centre . . . efforts which have resulted in the Moss Street quarters of today, in which one of the showrooms is the Kearley Gallery.

Mr. and Mrs. Kearley, British-born and still Canadian citizens, live now in Switzerland, at a place called Chateau d'Oex (pronounced Day), in a chalet situated some 3,300 feet above sea level. Asked why Switzerland, he replied flatly that it was because they both liked it! Which seems reasonable enough.

They have intriguing tales of life in the mountains, but undoubtedly the most fascinating yarn this writer has heard for some time is Mr. Kearley's tale of pilgrimage to Rome — a unique adventure which involved six weeks and over 800 miles of walking, cycling, row-boating and riding in donkey carts! No motors, no trains . . . because he had made up his mind that he would accomplish the journey by muscular effort alone.

In a way, it all started as rather a lark, although he went, he says, for many reasons. He is not a Roman Catholic, but there is much in the faith that he respects. It was the "Holy Year" of 1950, a pilgrimage year, and Europe was still unsettled after the war, threatened with communism, and with no clearly defined road to a permanent peace . . . except, he felt, in the minds of people like Pope Pius XII. It must have been, therefore, an awareness of some spiritual oneness which moved him to join the ranks of those who marched that year to Rome, in brotherly love . . . a gesture which, after all, represents the antithesis of war and hate.

With a knapsack on his back and a pilgrim's staff in his hand, he set out from Chateau d'Oex on March 5, two days after his own 55th birthday. With a change of clothing in the knapsack he carried as well three books. Two had been given him, as to other pilgrims, by the local padre — a guide to Rome, and a book of songs, both written in several languages. The third book was from Mrs. Kearley, and was to be proof that his travels were genuine, because he would have it stamped at every stopping place. No fast through-runs by train, bus, or car! The padre had given him one other item — a pin for his lapel, made in the shape of an X intersected vertically by a sort of capital P. This is the "chi-rho", or Monogram of Christ, and identifies the pilgrims as such.

During the earlier days of his long journey Mark Kearley had with him his nephew, Colin Campbell, now a doctor and an oil geologist stationed at Bogota, Colombia, then an undergraduate on holidays from Oxford. And for the initial hour or two, just to see the pilgrims well on their way, Mrs. Kearley and their son went along. When these two had said good-bye and turned homeward, it seemed that the trek had really begun . . .

That first night out was spent at a little inn, but the end of the second day found the men at the storied Abbey of St. Maurice, where, during the war, a huge rock had crashed through the roof of the church and unearthed an ancient Roman altar. It seemed that about the year 200 A.D. a Theban Legion had gone that way and had built the altar to celebrate Caesar's birthday. But in their ranks were many Christians, St. Maurice being their chief, and when these refused to sacrifice to Caesar they were simply put to death and flung into the nearby Rhone River.

King Charlemagne too had passed this way, and, as a gesture of appreciation for hospitality received, had left with the monks some beautiful silver cups, treasured still. Our two 20th century pilgrims were shown the cups, and drank from them, and afterwards Mark Kearley bought, in London, a silver paten which he sent to the Abbey as a gift, and which sits today with the cups of Charlemagne.

The two enjoyed their brief stay with the white-robed monks, and the visit was not without its humorous side. They were warmly welcomed by the Prior and later by the Monsignor, were invited to join the monks for supper, and were given cells for the night. But, though they had looked forward to the meal in the refectory, rather expecting to be treated as guests of honor, it didn't turn out quite like that! As they all proceeded into the big dining-hall, remembers our pilgrim with an amused smile, somehow or other long files of the brethren managed to infiltrate the ranks in between, so that in the end the two laymen found themselves well below the salt! Moreover, the official bedtime was 9:30, and though the travellers explained that they preferred 11:30 as a reasonable hour at which to retire, and indicated that they would like to visit with one or two of the monks in order to learn more of the Abbey . . . not, of course, with any thought of the good wine and cigars they had found available . . . instead they were politely given a booklet each, "with the full history of our Order, my son." And the holy brethren faded from the cloisters, leaving their guests alone to read, mark, and inwardly digest! And go to bed!

by

Their route lay up the Rhone Valley. They saw the vineyards and tasted the wine, they picnicked in the early spring sunshine, and took short cuts along little wooded paths. They were headed through the Simplon Pass, altitude 7,000 feet, and this was still under snow, so for the climb they took the "post" — a sled drawn by four horses. At the top another monastery received them, whose Prior wrote in their books as had the other, wishing them joy and happiness on their way.

"It has always stayed with me," mused Mark Kearley, remembering, "their accent on joy. They meant it, when they wished us happiness!"

They went southward down the mountain on foot again, crossing snowfields, slept at Simplon village, and then were at the border between Switzerland and Italy. Here they stayed at an inn which had known Napoleon. The Emperor had drunk milk from a still treasured bowl, and our two pilgrims did the same.

Further on, in the town of Domo d'Ossola, the townsfolk made much of them because of the monogram pins, greeting them as "holy pilgrims", and seeing that they were fed. One woman at a restaurant, however, was frankly curious, and asked innumerable questions. Were they German? Austrian? Swedish? To all of which Mr. Kearley, with true British reserve, returned a monosyllabic negative . . . until finally he tired of the inquisition and informed her coldly, "Madam, I am Chinese. And this" indicating Colin, "is my wife, disguised as a boy!" Which buttoned that up.

At Omegna, on Lake Orta, they took a rowboat for the two-hour crossing to the town of Orta on the far side. Here all the hotels were still closed for the winter, and the only one which would take them in was a family-run affair, so that the men found themselves surrounded with much intensive Italian domesticity as evidenced by intimate argument, laundry everywhere, cookery, babies on pots, and so forth. And here Colin was obliged to leave and return to his studies, so that his uncle must proceed alone.

"And for a while this was no fun at all," said Mark Kearley. "Just the long straight Roman roads, with cars and trucks incessantly roaring past."

So at Novara he bought a bicycle. And though the saddle was practically an instrument of torture, having an edge to it like a knife, he covered the ground. After Genoa, the going was more interesting, with orange and lemon groves and the blue sea on his right.

Outside of Pisa the brutal passage of war was very marked, and he must navigate the trenches that still sliced the fought-for earth, and push his bicycle through rubble and wasteland. Here he had a brief, ships-in-the-night encounter with a young man who greeted him as a holy pilgrim and asked how he was getting on. The cyclist replied that all was well — except for the scars from the bicycle seat.

The youth nodded wisely. "Ah yes," he remarked. "You British are softer. I know. I fought with the British." To which equivocal statement our holy pilgrim very cautiously said nothing whatever.

THE BROTHERS LEFT A LEGACY OF GREEN

by LOIS LIGHT

Seventy years ago Peter and David Brown, identical twins, were given adjoining 40-acre homesteads on their 21st birthday.

Turning their backs, literally and figuratively on what they considered a rather disagreeable world, they moved onto their heritage, and stayed there the rest of their lives.

But for one thing, the eccentric behavior of these two anti-social gentlemen would probably go unremarked, and the strategically situated property, overlooking the Fraser Valley, in the fertile South Surrey district of southern British Columbia, would be a subdivision of small farms. But eccentric though the two boys may have been they were not without their own quality of greatness, for they had one abiding love — besides each other — and that was their evergreens.

This passion was puzzling to those who knew the boys, as it is to those who hear their story today. Perhaps the long, clean lines of the trees, the fresh, spicy smell of them, their whispering coolness provided refreshing contrast in the lives of these two untidy bachelors. Perhaps somewhere in their minds was the feeling that this was to be their legacy to their countrymen. But whether they had reasons or not, their life-long hobby has resulted in what botanical experts call "the finest collection of evergreens in Canada, probably one of the best in North America."

Peter and David had come to South Surrey with their family in 1878 when they were six years old. It was still eight years before Vancouver was born and the Browns were pioneers in the very real sense of the word. David Brown, Sr. had been across the continent twice by wagon train, had been to Panama, and was in the thick of the gold rushes in California and the Cariboo.

Mrs. Margaret Stewart, a surviving sister, who was only two when the family covered wagon arrived in British Columbia, says of her brothers, "They just didn't like the family very much, I guess."

Her bright eyes twinkle as she recalls without rancor, how the boys left home and family for good.

"We left them pretty much alone, because that's what they wanted. But sometimes we sisters just couldn't stand the mess we knew they were living in and we tried to clean it up for them. That made them mad!"

And the wrinkles with which time has marked her face deepen as she chuckles.

But the brothers would have done well to have listened to their sisters for so much junk, papers and even Pampas grass was stored in their houses that one after the other burned to the ground with everything in them — including some beautiful china plates collected by Dave, and the Family Bible, containing many of the senior Brown's important papers and much documentation of the district's early history. When the third house went up in smoke, the boys, in disgust, built their next dwelling in a tree. They lived in it until they became too old and doddering to climb up the steep steps into it. Then they abandoned it in favor of another shack. Both homes still are standing.

It was rumored, over the years, that the two men engaged in a bit of "moonshining" keeping a gun handy for trespassers, but about this Margaret Stewart is rightfully indignant. "They never drank a drop in their lives," she says. "There wasn't a bit of truth in that story. If anyone lived close to the border people just naturally thought they would try a little bootlegging, so many did. The boys just kept a gun for their own protection."

The first thing they did after they cleared the necessary land was to plant a pocketful of Redwood seedlings they had brought up with them from California, on one of their infrequent jaunts away from home. Now, nearly 70 years later, the stand of Redwoods in the park is one of the only, and certainly the most beautiful, stands of the trees north of the border.

REDWOOD GROVE, a place of wonder.

REMNANTS of a tree-house in which the eccentric brothers lived.

They planted an orchard and made a lily pond. They planted anything green and different they heard of or saw in catalogues. The orchard gave up, except for a beautiful growth of English walnuts which survived until a premature cold snap in 1955, but the twins didn't really care, for by now the evergreens were all they really wanted. They planted dozens of cedar, ponderosa pine, fir, tamarack, Japanese bamboo, and importations from all over the continent. They were seedy and untidy, but they could reel off the botanical names for anything that grew on their property. They were unsociable and careless but they had an eye for beauty for which Canadians today owe them thanks.

When, contemptuous of man-made laws, they refused to pay taxes during the Second World War and it looked as if 40 acres would be lost to pay their debts, Mrs. Stewart and another brother picked $600 worth of English walnuts and the land was redeemed.

Municipal authorities recognized the potential value of the property years ago and had a verbal agreement with the brothers that when they no longer wanted their land, Surrey would be given a chance to buy it. David died at 77 in 1949, and it looked as if the district wouldn't have long to wait for a chance. But Peter, who had become intensely religious during his later years, allowed himself to be talked out of his promise to the municipality and deeded everything he owned, when he died, to the Jehovah's Witnesses. Even in death he was still capable of upsetting apple carts and inflaming tempers. Not

John followed him all day, up and down, across slides and through timber "tongues" between them. Late in the afternoon he was high up on the divide between Caribou and Canvas with the wolverine heading for a high pass into Canvas creek. The sun was behind the ridge and John was about to give up when the wolverine's bad luck was his trailer's good fortune.

A small stream drained a little lake in this pass and it had worn a groove in the bedrock of the steep slope several feet deep. The wolverine had tried to cross this channel and, once in, couldn't get out. He kept trying, of course, true to his nature, but he had the trap on his foot and every time he climbed the bank into the snow and fell back he wet the trap which made the snow stick to it. Weather was freezing cold and ice accumulated on the trap.

When John caught up to him the iceball was the size of a football. Even with a hail and chain attached he came for John with that tooth-filled mouth wide open, roaring, foaming mad and as full of life and defiance as a 30-pound bundle of fur and ferocity could be. Too bad, in a way, that he couldn't beat a heavy cudgel.

Later that same year John trailed another break-and-run wolverine but this time he was the loser. An out-sized wolverine had discovered John's cache of moose-meat and was trying to raid it when his hind foot became intimately associated with a No. 14 trap, strategically placed in anticipation of such wolverine-ish activities.

The chain on this make of trap is composed of round, single-strand, hard steel wire, unbendable but brittle. Any wolverine would be unable to break this chain by pulling. But this one broke the chain without pulling. Each link in the chain is a separate unit, connected to the next one by being looped through it, the end cut off and twisted back upon itself. The wolverine gripped this end in his teeth and broke it off at the twist, severing one link from the other, and away he went. John was not able to catch this one, he could travel faster with the trap on his hind foot than the other one. Also he was much larger and it is well known that the biggest always get away.

Now, of course, the wolverine was just biting everything he could get hold of and just happened to get hold of that link-end. Or did he? Sure he did. I'm not superstitious, I tell you.

Not all the wolverines we caught got away — we only count those we skinned as really caught.

Eddie and I went back to Caribou creek one January after our two weeks off for Christmas and New Year's. It had snowed four feet if an inch and all our ground sets were buried. Between the second and third cabins Eddie had made a dozen of these sets for a fisher he hoped to catch, but didn't. Arriving at the second cabin after wallowing in the hardest kind of snowshoeing all day we decided to break trail half-way to the third cabin, shovel out those traps and return to the second cabin the next day, too hard going to make it through.

The snow had come up over many of our blazes and the trapline was hard to follow exactly, and when we arrived at what Eddie was sure was the last ground set we were one trap short by our count. Must have missed one. We made a can of tea and ate our lunch and then started back on our now-good trail, keeping a lookout for the missing trap. We had passed several of our dug-out sets when I noticed an exceptionally heavy-limbed balsam-fir a little to one side of our trail.

"Bet this is it," I said, and floundered over to where the lower limbs were embedded in the snow making a snow-proof teepee with the tree-trunk for centre-pole.

I was unprepared for what happened when I shoved the shovel into the cave underneath. A wolverine came at me with a bark and snarl that made me jump. It had two big-knuckled front-foot toes in a No. 1½ fisher trap and had been there at least a week. We didn't have a rifle and had to shovel out snow for some time to get room to swing a club when it came to the end of the chain to give battle. It was an extra-small female, not much larger than a big fisher. I remember only two other occasions when small traps caught and held wolverines and in both cases they were females. It may or may not have significance but the female is always, in our experience, much smaller than the male.

One more tale of a wolverine that didn't get away, just to even up the record. I had made a "variation set." two tall spruces grew about four feet apart and I had strung a twisted, three-strand haywire cable from one to the other as high up as I could reach, stapling each end securely and testing it by swinging my weight on it. In the middle of this cable, halfway between the trees, I fastened the bait. On the ground below I set two traps, each about a foot from each tree base. I figured the wolverine would climb the tree of his choice, reach out and grab the bait and fall down into the trap, just like tripod set.

The main thing wrong with this set was no snow protection, the trees had no low limbs. But I had at least one wolverine "working" on the bait so I snowshoe-shoveled and reset traps and hoped for a few days of fair weather. This set, too, was off the line and I made a quarter-mile trip each round to service it.

I had a young collie with me that year, a very intelligent dog named Pete who was not only a good companion but was very useful as well. He was a fine grouse dog with a wonderful nose, smelling a grouse for incredible distances and treeing them and retrieving perfectly. I used to talk to him and he would answer, dog-style, and we got along fine.

Pete didn't like wolverines. He had never seen one in a trap. Possibly he had run into one in his travels, but whatever the reason he would always show excitement whenever we ran across a fresh track.

One day there was a fresh track leading toward the trap and no track coming back. Pete was all bristled up, snuffing at the tracks and trotting a little ahead of me. We were still a hundred yards from the set when I saw the wolverine stick his head around the spruce. "By gosh, Pete, we got him!" I always said that when we caught a marten or whatever and Pete knew what it meant and beat me to the set and stood, bug-eyed, looking at the biggest catch he had ever seen.

The wolverine was caught solidly in one of the traps and after a warning rush at us paid us no attention but twisted, pulled and dug, trying to free himself. I got the take-down .22 out of my pack, put it together and whistled to make the wolverine turn his head. Pete was standing behind me and a little to one side. I should have been prepared for what happened but I wasn't. When the wolverine turned his head toward me for a moment I fired, he dropped and Pete was on top of him all in a fraction of a second. But Pete had miscalculated — and I'd made a miss, too. Pete had been used to sitting under a tree, watching a grouse until the gun spoke, grabbing it when it fell and bringing it to me. This time I had shot a fraction of an inch too low and missed the wolverine's brain, only stunned him.

Pete didn't stay on top any perceptible time — but neither did the wolverine. They were just a blur of fur, snarls and yelps.

I knew the wolverine would kill the dog in any protracted fight. All that saved him was his heavy coat of fur and the fact that the wolverine was too dazed by my bullet to see to get a death hold. I couldn't shoot, I just took a chance on losing a pound or so of flesh, jumped in, grabbed Pete with both hands when he came on top, yanked him away from the wolverine and jumped back.

"You want to keep away from those things," I told Pete. "They'll eat the little dog up!"

Pete didn't say anything but by his actions he fully agreed. He licked himself in multiple places, looked subduedly at the wolverine and, even after I had made a second and final shot I had a hard time to persuade him that it was now safe to come within sniffing distance. It wasn't the least bit like grabbing a fluttering fool hen.

The wolverine's coat has been described as "shaggy" and "piebald" but it is nevertheless a handsome fur. A wolverine, prime-furred, is as sleek and glossy as a marten.

For many years I heard the yarn that a wolverine's fur would not "frost up" in far-below-zero weather and for that reason was "highly prized" by the Eskimo. I can see where if it didn't freeze the hunter's breath on his cap or scarf or whatever, it would be a big advantage. A hunter has to see to shoot, or even throw a spear and a gob of ice is hard to see through. But I never could see why it wouldn't frost up the same as any other fur.

About 15 years ago I got a chance to see whether it would or not. We had a wolverine and a red fox skin in the home cabin at Mile 109 CNR about 25 miles east of Blue River. And the radio said it was 50 below zero in Blue.

So, says I, here goes nothing. I wrapped the fox skin around my neck and over my mouth and nose, put on a mackinaw and a fur cap and took a turn down to the RR track and back, about five minutes. Did it frost up? Slathers and gobs of it.

After defrosting my outsides by the red-hot heater and my insides with a cup of coffee, I dressed up with the wolverine skin and sashayed around the beat again. Did it frost up?

Of course it did. Why wouldn't it?

The wolverine skin's guard hairs are coarser than the fox's but I couldn't see much difference. They both frosted plenty. So as far as I'm concerned this frosting up yarn is another tall tale thawed out and evaporated.

Maybe the Eskimo does highly value the wolverine's fur. But maybe its because it is so durable. Or might it be that he, like other primitives, imagines that clad in the wolverine's coat he is invested with the qualities of its original wearer? If there's anything in this theory I don't know of anything that ever grew more suitable for a hunter's garment.

only was the district of Surrey up in arms, so was the remaining family. A battle royal erupted, lasting a year, until a three-way split resulted in the five remaining family members each getting $5,000, the Witnesses retaining $25,000 and the Surrey Parks Board expropriating the 64-acre site of Redwood Park.

There is nothing in the park today to suggest any of its bizarre background, except an occasional fallen log with charred sides, and the tree house. The cleared, grassy park area is furnished with attractive rustic picnic tables and a great log-eating outdoor stove. Youngsters often provide their own fun — putting up a badminton net, mapping out an impromptu baseball diamond or just playing tag or catch. For them, the majesty and the peace of beautiful trees has not yet any allure. It is their parents who come to walk on the pine-needled carpet, who stroll the quiet paths where the only distraction is a bird voice or a tiny snake sliding through the undergrowth.

Even if this park were not the treasure of trees that it is, it would still be a welcome haven for the harried, or an interesting Sunday drive for the sight-seer. But the fact is that botanical experts and nature lovers for years to come will continue to discover new plants, rare bushes, or a strange tree that will send them thumbing through their reference books or consulting other experts.

The park is easily accessible from the Trans-Canada Highway from Vancouver, where one proceeds approximately 20 miles south to a right turn onto the Pacific Highway. A drive on this road through Cloverdale to the North Bluff Road takes one to the home of Mrs. Stewart, and about half a mile to the left, along the North Bluff, is the park.

HAILEY'S CAREER IS LIKE A COMET'S

. . . But with a Tail of Gold

By DuBARRY CAMPAU

Arthur Hailey, already Canada's most financially successful writer, will be richer by at least $250,000 from the proceeds of his new book, Hotel.

It was published by Doubleday both here and in the United States Feb. 5.

Hailey's first fame came from writing Flight Into Danger in 1956 a TV play which is still bringing him royalties as it continues to be produced all over the world.

He is also the author of two novels. The Final Diagnosis, from which the movie "The Doctors" was taken, In High Places, about politics in Ottawa and Washington, and serialized in Maclean's and many other TV plays and short stories.

Spurred by the thought of that money, Hailey and his attractive wife, Sheila, have recently indulged themselves: He has had a push-button, garage-door-opener installed in his car and she has bought a small, one-woman sailboat to use at their summer home at Haliburton.

Now they say they have all they could wish for.

They live, with their son and two daughters, in an attractive, comfortable house in Scarboro which they have no intention of leaving.

"We love our house and the cottage and the children have their roots here and so do we," says Sheila. "Arthur came to Canada from England in '47 and I came in '49 and, though we enjoy traveling—and we can afford to do it now (we took the whole family to Mexico for Christmas) we intend to stay right here."

Hailey, whose working habits are as disciplined and orderly as a chartered accountant's, is now writing the screen play of Hotel. His office, a big paneled and book-lined room on the ground floor of their house, is a business-like place. His desk has big drawers which hold the files pertaining to Hotel—notes, lists of characters, folders of research, outlines and several early, as well as the final, plot sequences.

He is known for his diligence in pinning down the accuracy of every conceivable detail he might even possibly use in a book. Before starting Hotel he spent weeks at the Roosevelt in New Orleans, where the manager permitted him to wander through every department and learn all that he could from the employees. He attended the hotel school at Cornell for two weeks and also spent long hours at the Royal York in Toronto.

After he started writing he continued to check and double check. Minutiae, which individually might seem insignificant, add up, in his books, to a great sense of authenticity.

"I even worried about what kind of flowers would be used on a coffin in New Orleans," he says.

When he began re-writing he sent Sheila to New Orleans to look up several more things for him, such as just which fire department would respond to a call from the hotel he used as the setting for his novel, what pieces of equipment each would have and how a traffic accident on a highway north of New Orleans would be handled.

"Sheila is an excellent researcher," he says, and demonstrates it by bringing out the pages of careful listings and diagrams she made for him.

"When I finally finished the book," he said, "I seemed to be in limbo. I read it and re-read it and I was dissuaded by it myself. Then Doubleday, who published it here and in the States, offered me a contract for two new books and on Oct. 15 Warner Brothers bought it less than two days after it had been sent to them. Now it has been taken by Reader's Digest, the Doubleday Book Club and the Dollar Book Club and is being published by Souvenir Press in association with Michael Joseph in England.

"All of that is really due to my agent, Maeve Southgate. She is the best one in the world and she has been with me from the time I started writing in 1956 and we have never even had a contract."

Hailey's next book is already planned. "It's the first one I ever had a title for before I started writing it," he says. "It is called The Surly Bonds of Earth from a poem by John Gillespie Magee Jr., a flier who was killed at 19 in the Second World War and it is about aviation."

When Hailey is writing he keeps a chart of incidents and characters on his desk for ready reference. His plots are intricate and carefully designed with several themes constantly being interwoven.

"I've always wanted to be a story teller," he says, "even when I was a kid of 10 I was writing little stories. And what I'm especially interested in is the here and now in North America. I think of myself as a North American rather than a Canadian writer. Being a Canadian writer is too apt to mean chauvinism and looking in, not out."

The Vanishing Sea Monsters: DREADNOUGHT

By JOHN BARKHAM

The dreadnought was the dinosaur of naval battlecraft. It was built by Great Britain as the last word in floating firepower: so much so, indeed, that in its day its very name inspired fear. Though the original dreadnought was built in 1907, the future of the battleship today is very much in doubt. It was rendered obsolete first by airpower and later by nuclear power.

DREADNOUGHT, a History of the Modern Battleship, by Richard Hough. New York: The Macmillan Co. 368 pp. $14.95.

Hence this striking history of the dreadnought by Richard Hough, a leading British naval writer, is by way of being a requiem as well as a record. It is an admirably written, highly authoritative account of a spectacular phase in naval history, in which giganticism was ingeniously combined with speed and heavy armor.

Hough writes with the ease of a naval historian who knows his way around above and below decks. I can think of only one other writer who might have done this book as well—C. S. Forester, author of that classic account of a fighting cruiser, The Ship. As it happens, Forester has provided a long and masterly introduction to Hough's book, the last piece of sustained writing he was able to do before his serious illness.

The first dreadnought was built in 1907 and immediately sent other naval architects to the drawing board. Her big guns were mounted on a hull carrying great sheets of protective hardened steel, and her engines propelled her at speeds from 12 to 18 knots. She was a true pioneer in every respect. Before long other major naval powers were producing their own bigger, faster, more heavily-gunned versions. The USS Michigan was completed in 1909, followed two months later by the German Nassau.

Before the battleship (and her later development, the battle cruiser) ended their effective careers, some 175 dreadnoughs had been built by various naval powers. As they proliferated, they grew larger and their armor thicker in true dinosaur fashion. The mightiest monster of them all was the 68,000-ton Japanese Yamato, which was designed to hurl 14 tons of shells a distance of 30 miles. There is no record, however, of her ever having fired a full broadside. If she had, says Hough, the effect would have been shattering. She blew up under American attack in the Second World War, already an anachronism, and, except as a bombardment platform, obsolete.

The author examines in detail the performance of dreadnoughts in two World Wars, with particular emphasis on that confused engagement, the Battle of Jutland. His comments are characteristic. If the British had won an overwhelming victory (he reasons), defeat would have come to the Germans much earlier, possibly by 1916. If the Germans had annihilated the British fleet, nothing could have saved the Allies. "But an inconclusive result suited everyone. Both sides could, and did, claim victory."

The 1939-45 war with destruction of the Japanese fleet, is treated in the same way. Where command of the air was obtained, notes Hough, the battleship performed usefully, "though scarcely ever in the role for which it was devised." Where command of the air was lost, as at Pearl Harbor and Leyte Gulf, the battleship succumbed. It lasted in all just under 60 years.

The book is superbly illustrated with a selection of photographs calculated to set naval buffs a-drooling.

IGNORANCE OF THE LAW IS NO EXCUSE FOR ERROR

HATRED, RIDICULE, OR CONTEMPT, A Book of Libel Cases. Joseph Dean, Penguin. 35 cents.

Throughout literary history lawyers have been a subject of abuse. In a representative sample of Victorian novels, for instance, a student of mine found only one attractive lawyer in a forest of shysters. A large part of the abuse may be justified, but an equally large part arises, I'm sure, from the mystery surrounding the profession. If you're in, you know; if you're out, you don't.

Many things make me feel inadequate, but my ignorance of the law is specially galling. When George Eliot or Anthony Trollope makes the plot of a novel turn upon a point of law, I merely take it on trust, my non-sanforized ego shrinking just a little bit more. And it doesn't help me to know that George Eliot and Trollope had to consult lawyers to check the details.

The average man knows less about law than he does about sewer construction and Tibetan wild life. Well, perhaps he knows what a summons is — or rather what he must do if he is served with one — but what about torts and writs and libel?

Concerning libel, he can get immediate help from Joseph Dean's Hatred, Ridicule, or Contempt, at a fee of only 35 cents, with no court costs (so long as he doesn't double park while buying it).

It consists of an introduction explaining, in non-technical language where possible, what libel is, and 22 brief chapters summarizing libel cases tried in English courts over the past 150 years.

The range of cases is wide from Youssaupaff vs. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer concerning the film Rasputin — the Mad Monk, to the richly comic case of two sculptors disputing the authorship of certain statues. While the details are interesting in themselves, and the style of the author, the lawyers, and the judges is entertaining, the greatest boon is in the understanding one gains of the historical sweep of one particular area in law, and of the intimacy of law and ordinary life.

Few of us, I hope, will ever be accused of slander or libel, but the possibility lurks in every word — and words in libel cases aren't just words, if you know what I mean. If you don't, buy the book and find out.

How much more immediate are other legal matters, however, such as property rights, wills and contracts, traffic violations, and so on. Information can be obtained from books, or from lawyers, but why shouldn't law be part of everyone's education?

It is a scandal that one of the most important and most ancient of all studies should have disappeared from the curriculum in the humanities. Lawyers have remained humanists, if I can trust my acquaintances, and the words of Dana Porter, who once wrote: "Of all the secular professions perhaps the lawyers on the whole are most widely read. And that is as might be expected. For the law is closely related to the humanities. The lawyer is better equipped to deal with the wide variety of human problems that come to his door if he nourishes a wide range of literary interests."

And very much vice versa. At least for the literary man a knowledge of the law is essential. And for everyone, I should argue, such a knowledge, both theoretical and practical, is of more immediate and long term use than most other studies. There is also, as Mr. Dean's book bears witness, a lot of enjoyment to be had.

And who knows? We might learn enough to dispense with all those lawyers in parliament.

A COVENANT WITH DEATH, by Stephen Becker. Atheneum Pub.; $4.50.

Courtroom Drama

A courtroom crime melodrama hailed by Clifton Fadiman as "startlingly original and successful" — Stephen Becker's A Covenant with Death — has been chosen by the Book-of-the-Month Club as half of a Double Selection for January. The other half is a first novel by John Stewart Carter, Full Fathom Five.

Opening in a sleepy American-Mexican border town which readers are asked to imagine as lying within a state somewhere between Arizona and New Mexico, A Covenant with Death tells the story of a man accused of strangling his unfaithful wife, and of his subsequent trial and its consequences.

Mr. Becker's novel has already been compared with Robert Traver's Anatomy of a Murder, probably the most widely read courtroom suspense novel of recent years. Fadiman, describing the book, finds it "superior to that otherwise excellent yarn" in terms of style and imagination. "Though the plot of A Covenant with Death turns on a sex murder," he says, "the core of the story has to do with a creative crisis in the life of a deeply pondering man; with the almost ungraspable nature of justice, and finally with the inalienable rights of the human being."

Though still in his 30s, Stephen Becker has had a varied literary career. Born in Mount Vernon, New York, in 1927, he was graduated from Harvard in 1947, then won a fellowship for a year's study in China. The sweep of the Chinese Communist revolution forced him to leave, so he settled in France. His first novel, The Season of the Stranger, appeared in 1951. Since then he has written other novels, translated a number of books from the French (including Andre Schwartz-Bart's recent novel, The Last of the Just), and written a history of cartooning and a biography of Marshall Field III. Mr. Becker and his wife and their children live near Katonah, New York.

For to purify our Playhouse and the audiences there!

"You can really have no notion how unseemly it will be
If they start to mix in cocktails with Victoria's symphony:
The bars derived from music must be single in our mind,
And McPherson Playhouse out of bounds to any other kind."

"Of course an extra special effort was made by Miss Plane to contact the superb lyric poet, W. B. Yeats, the 100th anniversary of whose birth is being commemorated this year, notably with a festival at the University of Victoria.

"Recalling his very lovely Down by the Salley Gardens ("An Old Song Resung"), Mr. Yeats said:

"Down by McPherson Playhouse my love and I did meet,
She passed the Civic Centre on little snow-white feet.
She said: 'Such civic questions are not for you or me!'
But I, being civic-minded, with her would not agree.

"In the McPherson lobby my love and I did stand
And noted many a patron with a wine glass in his hand.
She said: 'We need not follow where others care to go.'
But I just wouldn't listen and darned near missed the show."

"Naturally, seeing that all this pother relates very closely to Victoria, another special effort was made to establish communication with a literary giant who actually sojourned in this city at one time and now is signally honored by having a high-rise apartment block named after him.

"Commenting on the question of bar facilities in the McPherson Playhouse, Rudyard Kipling said:

"It IS a long time between drinks!"

"This concluded the seance and the meeting."

"All this represented a considerable dedicated effort — especially on the part of Miss Plane — to solve a problem which, one would judge, has taxed the intelligences and judgment of civic authorities and general public alike.

"But alas, only one conclusion can be drawn from these cosy interviews with eminent literary men of the near and distant past.

"Their views are fully as varied as ours!"

Quotations or adaptations:

vi. Rudyard Kipling "The Light That Failed."

Politics were Forgotten Even in Tory Victoria

B.C. HOORAYED FOR LAURIER

By JAMES K. NESBITT

Kenneth C. Drury of Victoria, one of British Columbia's outstanding newspaper editors, started his journalistic career in 1910 when* The Colonist *sent him to Prince Rupert to cover the visit there of the Prime Minister of Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Mr. Drury, in his teens, was a summertime reporter for* The Colonist.

Prince Rupert was a boom town then, but the banquet put on in the Prince Rupert Inn in honor of Sir Wilfrid would have done honor to the Waldorf in New York or the Palace in San Francisco.

Mr. Drury saved the toast list and the menu, and has now presented it to the Provincial Archives.

It was a night of eloquence and wit, and the speech-making went on long after midnight. There were some noted people there that night. T. D. Pattullo, who was to become 1933-41 premier of British Columbia, was a Prince Rupert alderman then, and he made a speech, replying, with Mayor Stork, to the toast to the city of Prince Rupert.

Hon. William Templeman of Victoria, British Columbia's representative in the federal company, was with Sir Wilfrid's party, and a young man, Alex Manson, replied to the toast to the ladies. His climb of the ladder brought him to the B.C. attorney-generalship, the speakership and the Supreme Court. A 31-year-old Victoria newspaperman, B.C. Nicholas, was there too, and 25 years later he died here, as editor of the Victoria Times, one of the best citizens Victoria ever had.

I hope Islander readers are not tired of menus; this one is terrific, and I know how much people like studying the gargantuan food our forefathers were able to handle.

Here's the Laurier menu in Prince Rupert more than half a century ago:

Russian Canapo
Martini
Point Shirley oyster cocktail — stuffed olives
Green sea turtle soup
Sauterne
Mount Oldfield en surprise — celery
Buisson de Petit Homards — salted almonds
Fillet of Pompano en Papillotte
Pommes Chateau — Cucumbers
Sweetbreads en Croustade, sauce Napolitaine
St. Julian
Asperges — Petit Pois
Mayonnaise de Langoustes en Bordure
Galantine de Capon aux Truffes
Pate de Foie Gras
Salad de Volaille
Tutti Frutti Ice
Mount McKinley en Marnachino Jelly
Mumm's Extra Dry
Charlotte Parisienne
Gorgonzola — Camembert
Fruits — Mixed nuts and raisins
Apricot Brandy
Cafe Noir — Cigars
cigarettes

Then reporter Drury filed to The Colonist this dispatch: "Sir Wilfrid Laurier was royally welcomed to Prince Rupert, the northen city of the future . . When out 10 minutes from the harbor of the metropolis of the north the steamer Prince George was met by the government steamer Kestrel, all bedecked with flags and carrying three bands . . .

The Premier was driven to the City Hall, escorted by a guard of honor from the Volunteers. There were no less than five Indian bands, all fully uniformed, in the procession . . .

"The unique, illustrated address from the city, executed by Morte Craig (father of Mrs. Duncan D. McTavish of Victoria) was stretched on an easel at the back of the stage, and was admired by all the visitors, including Sir Wilfrid.

MR. DRURY

"It is burned on a tanned moose hide of full size, and the work is in excellent taste. The illustrations on it depict the harbor of the rising city of the north, showing mountains in the distance, and the spirit of progress is represented by a winged figure in a chariot driving behind two plunging steeds."

A number of Victorians, prominent Liberals, went to Prince Rupert on the same vessel as Sir Wilfrid, and took part in the festivities there. They all returned in the Prince George: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Langley, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Drury, Mr. Robert Drury, Mr. Kenneth Drury, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Kingham, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Smith, Mr. and Mrs. John Hart, Hon. and Mrs. William Templeman, Mr. B. C. Nicholas, Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Hall, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. R. Kelly, Hugh Kennedy, H. A. Munn, A. B. McNeill, Mrs. and Miss Sharples, K. B. Fraser.

Laurier had been to Victoria before he made the Prince Rupert trip. Here has was greeted like a conquering hero. People forgot politics and swarmed into the streets to cheer him. He arrived in the steamer Princess Charlotte, and, said The Colonist: ". . . standing on the bridge . . . the bright sunshine beating down upon his keen, bronzed features, (his was) a figure easily recognized because of its commanding distinction." Leading Liberals went aboard to greet him: F. A. Pauline, acting president of the Victoria Liberal Association, M. B. Jackson, a vice-president, Joshua Kingham, W. K. Houston, A. B. McNeill, Hugh Kennedy, R. L. Drury, H. A. Munn, Dr. Lewis Hall, Col. Arthur Currie, of the Young Liberal Club.

The Colonist forgot its traditional, never-say-die Conservative leanings to give a rave welcome to the Liberal Prime Minister, whom it described as "a type of the true Canadian whose eyes glimpse the splendor of his country's future, and whose faith in her destinies is absolute . . . he received at the hands of the government and the people of British Columbia a welcome, and a reception unprecedented in all the history of the confederated province.

"Unique was the occasion in many diverse ways. Unusual it is to find a political knight, such as Premier Richard McBride, surpassing himself in courteous homage and hospitality to the chieftain of an opposing political party.

"Unprecedented in brilliancy and completeness was the reception itself. The keynote of the situation was found within the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier came here as a great Canadian, on a self-declared visit of non-political character, and the provincial first minister, was glad to receive him as such, and to pay him every mark of honor, two of the greatest statesmen in all fair Canada thus meeting, although of antagonistic political creeds, upon common ground, each measuring and appreciating the many-sided strengths and talents of the other."

There was a glittering reception in the Legislative Chamber, and more than 2,000 people shook Sir Wilfrid's hand. A 17-piece orchestra played in Mr. Speaker's gallery, among the musicians being Benedict Bantly, S. Pereira, G. Wille, J. de Terran, J. Liddle, G. H. Larrigan, J. Longmuir, I. Culcross, Walter North, J. Ball, W. Fairall, G. Okell, Miss Babington and Mrs. Charles E. Lombard, all under the baton of L. A. Turner.

At the reception Sir Wilfrid stood on Mr. Speaker's dais "supported by Lieutenant-Governor T. W. Paterson, and with them was Mrs. Richard McBride, and the Hon. and Mrs. William Templeman . . . The ladies and gentlemen were presented to the King's first minister in Canada. There was a clasp of the hand, a courteous inclination of the head, a sunny smile and the citizens passed on.

"Description of the multitude of striking toilettes is sheer impossibility, but a very few may be mentioned. Of these Mrs. McBride appeared in white shimmering satin with gold trimming; Mrs. Fred J. Fulton, white satin; Mrs. Abraham Smith, pale green brocade; Mrs. Luxton, white satin with pale yellow chiffon scarf; Mrs. D. M. Eberts, mauve satin with white Brussels lace; Miss Eberts, black satin with jet trimmings; Mrs. Charles H. Lugrin, black satin trimmed with jet; Mrs. Nathaniel Shaw, pale blue with silver trimmings."

There was a mammoth rally in the Horse-show Buildings at the old Willows Fair Grounds, and Sir Wilfrid spoke to nearly 4,500 people, who raised the rafters in their applause. The Prime Minister, as he rose to speak "was the recipient at the hands of pretty Miss Agnes Kingham of a basket of beautiful sweet peas, presented on behalf of the children of Vancouver Island. The grey-haired Prime Minister and the sweet seven-year-old girl presented a pretty picture which was enthusiastically applauded by the vast audience."

A Government House garden party saw Sir Wilfrid walking among hundreds of people and shaking hands.

A group of prominent citizens took him motoring: "The party was carried in seven automobiles, all donated for the occasion by well-known gentlemen. Sir Wilfrid rode in the car of Mr. David Spencer, the other autos being those of Lieutenant-Governor Paterson, A. E. Todd, R. L. Drury, R. P. Clark, Alex McDermott, George C. Mesher, and Thomas R. Cusack."

Yes, a memorable visit. How fortunate we are to have people like Mr. Drury, who, appreciating history, save the souvenirs of history, so that future generations may know something of the past.
